Farmers Home Loan Interest Rates Increased

The Farmers Home Administration in the U.S. Department of Agriculture will be charging higher interest rates effective September 30, 1981, on several of its loan programs as a result of legislation enacted by Congress.

Dwight O. Calhoun, Acting Associate Administrator of FmHA, said higher rates are required for community facility, water and waste disposal, emergency farm and limited resource farm loans. The changes were included in the budget reconciliation bill passed by Congress just before the August recess.

In addition to the new rates, the use of private funds in rural development purposes will be more costly in some cases under provisions of the 1981 legislation. Calhoun cited as an example an extra two percent interest on loans used to finance community facility and industrial or other projects on "prime" or "unique" farmland.

"Prime" farmland is described as having the best combination of physical and chemical characteristics for producing food, feed, forage, fiber and oilseed crops. It also must be available for those uses.

"Unique" land is other than prime land having special combinations of soil quality, location, growing season and moisture to economically produce high quality or yields.

Interest rates for water and waste disposal projects will increase from five to 12.25 percent; for community facilities, from five to 12.25 percent; for emergency farm loans from 13 to 17 percent for persons able to obtain credit elsewhere and from five to eight percent for persons unable to obtain credit elsewhere; for farm operating, from seven to 11.5 percent; and for farm ownership, from five to seven percent. There will be an additional two percent added on community facilities, farm operating and farm ownership loans when prime or unique farmland is involved.

Calhoun said the interest premium for use of prime or unique land will not apply if the applicant is a public body or Indian tribe and can demonstrate to FmHA that it cannot suitably locate on other land.

The community facility and water and waste disposal rate of 12.25 percent was derived from the statutory requirement that it not exceed the current municipal bond yield. This rate must be calculated quarterly by market conditions.

Interest rates will remain at five percent for facilities required to meet health and safety standards in areas where median family income is below the poverty level established by the Office of Management and Budget, currently $9,460 a year.

Other Farmers Home loan rates are not affected by these changes.

G. Wallace Caulk is the state director of the State FmHA office serving Delaware, Maryland and is located in Newark, Delaware. Questions concerning FmHA programs may be directed to that office, or locally to Timothy T. Taylor, county supervisor, Garrett County Courthouse, Oakland, telephone 334-8141.

Farmers Reminded Of Deadline For ASC Nominations

Only a few days remain to nominate farmers as candidates in the upcoming ASC community committee elections, according to Harry W. Hummel, chairperson of the Garrett County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

The first duty of the newly elected community committee members will be to serve as delegates to elect new members of the county ASC committee. Hummel reminded producers that this is an important occasion for the responsible, farmer-chosen team of ASC community committee members who will help administer government programs.

By farms in a total of five or more petitions, farmers in each ASC community have the opportunity to prepare the slate of nominees themselves, according to Hummel.

Shortly after November 2 all petitions will be reviewed. If five or more valid petitions have been received for an ASC community, the county ASCS offices will prepare a slate containing the names of all eligible nominees. If less than five valid petitions are received for any ASC community, the incumbent community committee will add nominees needed to complete the slate.

To submit a valid petition, three or more ASC farm voters must sign a statement endorsing an eligible candidate. The statement must include certification that the nominee will serve if elected. Petitions must be dated and mailed or handdelivered to the county ASCS office no later than November 2. The ASC Community Committee election will be conducted by mail from November 27 to December 7.

The opportunity to nominate, vote, and be elected to office in the upcoming ASC committee election is guaranteed to all farmers regardless of race, religion, sex, color, or national origin, Hummel stated.

Farmers May Get Deficiency Payments For Wheat, Barley

Maryland farmers who accurately reported their 1981 crop acreages to the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service may receive deficiency payments on their wheat and barley crops, according to William B. Crum, chairperson of the State ASC Committee.

Market prices for 1981 wheat and barley have been below the federal target price for these crops. If this trend continues, it means that wheat and barley producers would be entitled to deficiency payments," Crum said.

ASCS will make 1981 wheat and barley deficiency payments to eligible farmers if the national average price of the crop falls below the government-established target price for the crop during the first five months of the marketing year.

Farmers who failed to report their small grains by the May 1 deadline should contact the county ASCS office. "If the crop acreage and size can be verified, it still may be possible to gain eligibility," he said.

Deficiency payments are computed by multiplying the program yield for the farm by the acreage planted for harvest times the payment rate. The per-bushel payment rate is the difference between the target price and the higher of either the loan rate for the commodity or the average price received by farmers.

The 1981 target price for wheat is $3.81 per bushel, and $2.60 per bushel for barley. National average loan rates are $3.20 for wheat and $1.90 for barley.

Maryland farmers are expected to harvest about 137,000 acres of wheat and 75,000 acres of barley in 1981. The ASCS official said approximately 3,000 Maryland farmers could be eligible for the deficiency payments.

Old Economic Variables Said No Longer Reliable For Farm Sector

If there is one thing agricultural economists can agree on, it's that they disagree on what happens to the U. S. farm sector as a result of inflation and general recession in the nation's economy.

But one research economist for the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station (MAES) has attempted to make some new order of the seemingly confusing array of past literature on the subject.

According to an article to be published in the American Journal of Agricultural Economics, the farm sector in the last 70 years has tended to fare worse than other sectors in the U. S. economy during recession.

On the other hand, says Dr. Bruce Gardner, author of the research piece and a professor of agricultural and resource economics at the University of Maryland, the farm sector during the same period has done slightly better than other economic sectors in inflationary times.

"The performance of agriculture during recession has been variable," says Gardner, "but on average the farm sector fares poorly during these episodes.

"Farm income has tended to fall substantially more sharply than overall GNP, as farm prices have fallen compared to the general price level, and farm wage rates relative to non-farm wage rates.

"Therefore," says Gardner, "it appears agriculture has had a greater stake than other economic sectors in avoiding recessions."

The story has been different during periods of inflation, however, according to Gardner.

"Real farm product prices and real farm income grew faster in the inflationary years, particularly in years of unanticipated inflation," he says.

For the 1980s, though, Gardner says that effect of general recession and inflation in the U.S. economy on the farm sector may be more difficult to pin down in a forecast than the historic data from the past might suggest.

Other increasingly complex factors, particularly the effects of inflation on the capital markets and changes in farm input markets are making it difficult for economists to say that what happened in the last 70 years in agriculture as a result of recession or inflation in the general economy will also happen during the 1980s.

"In recent years the traditional linkages between the farm sector and other sectors during recession and inflationary periods have become less reliable in predicting economic events in agriculture," says Gardner.

Using economic data for the period 1910 through 1979, he hypothesizes that today's farm sector is more closely linked to the ups and downs of the general economy through such stimuli as non-farm wage rates and the rates of return to non-farm investment which act more quickly than once was the case to cause economic adjustments in agriculture.

"Even if I knew the future course of U.S. business cycles, inflation, and foreign value of the dollar, I could not predict any particular consequences for agriculture," writes Gardner in the scientific article.

Nevertheless, he believes linkages to the non-farm sector will continue to be important and advocates further research to help economists speak with more authority when forecasting the fate of the agricultural sector in the coming years.

Milk Production Above Last Year

Dairy farmers continued to produce above 1980 levels says the Maryland Crop Reporting Service. Output during September totaled 129 million pounds, five percent greater than in September 1980. Production per cow averaged 1,060 pounds during the month compared with 990 pounds a year ago. Total milk produced in September fell below production in August this year, but only due to the month having one less day. Daily production in September averaged 35.3 pounds per cow, .6 pounds above the previous month.

For the first time this year, the milk-feed price ration was above a year earlier. AT 1.54 in September, the ratio compares with 1.45 in September 1980. That is also the highest ratio since July 1980. Milk prices held steady with last month and last year at $13.60 per cwt. Feed prices, however, showed some signs of relief for dairy farmers as mixed feed prices dropped below last month and last year while ingredients generally held steady with last month or declined slightly. Grains and concentrates fed to milk cows averaged 14.5 pounds per head with an average value of $8.50 per cwt.

Effects Of Inflation On Maryland Farmers Topic of TV Show

The effects of inflation and high interest rates on Maryland farmers will be the subject of a special report on "Up on the Farm," Monday, November 2, at 7 p.m. on TV 36 of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting.

Glenn Tolbert (a former newspaper reporter on the Eastern Shore and "Up on the Farms" associate producer and writer) will host the discussion.

"Today's high interest rates make it difficult for many farmers, young and old, to start their operations or to keep them from going under," Tolbert says. As an example, "It's possible that a 500-acre corn crop may require $100,000 in financing — that's for planting, harvesting, and marketing. At prevailing interest rates of 16.75% or higher, that presents a farmer with extraordinary conditions for survival."

Guests on the program include a young and old farmer whose situations are typical of those facing many Maryland farmers.

"Up on the Farm" is underwritten for Marylanders by Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore and Maryland Farm Credit Associations.

Mathias Introduces Bill To Preserve Nation's Farmlands

Senator Charles McC. Mathias, Jr. (R-Md.) has introduced legislation aimed at "slowing the urban sprawl that is swallowing up more than three million acres of prime farmland each year."

The Farmland Development Rights Act would offer tax advantages to farmers so that they will participate in state programs designed to preserve farming land and resist the pressure to sell their land to developers.

Mathias noted that several states have devised programs that pay the farmer cash for an easement on the land. This limits his or her rights to sell that land for development purposes.

"These state plans have worked extremely well," Mathias said, "the government is assured that the land will remain farmland, the farmers get a cash bonus which keeps them farming, and the consumer reaps the benefits of a steady supply of produce."

The Mathias bill encourages farmers to participate in the state programs. Specifically, it exempts from capital gains taxation the money received for the sale of the easement, provided it is rolled-over for improvements or purchase of new farmland.

The bill provides a one-time capital gains exemption on the income if the farmer is over 55. It also allows the difference between the fair market value and the amount received for the land to be deducted as a gift for tax purposes.

"Every five minutes, 30 acres of farmland is plowed under and replaced by suburban crabgrass," the Maryland Senator said. "My bill will help protect our nation's greatest resource so that we will continue to be the greatest agricultural producer in the world."

Oakland To Seek Court Injunction Against J&M

The Oakland Mayor and Town Council passed a resolution Monday night directing Zoning Administrator John Nelson and Town attorney Thomas Janes to seek a court injunction against J & M Market, Oakland, forcing the store to comply with a recent order by the Oakland Zoning Board of Appeals.

J & M Market opened a tavern in the store in defiance of an Oct. 7 decision by the board prohibiting operation of the tavern.

The council's decision to pass the resolution was unanimous after deliberating the matter for almost an hour with Janes, Nelson and several of the approximate 25 Oakland residents attending the meeting.

Janes, who pointed out the case is unprecedented, noted the matter is complicated because J. & M was issued a Special Class D liquor license in 1979 which allows sale of alcohol for both off-premises and on-premises consumption.

When owners of J & M applied for the liquor license in 1979, the Garrett County Liquor Control Board refused to issue them the license. They then appealed the case to Garrett County Circuit Court where the Liquor Control Board's decision was reversed. The judge ordered issuance of the license with the stipulation that issuance was in compliance with all other laws.

But, Janes stated J & M showed no intent to open a tavern at the time it received its license, meaning that at that time there was no conflict with Oakland zoning laws.

"SIX FEET HIGH!" could not only describe the amount of "Food, Glorious Food" dreamed about by these poorhouse children, but also the mounting enthusiasm and energy put forth nightly by the entire cast of "Oliver," as they prepare for that musical production to be presented this weekend. The production, sponsored by the Garrett Choral Society and directed by Nancy Learey and Jane Avery, involves some 50 adults and children and offers entertainment for people of all ages. Pictured above, from left to right, are the characters of England's orphans in the 1800's, better known today as Bryan Davis, Stan Lambert, Julie Hudnall, Bobby Bernard, Arthur Fedde (who plays the part of Oliver), and Lara Carlson. Others in the poorhouse group include Scott Browning, Ingrid Carlson and Scott Kapel. The production, which is brimming with Cockney accents, traditional costumes, song, dance and elaborate stage effects, will air Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 2 p.m., and Monday at 8 p.m., at the Southern Middle School cafetorium. Parents with children who are planning to attend "Oliver" should note that, because the production is approximately two and one-half hours in length, the directors recommend children come to the Sunday matinee.

Axtell Arraigned Friday, Released On $500 Bond

Andrew F. Axtell, 32, of Savannah, Ga., who is charged with 13 violations (including manslaughter) in connection with the September 22 fatal mishap on Route 38 in Kitzmiller, was arraigned Friday in Garrett County District Court. He was released from the Garrett County Jail that day when he posted 25 percent of $5,000 bond.

Axtell was discharged from Cumberland's Memorial Hospital last Wednesday, after he had waived extradition from the West Virginia University Medical Center.

The accident, which involved Axtell's tractor-trailer and a pick-up truck, resulted in the death of Carlus Delbert Reckart, 62, of Oakland, and serious injury to Axtell.

Driver Sustains Serious Injuries In Vehicle Mishap

A Swanton man was seriously injured Friday evening in a single-vehicle accident near the intersection of the Glendale Road and Route 495.

Cecil Rinker, 55, was southbound on Rt. 495 when his auto crossed the center line and left the roadway, striking two parked cars. Rinker was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by Southern Rescue Squad, where he underwent emergency surgery for a torn liver and torn bowel. He also suffered a flailed chest and collapsed lung. He is listed in critical condition this morning, according to a hospital spokesperson.

In addition to Southern Rescue Squad, the Southern equipment truck, Maryland State Police, and the Bittinger Fire Department responded to the call.

Trooper First Class Gary Resh investigated the accident.

Posthumous Honor Bestowed Upon Dr. Baumgartner

A lecture honoring the late Dr. Eugene Irving Baumgartner of Oakland was presented October 24 at the Grantsville Holiday Inn as part of a mini-conference for physicians entitled "Diabetes Mellitus Update in Family Practice," sponsored by the Maryland Academy of Family Physicians and the Cumberland area Health Education Center.

With this first dedication lecture the academy initiated a new program of honoring its founders and early leaders. As Dr. Baumgartner lived and practiced in Oakland, it was thought Garrett County would be "the ideal place to present a lecture in his honor," according to one academy spokesman. Dr. Baumgartner's widow, Mrs. Helen Baumgartner, attended the lecture and received appreciation for providing the academy's historian with information concerning the early years of that organization.

The lecture, entitled "The Diabetic Foot," was presented by James M. Moss, M.D., Clinical Professor of Medicine, Georgetown University, Washington, D.C.

Dr. Baumgartner was the academy's first secretary/treasurer and its fourth president. He was one of the five physicians who signed the required petition in 1948 to the newly-formulated American Academy of General Practice requesting a charter for a

Oakland Slates Public Hearing On Cable Issue

The Oakland Town Council will hold a public hearing on Monday, November 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall to discuss Cablentertainment's proposed addition of two Maryland networks on the cable television system, which would mean a $1.25 rate increase per month per user.

Wendell Keaton, Municipal Administrator, informed Council at its Monday meeting that the towns of Mt. Lake Park and Loch Lynn want the addition, but in order to have it the towns, including Oakland, would have to approve the rate increase, as part of new franchise agreements. Several council members expressed a desire to hear from Oakland citizens before approving the increase.

Keaton said Cablentertainment has indicated the most cost-effective method of bringing such additional programming into this area would be through tying into the cable system in Cumberland which currently delivers Baltimore area stations and other Maryland programs to that area by using a microwave system.

Public Meeting Set To Discuss Shooting Range

The Garrett Shooting Sports Association will hold a public meeting on Wednesday, November 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at Garrett Community College in McHenry to explain how it proposes to develop the public shooting range complex which will be constructed near Bittinger.

Dick Whiting, past president of the Maryland-D.C. Rifle and Pistol Association and NRA staff member, will explain how the concept of a public range in Garrett County was developed. The association purchased approximately 10.6 acres of abandoned strip mine from Hoger Beitzel on Route 495 near Bittinger for the development of a range complex which could eventually accommodate large and small bore rifles, trap or skeet, bench rest, muzzle loading firearms, pistols and an archery range for shooting sports enthusiasts.

The Md.-D.C. Association will took the planning, construction and management of the range with the Garrett Shooting Sports Association. This group of local persons will assume control of the range complex

Thayer Hands Down Jail Terms

Two local men were sentenced by Circuit Court Judge Fred A. Thayer on Thursday to terms in the county jail for their part in separate criminal activity in the area earlier this year.

Curtis Mark Pritts, 23, Rt. 4, Oakland, was ordered to spend one year in jail for unlawful possession and manufacturing of a controlled dangerous substance and possession of controlled paraphernalia.

According to Cpl. Charles Hinnant, Maryland State Police, Pritts was apprehended by Cpl. Elmer Selby and Tfc. John Foley following his involvement in a hit and run vehicle accident. While investigating that incident, Tfc. Foley observed a torn paper bag inside the vehicle containing nine plastic bags, which each contained one ounce of marijuana. Also confiscated during the arrest procedure were 39 syringes, two sets of gram scales, several plastic bags containing powdered substances, several small items of paraphernalia, and a total of 29 bags of marijuana.

Prior to the jail term, Pritts was ordered by District Court Judge Lewis Jones to enter the Finan Center, Massey Unit, Cumberland, for the alcohol and drug abuse program.

In a separate case, Judge Thayer ordered James Donald Arney, Sr., 27, Terra Alta, W. Va., to serve three years in the Garrett County facility after he pled guilty to forging a U.S. Treasury Income Tax refund check belonging to John E. and Myrtle Kelley. The check was in the amount of $1,044.00.

According to information in the reports, Arney took the check from the Kelley mailbox and signed their names on it before entering a drive-through window at the First National Bank of Oakland. When the teller asked a question of the defendant, he panicked and drove away, leaving the check behind.

Arney was assigned to the Maryland Department of Correction.

Strip Mine Sites Scene Of Thefts

Two construction sites in the Grantsville area have been the scene of tool and equipment thefts by unknown culprits.

Maryland State Police report that sometime during the last half of October, approximately $2000 worth of mechanic tools and equipment were stolen from the Brawel Mining, Inc. strip site near Otto Road in Grantsville. The theft of gasoline and several hundred dollars worth of similar merchandise was also reported by the Della Mining Corporation, during that time period.

State Police ask citizens to be on the alert for anyone attempting to sell power tools or mining mechanical tools. Suspicions may be called in to the Garrett County Crime Solvers Hotline, 334-3111. The caller may remain anonymous, and may be eligible for up to $1000 cash reward if the tip given leads to the arrest of the thieves.

Preston County Is Next Target For City Sludge

A Philadelphia-based land reclamation firm which proposed the use of city sludge to reclaim abandoned strip mines in Garrett County this past summer has now turned to Preston County, W. Va.

In a report appearing in the November 2 issue of the Preston County Journal, Modern-Earthline Companies may use five sites in that county to demonstrate its reclamation method.

Charles E. Ryan, who heads a public relations firm working with Modern-Earthline, said sludge from the Washington, D.C. and Baltimore areas will be used in the reclamation operations.

Preston County was selected, Ryan said, because it is a reasonable distance from the Washington, D.C. - Baltimore area and it has several unreclaimed strip mines.

In the report, Ryan said areas in Maryland would also be used. He did not specify which areas in Maryland, nor if other areas in West Virginia were also prospects.

Ryan said the sludge would probably be transported to Preston County sometime during the winter months and that application would begin in the spring.

Modern-Earthline attempted to demonstrate the process in Garrett County, but local resistance stopped the project.

Commissioners Name Two Women To Library Board

The Board of Garrett County Commissioners made two appointments to the Ruth Enlow Library Board of Library Trustees Tuesday.

Mrs. Edna Wheeler of Grantsville, who currently serves as secretary of the Library Board, was reappointed to a five-year term to expire January 1, 1987.

Mrs. Dorothy Morris of Oakland was appointed to a five-year term to replace Sara Ramsey of McHenry whose term expires at the end of this year. Mrs. Morris' term will expire Jan. 1, 1987.

In other business, the commissioners awarded a bid for interior and exterior work to the Animal Shelter to Stonewall Construction, Oakland. Stonewall was the low bidder at $5,569. The commissioners awarded the bid pending review of compliance with specifications by Gary Mullich, building manager.

Mullich informed the commissioners of a recent visit by a State inspector to the county jail. Mullich noted that the inspector will send a report with recommendations for improvements to the jail.

Some of the preliminary recommendations for capital improvements to the jail were

The sign has been in the making for the past several months, and the downtown merchants and business people are seeking more locations for this type of sign. The Appalachian Center offered permission to have the sign attached to the building.

Promotion Council, County Board Face $4.35 Million Court Suit

Owners of rental property on Deep Creek Lake have charged the Deep Creek Lake-Garrett County Promotion Council, Inc., its executive director, and the Board of Garrett County Commissioners with interference in contractual relations and denial of civil rights in an eight-count suit filed in the Garrett County Circuit Court last week.

Ronald and Patricia Reinerth, Bethel Park, Pa., and Walter and Rose Marie Troxell, Library, Pa., seek over $1 million in compensatory and $3.35 million in punitive damages in the suit filed by their attorney, Robert E. Watson, Oakland.

The two couples filed the complaint because they felt the Promotion Council, through its executive director Cynthia (Hanke) Kutchman, discriminated against them when it allegedly refused them membership in the Council and denied them advertising space in the Promotion Council Vacation Guide without providing them a reason or an opportunity for redress.

The Reinertis, who have been members of the Promotion Council since 1971, contend that in November 1980 they were denied membership for no apparent reason and consequently suffered financial loss when Promotion Council actions prevented them from selling their four rental cottages on the lake. Furthermore, they charge Ms. Kutchman with making "false and defamatory statements" against them at a Promotion Council Board of Directors meeting.

According to the suit, the Reinertis say they rented a cottage to a friend of Richard Kutchman, who subsequently married Ms. Kutchman. Allegedly the renter, after a dispute with the Reinertis, threatened to have them kicked out of the Promotion Council through his contact with Ms. Kutchman.

The suit goes on to say the Reinertis contacted Ms. Kutchman who said no complaint against them had been filed with her but that she would notify them if one was filed. They received no such notice, but the following November they were denied renewal of their membership in the Promotion Council.

Subsequently, the Reinertis state in their suit that they chose to sell the property to avoid losses resulting from the inability to advertise in the Vacation Guide. They entered into a sales agreement with the Troxells with the stipulation that the Troxells be able to obtain membership in the Council and to advertise in the Vacation Guide.

The Troxells applied for membership, the suit said, and sent a $100 membership fee which was cashed but later refunded. When they contacted Ms. Kutchman, they were told they had been denied membership in the Council.

Consequently, the contract between the Reinerths and Troxells was terminated.

In the suit, Ms. Kutchman is charged with one count of "intentional interference in contractual relations," one count of slander, and one count of conspiracy and intentional acts to deny the plaintiffs civil rights, to deny their right to equal protection under the law, and to procure discrimination against them by the Board of County Commissioners and by the Promotion Council.

The Promotion Council is charged with one count of intentional interference with contractual relations, one count of negligent retention of Ms. Kutchman as executive director, and one count of denial of the plaintiffs' civil rights, denial of their right to equal protection under the law, and for discriminating against them.

The Board of County Commissioners, as the partial funding agency of the Council, is charged with denial of the plaintiffs' civil rights and their right to equal protection under the laws, and for the negligent retention of Ms. Kutchman.

Volunteerism and the Arts

Being a volunteer for a worthy cause has always been deemed an admirable undertaking. Seeing a need and giving one's all to fulfill that need for the benefit of other people, without personal gain except a degree of self-satisfaction, is what being a volunteer is all about.

When one thinks of a volunteer he usually first pictures a member of a volunteer fire department or rescue squad, for these are among the most dramatic realms of volunteerism. He might also think of a person involved in an organization for the needy or one which raises funds for some form of medical research. Expanding the list still futher, one would include those persons who serve on various boards, commissions and organizations which have to do with everything from school programs to environmental issues. Wherever there is a need, you can bet there will be volunteers attempting to address that need.

There is another group of volunteers which, sadly, is often neglected when it comes to handing out recognition. We speak of those persons dedicated to the performing arts.

For the past several weeks there have been over 50 residents of Garrett County working furiously to present to the rest of the public the musical, "Oliver." The hours of rehearsal have been long and rigorous, the sacrifices have been great, the tension has been severe, tempers have occasionally flared and there have been some tears—all the ingredients of a good stage production. All of those persons involved are volunteers, striving to fulfill a need of society.

Indeed, contrary to what many may think, there is a tremendous need for the arts. Entertainment, in the form of fun and laughter, is needed by all of us, as a defense against all the other pressures of life. We recognize, commend and thank those volunteers who are working so hard to fulfill this need.

Slowly, But Surely . . .

by Carol Kapel

It's happening again. Each week, I read another account, clip another story, file another piece of information in my yellow folder marked Ku Klux Klan.

Slowly, quietly, they keep moving. This organization of antagonizing individuals, who claim they do not violate the law, have only the well-being of all society in mind, and advocate non-violence, has a strange way of making a point.

Recently in Baltimore County, two Klan members were arrested by police after allegedly attempting to run down a black pedestrian. Inside the vehicle of these peace-loving coneheads were found six pistols, two rifles, one air rifle, and a pound of black explosive powder. Isn't that a fine collection of peaceful items to carry in one's automobile?

A self-proclaimed leader, who, thank goodness, was convicted of attempting to bomb the office of an officer in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was found in his vehicle with a plastic milk jug partially filled with gasoline and equipped with a green fuse. Either I'm buying my milk at the wrong place, or that dude had something in mind besides milkshakes.

Just last week, word came of an armed militia and state headquarters being established in Fayette County, a scant thirty miles or less from our doorstep. The officers of this "distinguished" organization brag of having a special group fully trained in defense tactics and riot control. The militia members, according to the chief conehead, have been trained in guerilla warfare, and can use all weapons and the martial arts. Friendly bunch, aren't they?

Wake up, friends. If you say, "What can I do?", at least study all you can find about them. Learn where they are, and how to avoid contact through our children. There is evidence they recruit in the schools, you know. Young blood is always sought in hate organizations. Youthful minds are easy to mold. Should our children be exposed to twisted views of white supremacy, as the hooded robewearers would like? Again, unless my history knowledge was incorrect, were we not created equal?

Think about it.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I was appalled when I read that Ms. Griffith, Acting Director, Appalachian Center and Workshop, is seeking contributions to set up a salary fund to pay handicapped workers.

Furthermore, Ms. Griffith's statement that ". . . there are jobs which can be done, but the state requires that clients must be paid and the center is presently unable to pay them," is a discredit to every handicapped person employed or who is seeking employment.

I can only assume after reading these statements that if it were not for the laws governing the employment of the handicapped, Ms. Griffith would not concern herself with paying handicapped employees a fair wage for a fair day's work. Furthermore, her eagerness as well as her willingness to beg for and rely on contributions to meet payroll for the handicapped employees can only point to the possible fact that she does not truly believe that handicapped persons can be productive.

In my opinion the integrity of the handicapped person seeking employment will suffer greatly if Ms. Griffith is appointed director of the center.

Employment exists when the employees share in the profits made by the company from the sale of its goods or services to the general community by receiving a fair wage. Employment does not exist when a company depends on donations or contributions to pay its employees a wage aside from the sale of its goods or services to the general public.

I must challenge her approach as well as her intentions to better serve the handicapped. I believe her desire to serve the handicapped might be rooted in a need for personal employment rather than for their benefit.

David J. Koontz
Mt. Lake Park

Mr. Sincell:

I would like to say a few words about a couple nursing homes in this area.

To begin with when employees are first hired they are given a copy of what is called a patients bill of rights, which states that the employee is not to abuse, hit, curse or harm the patient in any way or they will be dismissed.

But the employer fails to remember about the employee's bill of rights, if there is one!

The employee has to put up with lifting patients twice her own size and weight.

When under these conditions, there should be male orderlies to do the heavy lifting, not the aides.

I know, because I was hospitalized twice for back injuries which happened while lifting these patients.

The employees (nurses aides) have to put up with being hit, slapped and even choked by these patients. Also they are even grabbed by these patients and are also abused by these patients by the sexual acts they try.

Some of these patients shouldn't be in these nursing homes; they should be in mental institutions instead of a home for the aged.

I hope you print this letter so that anyone wishing to go to work in a nursing home will know a little of what goes on there.

Injured Employee

Dear Sir:

I must make objection to the article of opinion carried on your editorial page and written by Carol Kapel and containing her objections to decorum in the Garrett County District Court.

The case in which Ms. Kapel was summoned was one in which I acted as defense attorney. Further, I am in the District Court frequently. I have never seen the kind of conduct Ms. Kapel complained of on that occasion nor at any other time. I have never seen anyone smoking, eating, carrying food in and out or interrupting the Court process with obscenities.

Our Court process is a simple one. It bears no resemblance to the kind of accusatorial, almost totalitarian, type of Court which Ms. Kapel apparently desires for us. Perhaps she would have been more comfortable under the rule of Louie the Fourteenth.

It is necessary in the heat and bustle of our process that attorneys and other parties, including the parties, enter and leave the courtroom. I shutter to imagine the day when this would not be possible.

In my opinion, the District Court for Garrett County is run in an orderly and efficient manner.

Sincerely,
Robert E. Watson

Dear Mr. Sincell,

I have noticed with interest the differing opinions that have been printed in The Republican regarding the Southern High School Band and the decision of the Board of Education to enforce the previously existing rule which disallowed the use of eighth grade (middle school) students plus one fifth grader.

Perhaps if the demands made upon high school members of the band were not so intense and time consuming, the director would have plenty of necessary musicians and marchers from his own school. Certainly many academic students are deterred from belonging to the band due to the practice demands and the increasingly frequent weekend "competitions." Often the return from these competitions comes late in the weekend and conscientious students have little or no time left to study. There is also to be faced the problem of being physically tired and "worn out" at the start of a new school week. Personally I find much of this unneccesary.

After all, what is the real purpose of a high school band—to win in competition or to provide musical education and enjoyment to all students who show musical interest and talent?

Sincerely,
A Concerned
Parent and Teacher

Brothers Arrested After Struggle With Officers

Two brothers who were allegedly acting disorderly were arrested at the Deer Park School grounds on Monday following a struggle with police.

Three members of the Garrett County Sheriff's Department, assisted by a Maryland State trooper, responded to the school grounds at 8:25 p.m. to investigate a report of a fight. The police report states that Richard Sharpless, 23, was observed acting disorderly and using loud and obscene language. Police said several adults and children had congregated, including the subject's family and friends who started to take him home.

Police said Sharpless became loud and violent when leaving and he allegedly challenged the officers. He was arrested following a struggle and charged with alcoholic beverage intoxication. After the subject was placed in the police cruiser two of the officers became involved in an altercation with Robert Sharpless, 20, who was also placed under arrest and charged with disturbing the peace and resisting arrest.

Both Deer Park residents were released yesterday on their own recognizance.

In other business, deputies have been investigating incidents of vandalism and theft reported to the department last week.

Henry L. Armstrong, Deer Park, reported that someone threw part of a brick through the rear window of his 1971 Ford LTD while it was parked in front of his residence at 1:50 a.m. Sunday. Police said a suspect has been contacted, but denied all knowledge of the incident. No loss value was placed on the broken window.

In a separate case, Dorothy V. Jones, Kitzmiller, told police that someone entered a garage behind her residence sometime between October 28 and 31 and removed a 12-volt battery from her 1965 Chevy. Entry was made by breaking a hole in a wooden door, resulting in a damage estimated at $25. The battery is valued at $38, making the total loss value approximately $63.

Marion L. Moses of Bowie reported that a 12x28-inch door glass at her residence on Fricks Crossing Road was broken sometime between October 24 and 31. Police said the door was still locked upon their arrival at the dwelling, however it could have been unlocked and relocked from the inside. Nothing appeared missing or disturbed, and Ms. Moses will advise the department if anything is missing following a check of the dwelling. A total loss at this time is estimated at $0.

Two reports of what may have been devil's night pranks were brought to the department last week.

The Bloomington Elementary School told police that someone used a bar of soap to write obscenities on the outside school wall on Friday night. No loss in damages was reported. A mailbox was pushed over in Loch Lynn Saturday night, with no loss in damages reported.

In other business, Rosalee Virginia Tasker, Accident, who was reported missing last week, came into the Sheriff's Office on Friday with her husband Solloman to report that she was fine and no longer missing.

In addition to the previously mentioned arrests, the department arrested three persons last week.

Leroy Collen Stewart, 46, Deer Park, was incarcerated Tuesday, October 27, on a bench warrant for failure to appear in court. He was released the same day when he posted $200 bond.

Thomas Edward Bowman, 25, Kitzmiller, was arrested Saturday and charged with theft and altering. He was released the same day when he posted 10 percent of $500 bond.

David B. Byron, 39, Meyersdale, Pa., was incarcerated Sunday and charged with driving while intoxicated. He was released the same day when he posted 10 percent of $500 bond.

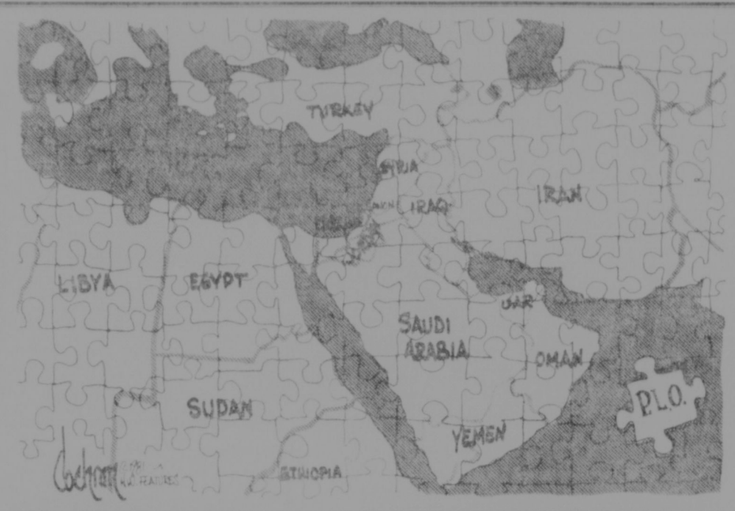
The dedication of the lecture, which was presented by Dr. Marian Friedman, states that Dr. Baumgartner began family practice in 1932 "and continuing until his untimely death in August, 1967 . . . he devoted his entire professional and personal life to the health and welfare of the citizens of Oakland and the surrounding area." He was noted in the dedication as "a family practitioner who was a tireless local, state and national leader . . . To emulate him is to maintain the highest standards of practice in medicine and community responsibility as a citizen."

THE UNSCRUPULOUS BILL SIKES, pictured center, portrayed by Dave Callis, threatens Oliver Twist, right, played by Arthur Fedde, as a crowd of young pickpockets and thieves looks on. The scene is taken from the musical "Oliver," to be presented this weekend at Southern Middle School. Saturday and Monday nights and Sunday afternoon. In the past several weeks the school stage has come alive nightly, and this week's schedule has called for four dress rehearsals, involving actors and singers from all over the county. Behind the scenes, time and talent has been offered by Patti McLaughlin, accompanist; Ben Sincell, set design, construction and lighting; Mrs. Robert Ruckert and Joan Sussman, costume assistance; Sonia Pratt, poster and program design; Francis Acton, publicity; and Greg Carrico, stage manager. Advance tickets for the play are available at the Garrett County Promotion Council, the information desk of Garrett Community College, McHenry campus, Englander's Pharmacy, or from members of the cast.



Second Impression

by Harry Fox

These are gloomy days to be in the newspaper business. Many prophets see the handwriting on the wall—and the message is not good. Americans are reading much less. In many large cities across the nation the publishers are pulling in, tightening their belts for a long dry spell. Papers aimed at an evening readership are especially hard hit. Our lifestyles have little time for relaxing with a paper at the end of the day.

What we do have time for is TV, and lots of it. Americans today, even print journalists, now rely on TV for their primary news source. A recent study by the American Newspaper Publishers Association indicates that modern readers look to newspapers for other things, among them information about wines and foreign travel. (The study says that knowledge of these is seen as a mark of sophistication.)

But there are bright spots. Recently I spent some time working with one person in our county school system who loves, respects, and labors diligently to teach simple, concise writing and good journalism.

I first knew Lucile Sines as a music teacher, directing the all-county chorus concerts of some years ago. In the intervening time she has developed a remarkable avocation as the advisor of The Viking, the student paper at Northern High School.

What she accomplishes is worth seeing and reading. Her journalism students produce their paper without benefit of outside typesetting. They must type each story, counting and justifying each line of type manually. They prepare completed paste-ups and deliver them to the printer using none of the high technology common in publishing these days. That says something about her enthusiasm.

Best of all, Lucile teaches good writing. She pushes her students to make a paper that does more than look pretty. And as with so many other dedicated teachers, she devotes hours of her own, unpaid time to her work. The results are evident.

Thank you, Lucile Sines. Thank you for showing our youth that it does matter how you write. Such respect for the language and for journalism is rare. Garrett County is fortunate to have you.

Oakland Job Service Wins Office Award

The Oakland Job Service won the Outstanding Local Office Award for the Western Region during the annual Employment Security Administration Directors meeting held October 22 and 23 at Ocean City. The local office won the award over offices in Cumberland, Hagerstown and Frederick.

Mrs. G. Anderson, office manager, stated that "This award symbolizes the extended service effort given to job seekers and this business community by a hard working, committed staff." The local staff consists of Charles Kern, Holly Beasley and Roxanne Hile.

The Department of Human Resources is responsible for paying unemployment insurance when due and denying it when it is not due, keeping in contact with employers and determining their needs, placing employees and helping people in certain categories, such as unemployed parents, to find jobs.

Mrs. Anderson further stated that "Our Job Service represents one of the most productive, cost-effecitve units in the state, although our staff is one of the smallest. We truly believe in the services we offer the local business community. Large or small companies can cut personnel staff time drastically by using our referral, placement, testing, and counceling service to the fullest extent, and our Targeted Job Tax Credit program saves an employer dollars."

The Oakland office also ranked among the top ten in meeting Federal Veterans Compliance goals, it was recognized for exceeding Affirmative Action Staffing goals and it received a perfect attendance award.

Deep Creek Lions Club Notes Postponement

The annual fall Las Vegas Night sponsored by the Deep Creek Lions club has been postponed this year, and rescheduled for the spring of 1981. The definite date will be announced later, according to Duane Weaver, club president.

FAGIN AND BILL SIKES are faced with the dilemma of a missing boy, Oliver Twist, who could repeat what he has seen or heard on the streets of London to the wrong people, in one scene from Lionel Bart's musical "Oliver." Pictured above, standing, from left to right, are the bartender, played by Leroy Raines; Fagin, played by Terry Wolfe; Nancy, played by Maria Gonder; and Bill Sikes, played by Dave Callis. Pictured looking on, top right, are street people Mary Mateer and Pamela Groves. The play is based on the story of Oliver Twist by Charles Dickens. It sketches impoverished conditions in 19th century England, sprinkled with humor, gaiety and danger. "Oliver," to be presented November 7, 8 and 9, is under the direction of Jane Avery and Nancy Learey.

market, petitioned the Zoning Board at a public hearing Sept. 28 for permission to open the tavern, housed in part of the market on Oak Street.

One of the reasons the Board denied the request was that the Oakland zoning ordinance does not include taverns as an acceptable new land use within town limits.

During the Monday meeting, Mayor H.D. "Hub" Swartzentruber stated he did not wish for the Town to pursue criminal proceedings against J & M for not complying with the Zoning Board ruling. Janes noted that in an injunctive proceeding, a criminal penalty is not issued.

One member asked Janes what would happen if the Council voted not to enforce the Zoning Board's decision. Janes responded that although he did not believe such a decision would diminish the validity of the zoning ordinance, he believed a decision to enforce some and not all of the Board's rulings would be irrational as well as would undercut the authority of the Board.

Court Suit

According to the suit, the Promotion Council does provide its members a procedure to follow concerning complaints against them but that the plaintiffs were allegedly denied those rights.

Attorneys for the defendants have until November 17 to answer the suit. The law firm of Burnett, Eiswert, Crawford and Janes will represent the Promotion Council in the case while Jack Turney will represent the county commissioners.

On the advice of counsel, the defendants had no comment on the case.

Huskies Hang On For Win Over Meyersdale

An interception in the fourth quarter by Stan Eggleston was one of the keys to the Northern Huskies' holding on for a 14-12 win over Meyersdale Saturday afternoon on the Pennsylvanians' field. The win was the fifth in eight starts for the Huskies, however the record books show a 2-6 record because the school was required to forfeit three wins.

Eggleston also scored one of his team's touchdowns, while his brother Mike broke up two conversion attempts by the Big Red, once by knocking down a pass in the second quarter and the other by recording an open-field tackle.

Northern tailback Rob Carr opened the scoring with a three-yard run with two minutes remaining in the first quarter and Dave George booted the extra point. The scoring run culminated a 60-yard, 12-play drive.

At about the six-minute mark in the second quarter, Stan Eggleston hauled down a 20-yard halfback option pass from Carr for the Huskies' second six-pointer. George's successful kick-after gave the visitors a 14-0 lead.

The Big Red got on the board with just three seconds remaining in the half when Don Deal grabbed a deflected pass from Todd Imhoff for the score. The ball had been tipped by three Huskies. Mike Eggleston's blocked pass on the conversion attempt secured a 14-6 lead by Northern at the half.

Meyersdale's Richard Leonard picked off a Scott Graham pass in the third quarter deep in Northern territory which set up a three-yard scoring run by Jesse Jauntz. Eggleston's game-saving tackle followed on the two-point conversion attempt.

Carr provided 129 of his team's 154 yards rushing on 28 carries, while Meyersdale's Tom Smith rushed for 54 yards on 20 carries. Northern outdistanced the losers in total offense, 227 to 136 yards.

"I was quite pleased with our performance in the first half," Coach Jack Settle stated. "Penalties and turnovers are the main things that prevented us from scoring in the second half."

The Huskies were tagged with 50 yards on five penalties while Meyersdale finished without a single violation. One second half drive by Northern which went as deep as Meyersdale's 25 was stopped by a clipping call. When the game ended, the Huskies had the ball on the Big Red's 18-yard line. "I feel we could have scored again on our last drive, but we kept the ball on the ground and played very conservatively at that point."

Settle spoke highly of the performance by his offensive linemen: center Mike Robinson, who was making his first start after being injured for several weeks; John Swauger, Phil Carr, John Savage and Stan Eggleston. "Stan had one of his best games ever at tightend, in both blocking and receiving," Settle said. He also noted the blocking performances of Mike Eggleston and Scott Rodeheaver who alternated at tightend.

Settle also commended Carr for his running efforts and junior quarterback Scott Graham, who says "is continuing to improve."

Defensive standouts were Troy Margroff, Bob Lipscomb, John and Jim Swauger and Stan Eggleston. Margroff finished with 12 tackles, four of them unassisted, and two sacks. Northern's defense is allowing an average of only six points per game.

Settle said he was pleased with the kicking off of Randy Yommer, who was substituting for Dave George.

The Huskies will attempt to add another win this week against Hancock before the Garrett County showdown against Southern the following Friday.

"Hancock has a good passing game and a good kicking game," Settle said. "They run from a multiple-I offense and they have average size."

Settle said his team is healthy and "really looking forward to playing Hancock."

Northern Athletic Group Conducting Membership Drive

"Building quality athletics in a quality community" is the new slogan the Northern Garrett Athletic Association is stressing in its 1981 membership drive. Acting as chairperson this year is coach Dave Bender. The membership drive will continue until Tuesday, November 10, the date of the clubs next scheduled monthly meeting.

According to Bender, letters are being sent to interested parents and friends residing in the northern portion of Garrett County. Students are also receiving parent information letters stressing the importance of renewing community involvement in the athletic program at the local high school.

As an added incentive to increase membership in the club this year, the NGAA is offering some exclusive benefits to members only. These include special rates on season ticket sales, a 20% discount at new Sport-A-Bout Unlimited Sports shop located in Grantsville and wholesale prices on all Shaklee nutritional products. NGAA hopes to attract some new members by offering these benefits for members taking an active part in the club.

Persons interested in becoming an active member of the athletic association in northern Garrett County are urged by Bender to attend the next meeting of the NGAA on Tuesday, November 10, at 8 p.m. in the teachers' lounge. Topics listed on the agenda for this meeting include election of new officers, information on how to take advantage of club benefits, appointment of captains for work committees, allocation of current funds, suggestions for future activities, and the 1980-81 West Virginia University basketball highlights film.

Rams Face Stiff Challenge In Quest For A Winning Season

In order to finish with a winning season, the Southern High Rams must win their remaining two contests, a task which will not be easy, despite the fact that the Rams' remaining two opponents both have losing records. The Calvert County Cavaliers, who Southern will face this Saturday afternoon, have a season record of 0-8 and the Northern Huskies, the Rams' final foe, are sporting a 2-6 ledger.

However, all of the Cavaliers' opponents, with the exception of Southern, are Class A schools and among the strongest teams in the state, while Northern is 2-6 only on paper. On the field, the Huskies are 5-3, but were forced to forfeit three opening wins because of unintentional use of an ineligible player, Mike Bradshaw.

"The Cavaliers have been in every game this year," Coach Tom Woods stated. "Their 0-8 record is extremely deceiving, which is what we have been telling our team for the past several days." Calvert County plays powerhouse teams like Thomas Johnson, La Plata and Severn, a team which rolled over Smithsburg 39-0 but topped the Cavaliers by only a 28-20 margin.

"Size wise, we are about equal," Woods said, "but they are quicker than any team we have faced this year, and that includes Keyser and Musselman."

The team is led by the three Chew brothers, with Bertram at quarterback (6-0,175) Winthrop at fullback (5-11, 180) and Sylvester at tailback (5-8, 150). Defensive standouts are John Chesiock (6-0, 190) and Bertram Chew at linebacker positions and safety Thomas Johnson (5-10,150).

The Cavaliers use multiple I formations and are outside oriented. Defensively they use primarily a 6-2.

"The only possible advantage we have over Calvert is that they have never seen us play and that they might be expecting a big-play offense, which is the type of football all the schools play in their area," Woods said "We hope to be able to move the ball against them three or four yards at a clip with basic plays."

Woods' staff scouted the Cavaliers against Leonardtown, a team to whom they lost 7-6.

"Playing during the daylight hours will be their advantage," Woods said, "particularly if it's warm."

The Rams will leave Friday for Waldorf, which is where the team will be staying. Waldorf, a five-hour drive from Oakland, is about 20 miles from Prince Frederick, home town of Calvert High School. They will practice on the Calvert field Friday evening and the game will be Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Woods said all of the Rams are healthy and he hopes to do a lot of substituting in the remaining two games, including jayvee personnel, whose season is now over. Southern is 4-4 on the season.

Exercise Class Slated At SHS

There will be an exercise class held every Monday and Wednesday in the girls' gymnasium of Southern High School from 8 to 10 p.m., beginning November 4, according to Mary Lou Stempie, instructor.

The class is free of charge and open to the public. Any or all of the classes may be attended.

Terra Alta Dolphins Win 1981 Mt. Top Youth League Championship

The Terra Alta Dolphins, displaying an aggressive defensive effort, upset the Oakland Jets Saturday evening on the Southern High field, 7-6, to capture their first-ever Mt. Top Youth Football League Championship. The contest also marked the first loss this season for the Jets who went into the game with an 8-0 record. Two of the Jets' wins were recorded against the Dolphins.

Oakland had the first two opportunities to score in the first half, but a fumble, a penalty and a stubborn Dolphin defense sent both teams to the locker rooms in a scoreless deadlock.

The Dolphins put the first points on the board when in the third quarter Tony Haskiell broke loose for a 63-yard run to the Jets' eight-yard line. A penalty moved the ball to the four and, two plays later, Brian Layton banged in from the three for the six-pointer. Dave Harper ran for the conversion which turned out to be the winning point.

Just moments later in the third period, Jet quarterback Jamie Thomas fired a 45-yard scoring pass to Manual Moon to bring the Jets within a point. However, the Jets attempt to kick for the conversion was blocked by Tom Friend and Eugene Paugh (a conversion kick in youth league ball is worth two points).

Standouts for the Dolphins on defense were Robbie Haskiel, Eugene Paugh, Tim Metheny, Tony Sypolt, Harper and Layton. Leading the Jets' defenive effort were Steve Schrock, Dave Taft, Randall Skeweris, Bruce Bosley and Thomas.

The Dolphins gained a berth in the finals by edging the Parsons Browns for the West Virginia division title and the Jets whipped their arch rivals, the Oakland Raiders, to clinch the Maryland division title.

Board Of Women Bowlers Group Meets In LaVale

The monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Western Maryland Women's Bowling Assoc. was held on Tuesday, October 20, at the Bowler in LaVale. Twenty-three members attended.

Pat Lease informed the board that there will be a National Junior Bowling Week held January 30-February 5, 1982. This will coincide with a National Jr. Championship Tournament being sponsored by the Coca-Cola Company. All entrants must be junior bowlers in school grades 1-12. Those senior bowlers who are winners may compete later on in the national finals for scholarships.

Also announced was that by September 1981 there were already 3600 teams signed up to bowl in the 1982 W.I.B.C. Tournament being held in St. Louis, Missouri. The closing date for entries is January 8, 1982.

There will be a Christmas Bazaar conducted by the Board of Directors of the W.M.W.B.A. during the 22nd Annual Womans Handicap Tournament. The tournament will be held the first three weekends of November at Pat-Matt Lanes in Oakland. There will be baked goods, tree ornaments, Christmas pin jewelry, plus many miscellaneous items at the Bazaar.

President Janet Hess introduced Joyce Bird to the board. Miss Bird is the W.I.B.C. Field Representative who represents W.I.B.C. in 18 states and covers over half of the bowling membership of W.I.B.C. She visits many local associations and state associations all over the country each year.

Miss Bird discussed new ideas for the promotion of league bowling. She feels that to get bowlers to join leagues, leagues must have better rules, higher handicapping for fairer bowling, and no more "slow bowling". She added leagues should just put "fun" back in the game. Miss Bird answered many questions by the board and guests.

The next meeting will be held November 22, at Par-Matt Lanes in Oakland.

Lakers Win Four Straight, Eye Region Playoffs

The Garrett Community College Volleyball team registered four consecutive wins during the past week to up their season record to 19-6 and boost their hopes for a Region 20 title.

Sue White led the Laker attack against Frederick Community College early in the week with seven spike points as Garrett crushed FCC, 15-9 and 15-4.

The Lakers completed the tri-match sweep by defeating Howard Community College, 15-4 and 15-10. Captain Susan Mason paced Garrett with nine spike points and a team record nine blocks.

GCC returned to their own court for the season home finale on Saturday against Hood College and Potomac State.

The Lakers edged Hood in the opening match, 15-10 and 16-14, making Hood the fifth four-year school which has fallen to Garrett this season. Lisa Starke led the defense for Garrett with three digs.

Mason provided eight spikes and Starke recorded five assists as GCC rolled over Potomac State, 15-6 and 15-2.

Sophomore standout Patty Harsh, who had been sidelined for several weeks with an ankle injury, was in the lineup for the Lakers on Saturday. Coach Mike Friend believes that the return of Harsh will bolster the Lakers' chances for a region championship title. Harsh was the leading scorer for the Lakers before her injury. Playing in her position have been Nancy Otto, Peggy Kelley and Val Thawley, who Friend says have all "filled in admirably."

Friend said that the team is "really coming together" and the Lakers should win 20 games. "I think we are ready to play with anyone and should be a contender in the region playoffs," he concluded.

La Leche League Announces New Discussion Series

The Oakland La Leche League invites all women interested in breastfeeding to attend its meeting on Tuesday, November 10, at 7 p.m., at the home of Cheryl Stottlemeyer, 10 B Street, Mt. Lake Park.

This is the first in a series of four meetings held the second Tuesday of each month in the Oakland area, in which informal discussions will cover different aspects of breastfeeding, childbirth, nutrition, weaning and parenting. The topic for this first meeting will be "The Advantages of Breastfeeding to Mother and Child." The League also holds a separate series of meetings in the northern part of Garrett County on the fourth Tuesday of each month at 10 a.m.

Each La Leche League group has a lending library with books on breastfeeding, childbirth and family living, as well as information sheets dealing with separate topics concerning the nursing relationship and the health of mother and baby. The league's own manual, "The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding," can be bought or borrowed.

La Leche League leaders are all experienced nursing mothers who have, through preparation and study, become certified through La Leche League International to offer mother-to-mother help to women who want to nurse their babies. Each leader maintains a 24-hour telephone service to provide information and encouragement. In the four and one-half years that the League has been in Garrett County, over 150 area women have been helped either by attending meetings or by the use of this telephone service, according to one group leader.

For further information about the La Leche League or directions to the meeting, persons may contact either the group leaders, Susan Murray at 334-8650 or Ellinor Hamilton at 826-8543.

Balto. Co. Police Arrest Two; Suspects Are Linked With Klan

EDGEMERE, Md. (UPI) — Baltimore County police said Tuesday they seized weapons and explosive powder from a car occupied by two men accused of shouting Ku Klux Klan slogans and trying to run over a black man.

James Leach told police he was standing by a car talking to friends Monday night in Edgemere when the car swerved in his direction. He said the men shouted Ku Klux Klan slogans.

Leach called police and officers stopped a car that matched his description.

A police spokesman said officers confiscated six pistols, two rifles, one air rifle and one pound of black explosive powder.

Police said Brian K. Rogers, 25, of Edgemere, an Army soldier stationed at Fort Meade, and Paul W. Spence, 27, also of Edgemere, were arrested and charged with handgun violations. Both were released on bail.

Assault charges are pending, police said.

Student Suffers Severe Burns In Lab

MIDDLETOWN, Md. (UPI) — A high school senior was severely burned Tuesday when a physics demonstration exploded in his face, authorities said.

Fire investigator Gary Chipley said Richard "Tony" Lewis, 17, suffered second and third-degree burns while trying to pour alcohol into the fuel intake of a model motor. Chipley said apparently the motor had been used a short time earlier and the alcohol sparked a flash fire when it hit the hot motor.

Lewis, a track star who was scheduled to run in a statewide championship Thursday, was flown to City Hospitals' Burn Unit where he was listed in fair condition. Authorities said Lewis also sustained lacerations from fragments of the metal motor.

Hotline For Stomach Troubles Ready For Holiday Season "Rush"

BALTIMORE (UPI) — "Gutline", a phone service designed to help people troubled by digestive problems, is bracing itself for the upcoming holiday season, a spokeswoman for the American Digestive Disease Society said Tuesday.

Alice Weinstein, an ADDS staff assistant, said the group's Baltimore and Bethesda hotlines usually get about 10 calls a day from people seeking advice on stomach and bowel problems. But she added, "That goes up dramatically when people start getting indigestion from the holidays.

About 40 percent of the people who call in to the year-old service are botheref by common ailments such as heartburn, gas pain and diarrhea Mrs. Weinstein said.

However, 7 percent of the callers report "very serious symptoms such as possible cancer and possible heart disease," she said. "A lot of those people have been going around with pain, but refusing to call a doctor. We urge them to see a doctor immediately."

Mrs. Weinstein said about 12 percent of the callers have been told doctors they have chronic diseases of the digestive tract. "Most of those peoplz call to get a second opinion or find out if there's anything new in the treatment of the disease," she said.

The free hotline, staffed by physicians who volunteer their time, gets most of its phone calls from people between the ages of 40 and 60.

Jessup Prisoners Protest Ends After Officials Agree To Talks

JESSUP, Md. (UPI) — Prisoners at the Maryland House of Correction Tuesday ended a week-long protest of tougher prison policies because the head of the state's prison system agreed to discuss their demands, officials said.

Bill Clark, a spokesman for the Division of Corrections, said "Inmates are back on normal work and education routines, apparently because Commissioner of Correction Jon Galley agreed to meet with the inmate advisory council."

Clark said no date has been set for the meeting, which will focus on inmates'complaints about Maryland's recent tightening of pre-release rules and visitation policies.

In his weeekly press conference, Gov. Harry Hughes said, "That problem appears to be over... things are quiet at Jessup."

When asked if he intended to ease the tough new policies that spurred the Jessup strike, Hughes said, "We're not going to lower our security standards — we've worked very hard to get them," he said.

A week ago, officials locked inmates in their cells when they refused to report to prison jobs. The prisoners presented a list of 20 demands to warden Howard Lyles that included a meeting with Secretary of Public Safety and Correctional Services Thomas Schmidt to discuss stricter guidelines for work and pre-release status.

Schmidt toughened the classification standards when he took over in March. His predecessor, Gordon Kamka, resigned under fire after 29 inmates were arrested in Baltimore on charges they committed crimes when they were supposed to be at school or work.

"We're trying to keep a certain class of inmates, such as rapists and robbers, out of work release," Clark said.

The inmates refusal to work hampered the production of Maryland license plates and crippled the House of Correction's internal operations. The strike also posed difficulties for the University of Maryland Hospital's surgical department because Jessup inmates wash the scrub outfits of the hospital's surgeons and nurses.

Edgar Allen Poe was expelled from West Point in 1831.

Governor Says

State Prisons "Under Control" After Administration Efforts

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — Gov. Harry Hughes said Tuesday his administration has finally taken control of Maryland's prison system, pointing to statistics that show escapes are almost half what they were a year ago.

"We've got things under control now," said Hughes, who has spent much of his nearly three years in office in a rear guard fight to keep the overcrowded and antiquated prisons from exploding, to keep federal judges from ordering mass releases of inmates, and to keep his political opponents from using prisons as an issue against him if he seeks reelection.

He attributed the improvements to Correctional Services and Public Safety Secretary Thomas Schmidt and Corrections Commissioner Jon Galley. Schmidt, who had been Hughes' budget secretary, took over the department in April, replacing the much-criticized Gordon Kamka.

In the seven months since, Hughes said escapes have declined by 43 percent — from 413 during the same seven-month period in 1980 to 235 this year.

For the year to date, Hughes' said 339 inmates have escaped, compared with 518 in the first 10 months of 1980.

"I think that shows we've been able to do something regarding security in our prisons," the governor said.

Hughes agreed that a strike this week and last by inmates at the House of Correction in Jessup probably stemmed from the tighter security and more stringent eligibility requirements for work release programs imposed by Schmidt and Galley.

But he said the state has no intention of relaxing those standards.

The governor also attributed the reduction in the escape rate to improvements at the prisons, the opening of new prisons and a revamping of the inmate classification program that determines which inmates are sent to which minimum, medium or maximum security prisons.

Hughes said there had been problems with escapes from work release programs, but added, "Now, the people who are there are the people who should be there — not the people who shouldn't be there."

The governor said he would not second-guess his decision not to endorse construction of a new prison in 1979, his first year in office, saying even if the prison had been approved it would not be built yet and would have had no effect on the current prison situation.

D. C. Voters To Make Tax Credit Decision At Polls

WASHINGTON (UPI) — District of Columbia voters went to the polls Tuesday to decide whether to approve an initiative backed by a national anti-tax group allowing income tax credits for contributions to private and public schools.

Backed by the National Taxpayers' Union, the tax credit initiative was first ruled off the ballot by the city elections board, despite the fact that it had more than twice as many petition signatures as necessary.

The initiative would allow an income tax credit of up to $1,200 for contributions to private or public schools.

Its supporters said it would give low and moderate-income parents the same choice for their childrens' education that wealthy parents have. Opponents said it would destroy the public schools by draining them of students and money.

Gov. Agrees To Spending Guidelines Proposed By House Of Delegates

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — Gov. Harry Hughes said Tuesday he would have no problem complying with a recommended ceiling on state spending as long as the ceiling remains a recommendation and not an inflexible limit.

Hughes' comments at a State House news conference came in response to a decision by General Assembly leaders Monday night to recommend that he not allow spending increases in his new budget to exceed 90 percent of the yearly increase in the average personal income of Maryland residentsm

For next year, that would mean limiting spending increases to about 10 percent in the part of the budget financed by state tax dollars.

"I don't like arbitary limitations because I don't think they're necessary if you're doing the job right," Hughes said, reiterating a position he has taken ever since coming to office.

He said he discussed the issue with officials at municipal bond rating houses in New York and they agreed, saying, "It seems there are always ways found to get around limitations."

Hughes said the budget he submitted to the General Assembly last year called for an increase in general fund spending — the part financed by general state taxes — of only one-half of 1 percent, the lowest increase in two decades.

The governor said his problem with the latest legislative proposal was that it apparently also would involve "special funds," which mostly includes money collected from "users," such as the gasoline tax collected from motorists or the landing fees collected from airlines.

Special funds are usually spent in the area from which they are obtained: gas taxes being used for highway improvements, for instance.

"I think you have to make that distinction," Hughes said. "But, if (the legislative recommendation) is just a goal, I don't think it will give me any problem."

General Assembly members have been under increasing pressure in recent years to pimit state spending and the state bureaucracy.

But Hughes, House Speaker Benjamin Cardin, D-Baltimore, and other influential lawmakers have opposed mandatory limits, saying they would take away the state's financial flexibility.

As a trade-off, the 1981 legislature agreed to establish a "Spending Affordability Committee" to set voluntary spending limits.

Hughes said he expected pressure to adopt spending limit legislation to increase in 1982 because it is an election year, although he said some lawmakers don't really have their heart in it.

"So many of the legislators who supported it last lime will tell you privately they don't like it, but publicly they have to support it," he said.

Court Rules Against Hogan, Says Abortion Decision Went Too Far

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — Maryland's highest court ruled Tuesday that Prince George's County Executive Lawrence Hogan exceeded his authority last year when he issued an order prohibiting abortions in county-run hospitals.

The unanimous decision by the Court of Appeals upheld a previous ruling by County Circuit Judge Howard Chasanow, who permanently enjoined the county administration from enforcing Hogan's August 1980 order.

The high court said the order was "an unlawful encroachment" upon the authority delegated to the county's Hospital Commission, the boards of directors of the two county-run hospitals, and the county council.

The court, however, left undecided two related issues: whether Hogan's order conflicted with state law regarding abortions; and whether it infringed on the constitutional right of a woman to have an abortion.

The high court, in a decision written by Chief Judge Robert Murphy, said the power granted Hogan by the county charter "does not, however, constitute a grant of unbridled authority permitting him to usurp, nullify or supersede, at his pleasure, functions and duties committed by law to other executive branch officers, or to refuse to observe existing laws."

Hogan was not immediately available for comment but County Attorney Robert Ostrom said the court made its decision for technical reasons, not constitutional.

"My response is that the whole purpose of our charter was to have a strong county executive concept. I respect the court's decision. I would respectfully disagree. That is a chipping away at the strong county executive concept embodied in the county charter, passed by the citizens 10 years ago."

Arthur Spitzer, a lawyer for the American Civil Liberties Union, which initially challenged Hogan's order in court, said, "We're delighted that the court reaffirmed the limits on the county executive's power and made it clear that just because someone is elected county executive it doesn't make him a dictator free to impose his private beliefs on the public."

Teenagers Climb Radio Towers

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Police in the Baltimore area reported two incidents Tuesday of teenage girls climbing radio towers.

The first took place in Baltimore County where a 15-year-old girl, identified only by her first name, Sharon, climbed halfway up WCAO's tower and remained there until a disc jockey talked her down.

The broadcaster said the girl apparently was upset by a fight with her parents.

The second incident occured Tuesday afternoon at Park Heights and Boarman avenues in Baltimore. Police said an unidentified girl climbed up a tower belonging to United Broadcasting, but somehow managed to evade officers on the way down.

"WHEREAS, Mr. Naylor has served The First National Bank faithfully and effectively since January 8, 1963."

"NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Board of Directors hereby bestow on Mr. Naylor its highest esteem and its sincere appreciation for his wise counsel over these many years."

GCTA Teacher Talk

Cindy Downton

The delegates from Garrett County who attended the Maryland State Teachers Association Convention in Baltimore on October 15 and 16, were greeted by a "moving" speech, according to Secondary member-at-large Betty White, by the 1981-83 MSTA president, Janice Piccinini. Ms. Piccinini first addressed the challenge that she feels has been raised by President Reagan which will lead to the withdrawal of all federal funds to public education, by 1984.

"The President originally proposed budget cuts to 30% in education, which Congress reduced to 10%. However, in his September 24 speech, President Reagan proposed a further reduction of 12% - not from the Congressional 10% package, but from his original 30% proposal. In one year, the President of the United States is proposing to reduce federal funds by 42%. If he is successful, President Reagan will be almost halfway to his goal of totally eliminating federal support for public education in America," she said.

She reminded the assembly that, while public education is being denied federal support, the administration is supporing tuition tax credits for private schools. "Under its plan, the only schools that will receive a federal subsidy will be private and parochial schools. Reagonomics applied to public education means survival of the fittest, with the private schools educating the 'haves' and the public schools educating the 'have-nots'," she stated.

Addressing teacher competence, Ms. Piccinini reminded the assembly that teachers don't hire and teachers don't fire. Every teacher goes through a two-year probationary period during which numerous administrative visitations are made. "If there is an incompetent teacher in the classroom, there is an incompetent administrator in the school. If there is an incompetent administrator in the school, there is an incompetent member of the superintendent's staff. And if there is an incompetent member on the superintendent's staff, then the competency of the school board must be questioned," she declared.

Ms. Piccinini asserted that public school teachers do not have to defend themselves saying they are the heart of education. "If every teacher were to retire tomorrow, public education in the state of Maryland would not exist. If every school board member . . . state legislator . . . local official would retire tomorrow, children would report to their classrooms and the learning process would continue," she said.

For a complete copy of Janice Piccinini's opening address, interested persons can contact the Garrett County Teachers Association president, Les McDaniel, at Broad Ford Elementary School, or any GCTA representative.

Legislative amendments proposed to the delegates at the convention and passed included: Amendment No. 1 - to provide active membership to registered professional nurses who are responsible for school health programs; Amendment No. 3 - to establish dues ceiling at .005 of average instructional salary (Garrett Co. passed); Amendment No. 4 - to clarify dues transmittal procedures; Amendment No. 6a. - to allow the president to serve as an official representative at meetings of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Profession; and Amendment No. 8 - to establish the minority affairs committee as a standing committee.

Quote of the week: "The whole people must take upon themselves the education of the whole people and be willing to bear the expense of it." John Adams.

Teachers do it with class: Grades three and four of Yoder School presented an original puppet play and shared a medley of songs, chorics and poems at the Goodwill Mennonite Nursing Home on October 20. In recognition of World Hunger Week, they related the program to their nutrition unit in science.

Carolyn Collen, art teacher, helped the children to create sock puppets representing each food group. She also guided the children in creating their own script. Carolyn Dooley, classroom teacher, directed the program. Mrs. House, a parent volunteer, accompanied the class to the home.

The children enjoyed greeting each guest at the conclusion of the presentation and were especially interested in meeting a guest who recently turned 100 years old.

Compare the cost of our Homeowners Policy and we just might save you some money! We will also prepare a free survey of your present insurance program and give you a full explanation of your Homeowners Policy.

Our Homeowners contract settles losses "new for old" on the house, reimburses you for theft of personal property (world-wide), pays for the extra expense of living out while damages are repaired and protects you against liability claims. That's only part of the coverage you receive for what we consider a reasonable premium.

(A few places in Garrett County take premiums between those listed below)

Waiting to hear

Life without a mailbox would be lonely indeed. Everybody wants to hear from someone.

Why is communication so essential to man's well-being? Because we feel that life is incomplete without the fulfillment that comes to us from other lives.

And yet a wide circle of friends can also leave gaps in our lives. And so we pray. For we require divine guidance as often as we need human support. Just as we need to renew the ties of family and friends, so always we need to be in touch with the God who is Father of us all.

Would you like to hear from God? Before you even realized it — God was waiting to hear from you! Prayer is that simple . . . that universal.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHO BUILDS THE BARRIER?
November 8, 1981

Background Scripture:
Romans 8.

Devotional Reading:
Galatians 5: 16-24

In those times when God seems absent from our lives, when it appears that he is not present to help us in our trouble or sorrow, it is customary for us to assume that he has for some reason placed a barrier between himself and ourselves. It is also customary for us to assume that the reason for his absence is his displeasure with us—something we've done or not done, something present in our lives that shouldn't be there or something lacking that should be.

The Psalmists frequently complained that God had forsaken them: "O God, why dost thou cast us off forever?" (74: 1). King Saul was convinced that God no longer listened to his prayers. Even Jesus cried on Calvary, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" If all of these—and more—experienced a barrier between God and themselves, it is not so surprising that we have also experienced it.

According to the Flesh

Yet, the Bible seems to indicate that it is really not God who abandons us, but we who abandon him. If there is a barrier between us in times of great need, it is because we have perhaps unwittingly erected it ourselves. God does not desire to separate himself from us even in the midst of our sin.

One of the ways in which we build such a barrier is to focus our whole attention and being on the material side of life. Whether our hangup is food, drink, clothing, money, power or our other material pleasures, we stifle our spiritual selves when we fail to recognize that we are both flesh and spirit. It is not that God becomes angry with us for our material preoccupation, but that these "things" erect a barrier that tends to shut him out. Thus, Paul reminded the Romans that "all who are led by the Spirit of God are sons of God" (Romans 8:14).

Who is to Condemn?

Another way we build a barrier between ourselves and God is by failing to really accept his forgiving grace. Although in our minds we "know" that it is through God in Christ that we are freed from our guilt, we still may live as if we don't believe it. We act as though we are more powerful sinners than he is a Saviour. So Paul reminds us in Romans, "It is God who justifies, who is to condemn?" (8: 34). To live with unrelieved guilt is to actually reject the grace of God.

"Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" asks the Apostle (8: 35). His answer: Nothing or no one! "For I am sure that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor things present, nor things to come, nor powers, nor height, nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord" (8: 38).

Unless we ourselves build the barrier.

THUMB SUCKING IS NORMAL FOR INFANTS

Their thumbs are always handier than a nipple or pacifier and helps them not to be irritable when wet or tired. They take the place of continuous petting. There are no apparent problems caused by infant thumb sucking.

After youngsters are older than two years and certainly when they become four or five years old, your pediatrician should be consulted if thumb sucking persists. It can not only be an embarrassment, but actually change the shape of a child's mouth. Your pediatrician can suggest one of the preventives we carry against thumb sucking.

Well-known for their pop music, their look-alike appearance, and their wit, the two artists began touring in the 1950s with a classical repertoire, but in 1960 they were inspired to record the theme from the movie "The Apartment," against an orchestral background. The immediate success of this recording launched them on a new career as interpreters of contemporary music. Together they have made 109 albums, including 17 gold records. They have played thousands of concerts, combining their own arrangements of popular and classical music with witty commentary.

Attorney General's Docket

by Stephen H. Sachs
Attorney General of Maryland

Credit is the backbone of our economy.

According to the Federal Reserve Board and Data Resources, Inc., business loans rose from under $180 billion to nearly $260 billion between 1975 and 1980; personal loans jumped from $85 billion to over $125 billion during the same period of time; automobile loans rose from some $60 billion to nearly $120 billion in those five years.

During the 1970's, Americans went on a buy-on-credit binge, using the new plastic cards issued by banks and other institutions to run up a revolving credit debt of $55 billion by 1980.

However, credit now is more expensive to use and more confusing. As with any other area of the marketplace, it pays consumers to shop around for the best terms when deciding what credit card to use.

Many customers mistakenly think that credit card companies decide what interest rates are charged or what fees are imposed for the use of their credit cards. Actually, it is the card issuer (the bank, retail store, etc.) that sends you the card and does the bookwork on your purchases which decides how much the credit will cost you. The costs and terms of all Visa, MasterCard and similar credit cards are not the same, as a survey by our Consumer Protection Division found. Terms vary, and — depending on how you use your credit card — you can save money on interest charges and other fees if you keep an eye out for the following items when comparison shopping for credit cards:

• Check the Annual Percentage Rate (APR) charged. Federal law says all lenders must tell consumers the cost of credit not only as a dollar amount, but as an APR, which shows the yearly rate of the finance charge, or the interest charged each lender. The APR is the best measurement by which to compare the interest or finance charges quoted by one lender and those quoted by another.

• Maryland law forbids banks here from charging consumers a membership fee for the credit cards they issue. Out-of-state banks can charge membership fees. Such membership fees are not listed as part of the APR, and neither are "late fees," the penalty charged if you pay your bill after its due date. Consumers should consider the cost of all fees and charges when deciding what card has the best terms for them.

• Ask whether there are any special requirements set by the card issuer in order to obtain the credit terms slated, such as whether a specific minimum balance has to be maintained in a low-interest savings or checking account.

• Remember, if an institution changes the terms and conditions of the credit card it issues — increasing the finance charge, for example, or establishing a membership fee — you are subject to the new terms only if you agree to them in writing or use your credit card after receiving notification of the changes. You can pay off your outstanding balance under the old terms, give up the card and then look for better terms with another card issuer if you wish.

• Examine your monthly statements closely. There are disturbing reports of fraud schemes involving the discarded credit card slips of innocent consumers. Con artists go through the trash of large stores, get the carbon copies of the credit card slips, then use the names and credit card numbers of the slips to buy things by mail or telephone. In one case alone, $300,000 in purchases were made. The authorized card holder may only be liable for a maximum of $50 in unauthorized phony purchases, but your credit card account can be messed up badly, and if you mistakenly pay for a purchase you didn't make, you could have a tough time getting your money back.

You may get a free copy of the Consumer Protection Division's credit card survey by calling or writing the Division. The telephone number of its Baltimore headquarters is 659-4300, and its address is 26 South Calvert Street, Baltimore, Maryland.

Nowadays, it's difficult, if not impossible, to live without credit, but you should take every precaution to make sure you can live with it.

It's YOUR Money

By Randle A. Rodeheaver

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT YOUR PENSION PLAN?

How much will you receive? In most companies, on a salaried job, you retire at about half pay if you've worked the required number of years, usually 30 or 35. If you're on an hourly basis, your pension may be calculated on a "credits" formula — at so much per month for each year you've worked.

At what age can you retire? While 65 is still the standard, some plans now offer the option as early as 60, with some or no reduction in pension. The reduction might be, for example, at the rate of 5 percent for each year under 65. Thus at 60 you would get 75 percent of your normal pension.

How much do you contribute? In some plans the employer now makes the full contribution. If you contribute, it might be 4 percent or 5 percent, possibly 6 percent of your pay.

Can you name a beneficiary who will receive pension payment after you die? In some plans, yes. You take a reduced pension. Your beneficiary will then receive payments — probably smaller than yours — for either a designated number of years or for life.

Can you vest? A vesting provision entitles you to some benefits if you leave before retirement age. The privilege may be limited to employees of age 45 or over, with 10 or 15 years of service. The benefits are payable, as a rule, when you reach the regular retirement age.

Can the plan be discontinued? Yes — if the company goes out of business, is merged, or is no longer able to contribute. If the plan was approved by the IRS, the money in the pension fund must go to the employees in proportion to the benefits they have earned.

Your pension officer can answer these and other important questions. Get the answers now — even if retirement seems a long way off.

Gregory Harrison takes an exotic dancing role

Gregory Harrison's new role is that of a young, aspiring actor who arrives in New York and fails to find work in show business until a friend introduces him to the world of male exotic dancing.

"For Ladies Only," will air Monday, Nov. 9 on NBC. Patricia Davis, Dinah Manoff, Louise Lasser, Lee Grant and Marc Singer also star.

Harrison stars as John Phillips, the biggest "star" at the University of Iowa, who quickly learns that it's not easy to make people take notice in New York — his college credentials notwithstanding.

When he meets casting assistant Sandy Green (Miss Davis), he gains a sympathetic and helpful friend — whose romantic designs fail to catch his attention. Increasingly depressed at his failure to find work as an actor, he finds solace in an affair with Mary Louise (Miss Manoff), a kooky aspiring actress who becomes his regular partner in an acting workshop.

When John is fired from an odd job, Stan Novak (Singer), another friend from acting class, suggests a place where he can earn $100 a night in tips. Stan is a regular dancer at Club Max, where ladies-only audiences cheer on male strippers.

After his first introduction to the club, John is initially repelled by the raucous activity in the popular night spot. Soon, however, financial necessity and Stan's irresistable sales pitch bring him to accept a position as a waiter.

John's financial windfall from the job allows him to continue acting and dancing classes. When the opportunity to become a dancer arises, John reluctantly tries the stage — and soon becomes a phenomenal success. He meets customers at the club and becomes briefly involved with housewife Beth Doyle (Miss Lasser) and wealthy career-woman Anne Holt (Miss Grant).

His seeming success as a male dancer causes Sandy to vow never to see him again. But still, it is not until a tragic event takes place at the club that John begins to think again about his original aspirations.

"For Ladies Only" is a Catalina Production Group, Inc. film in association with Viacom Productions, Inc. Frank Levy and Gregory Harrison are the producers.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

URGENT — My friend and I have a bet. I say that Juice Newton and Olivia Newton-John are sisters and she thinks not. Whoever wins has the other person sleep at her house. Please settle this. — Jane Williams and Tamara Szostak, Hudson Falls, N.Y.

I hope the loser can rest well in a strange bed. There is no relationship between Olivia and Juice.

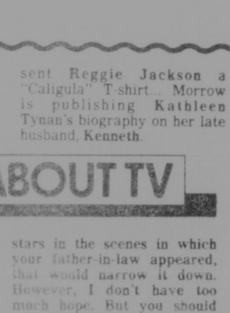
Olivia Newton-John

TOUGH ONE — Can you tell me who to write to about a World War II movie called "Guadalcanal Diary?" I saw it on TV about a year ago. My father-in-law was one of the Marines used when they were filming on location in California. I would love to try to get stills of the two scenes in which he appeared. — Mrs. G.W. Blackman, Palestine, Texas.

This is a tough assignment. It would be hard via long distance to determine if the scenes you want have been transferred to photographs. However, you might write the Archivist of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, at 8949 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, CA 90211 and see if they can help. If you know whether there were any stars in the scenes in which your father-in-law appeared, that would narrow it down. However, I don't have too much hope. But you should still make the attempt — miracles do happen.

RERUN PROBLEMS — What happened to Mrs. McMillan on "McMillan and Wife"? There are references to the fact that she died, but I must have missed the show where that happened. — J.B. Rinchville, Ky.

You are watching syndicated reruns and they must have put shows from two seasons together. Susan Saint James left the show after completing her contract. When the series returned the next season there were references to the "death" of Mrs. McMillan, but there never was a show in which that happened.



Susan Saint James

SISTERLY — Does James Cagney have a sister? — Mrs. Mae Budde, New York, N.Y.

Yes, he has a sister who also acted, named Jeanne. And a brother William, who is a doctor.

Another celebrity comes to a soap

By Nancy M. Reichardt

NEW YORK — Another big-name movie and television star has joined the ranks of soap opera actors. The newest addition to the cast of "One Life to Live" is none other than Arlene Dahl.

Ms. Dahl portrays Lucinda King, the mom of Mimi. The character of Lucinda is described as a tough, feisty, cocktail pianist who is a long-time acquaintance of Asa Buchanan's. She wants nothing more than to see her daughter married to a Buchanan. Ms. Dahl's role will be short-term.

Maureen Garrett, who spent several years on "Guiding Light" as Holly Thorpe, has signed with "Ryan's Hope" as Jane Elizabeth Ryan, who will become a major character on the show.

Speaking of "Guiding Light," Carolyn Ann Clarke has joined as Lesley Ann Monroe, along with another newcomer, Robert Newman, who portrays Josh Lewis.

Although Beverlee McKinsey has announced in New York that she's leaving her role of Iris on "Texas" sometime this month, her real-life husband, actor Berkeley Harris, will be staying on with "Texas" as Phil Roberts.

Other happenings around the set include the addition of Robert Burton as Beau Baker, and Philip Clark's (Ryan Connor) five week exit to film a role in the upcoming feature film "Alone in the Dark."

Richard Backus (Ex-Barry Ryan on "Ryan's Hope") is busy preparing for his role of Mordred in the Broadway revival of "Camelot," starring Richard Harris. Backus flew to Detroit to audition for Harris, got the part and will soon be making his musical-comedy debut as a result.

Richard Backus

Incidentally, Richard Backus is the third former "RH" cast member to appear on stage in "Camelot," having been preceded by Richard Muenz (ex-Joe Novak) and Christine Ebersole (ex-Lilly Darnell), who is now a regular on "Saturday Night Live."

Also working the boards is Sofia Landon who was recently written out of the "Guiding Light" cast as Diane Ballard. Sofia can be seen in the off-Broadway production "Key Exchange," where she is the stand-by for the show's star, Brooke Adams. Sofia will be performing her role regularly when Ms. Adams is on vacation.

"The Young and the Restless" cast has expanded with the addition of Beth Schaffel in the role of April's twin sister, Barbara. Also new is Howard McGillin who was chosen to take over the role of Greg Foster. Given a contract was little Marc Bentley who portrays Snapper's son, Chuckie.

JOHN TRAVOLTA and Olivia Newton-John star in "Grease," one of the most popular musical films ever, which is scheduled to make its first appearance on television on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Sunday, Nov. 8 on ABC.

FRIDAY

Robert Guillaume stars as Benson and James Noble plays Gov. Gatling in the third season of "Benson," to air Friday, Nov. 6 on ABC.

TV TATTLE

Vietnam veteran

"Frank: A Vietnam Veteran," a documentary about one soldier's experiences in Vietnam and subsequent 10-year struggle to readjust to life stateside, is the focus of a one-hour special on PBS, Nov. 11. (Local times may vary; check listings.)

Now a social worker living in Boston, Frank recounts both the horrors of war and the thrill of combat as a twice-wounded, oft-decorated U.S. Navy sniper. And he discusses the personal problems that began the night he arrived home in this country — a bleak return with no bands playing, no flags flying.

Frank's story continues through bouts with alcohol, drugs, a divorce, recurrent nightmares and occasional violent impulses. Remembering combat, Frank tells his interviewer, "I had no idea what anybody was shooting at, but I was shooting, too... I was very powerful. Everywhere I went, I had a weapon..."

Singer-actor

Singer Rick Nelson stars in "A Tale of Four Wishes," a combined live-action-and-animation presentation in "The CBS Library" series of children's specials, to air Sunday, Nov. 8. Nelson plays Skeeter, a gentle, soft-spoken storyteller who helps a perplexed 13-year-old girl learn the secrets of making wishes come true.

Nelson has already earned a place in recording history. His more than 100 records have sold more than 50 million copies to date, some of them making the coveted "Gold" category. His newest album is "Playing to Win."

It was as an actor, of course, that Nelson began his career. In 1949, when he was 7, he and his brother, David, joined their parents' radio show, "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet." He continued in the subsequent television version and, during succeeding years, America watched him grow up on the tube.

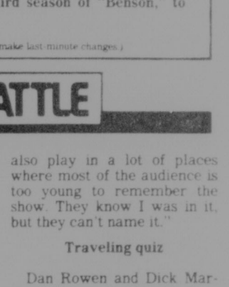
"I'm an age gauge for a lot of people," Nelson says, "but I also play in a lot of places where most of the audience is too young to remember the show. They know I was in it, but they can't name it."

Traveling quiz

Dan Rowen and Dick Martin will team up for the first time since their popular "Laugh-In" series (1968-73), to co-host NBC's "Ultra Quiz," a two-part special in which contestants continue — as long as they keep winning — to travel around the world to compete in mentally and physically demanding games; they are flown home upon losing.

The program will air Tuesday, Nov. 10 and 17.

Production began in October on location in Washington, D.C., London, Paris, Rome, Athens and Los Angeles, with the final playoffs to be presented live from Los Angeles on the Nov. 17 telecast. The champion will receive $100,000 in cash and a personalized "fantasy" prize.



Clint Eastwood

Clint's film

Clint Eastwood stars as a city detective who encounters opposition when he attempts to transport a key witness to a mob trial in "The Gauntlet," an action drama to be rebroadcast Sunday, Nov. 8 on NBC.

Sondra Locke also stars in the film, which was directed by Eastwood and released by Warner Bros. in 1977.

Another Wharton tale — "Summer" — on PBS

The second 90-minute drama in the Edith Wharton trilogy is an adaptation of Mrs. Wharton's novel "Summer," airing on "Great Performances," Monday, Nov. 9 over PBS. (Local times may vary; check listings.)

The telecast stars Diane Lane as Charity Royall, John Cullum as Lawyer Royall and Michael Ontkean as Lucius Harney.

Set in the New England village of North Dormer, "Summer" — written in a candid graphic style more familiar today than in the Wharton era — is the story of a teen-age girl's first passionate involvement with a young man and its unusual consequences.

Charity Royall, the 17 year-old adoptive daughter of Lawyer Royall and his just-deceased wife, Vinnie, leaves adolescence behind and becomes a mature woman within the short span of summer in the early 1900s.

Charity's first emotional jolt is the discovery that the widowed Royall, who has loved her as a child, now desires her as his wife. Then, working in the town's tiny library, she meets a handsome young man, Lucius Harney, who is visiting his aunt. Mutually attracted, Charity and Lucius develop a friendly relationship which shortly results in a clandestine love affair.

Diane Lane

At the end of his stay, Lucius leaves with a promise to return and marry Charity. She soon learns, however, that he is betrothed to a young lady in nearby Nettleton and, almost simultaneously, Charity realizes that she is pregnant. The bewildered girl first considers an abortion, then reconciles herself to having the baby and caring for it herself.

Meantime, Lawyer Royall, keenly aware of Charity's predicament and concerned for her well-being, continues his proposals of marriage. Touched by his tenderness, Charity's attitude toward Royall softens but she refuses him, blurting out her shameful secret. Royall explains that he has known it for some time, that nothing matters but her happiness, they will keep the child and life together will be whatever Charity wishes.

Grateful and suddenly secure, Charity agrees and off they go to be wed in the Nettleton courthouse because, as Royall puts, "This is the last time I'll be getting married and I want to do it up right. I want us to stay in a big hotel and listen to some chamber music and eat in some grand restaurants."

The Edith Wharton trilogy was produced by Cinelit, with Jack Willis as executive producer. The trilogy was conceived by Mrs. Cullman. "Summer" was adapted for television by Charles Gaines, co-produced by Daniel A. Bohr and Mrs. Cullman and directed by Dezso Magyar. Jac Venza is executive producer for "Great Performances."

Baseball's Showcase

STARVIEW

The chameleon quality of the actor's job

By Ruth Thompson

Can the leopard change its spots?

Well, no. And according to actors, too many producers and casting directors liken actors to leopards and think they can't change their spots, either. But adventurous actors see themselves as chameleons... able to change for whatever role they're cast in.

With the cost of failure rising as high as the economy today, it's not hard to see why a producer doesn't want to gamble on casting — for instance, making an established villain into a hero.

But most actors are chameleons who can pull off quick changes. Bette Davis did it when she went from movie heroine to horror film queen ("Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?") then back to a fine, feisty heroine as a pioneer woman pilot in NBC's "Skyward."

Angie Dickinson, who stepped far out of her old "Police Woman" role to star in Brian DePalma's "Dressed to Kill" a while ago, is now returning to police work.

Angie, who after the close of "Police Woman" thought she would never again want to do a series, is ready for such a weekly commitment again. So she was as happy as Johnny Carson was when she agreed to star in a series his production company would develop for NBC.

It probably will be another police series, but as Angie said the other day, "None of us can be sure what will come out." They're trying for a product that will be both entertaining and comfortable for Angie.

Angie Dickinson

Her rejection of a concept that would have cast her as a bossy police chief offended some feminists. Angie's answer: "You can do this as a special, dramatize it. But week after week, not only is it not my image (with her established audiences) but is is not my self-image. I don't want to boss a large group of both men and women."

She's grateful that Carson's group scrapped the heavy-message concept and shopped for something lighter. If the first scripts stick to the blueprints, Angie will return to TV — right after New Year's — as a private eye with a somewhat classier wardrobe than she rated as Pepper in "Police Woman."

Among actors, there seem to be more chameleons than leopards.

Ranking high among them is the infinitely versatile Eli Wallach. Last spring, in CBS' "The Pride of Jesse Hallam," he played a sweet, feisty fruit vendor who urged an illiterate (Johnny Cash) into reading lessons. He was warm in his praise for the way singer Johnny Cash suceeded as an actor. Wallach is equally ecstatic — in fact, he used the word "touched" — by the performance of Danny Kaye in "Skokie," on CBS this month.

Wallach says that he recognized Danny Kaye — even at his comedic best — as a man of unplumbed talents. "But even I was surprised," he says. In "Skokie," Danny Kaye, who plays concentration camp survivor Max Feldman, protests the march by neo-Nazis in a Chicago suburb.

And speaking of chameleons: One of the most dastardly, villainous characters in "Skokie" is played by the very gentle Eli Wallach. On the job, this actor-chameleon conveys whatever the playwright is trying to tell us.

Democracy's Cornerstone

WHO CARES?
by David W. Hornbeck
State Superintendent of Schools
Maryland State Department of Education

Not long ago I had the pleasure of sending letters to two high school seniors — Joan Clair Hawxhurst of Southern High School in Anne Arundel County and Paul Eugene Young of Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Prince George's County — to say congratulations on their selection as Presidential Scholars.

The accomplishment of those two young people deserves our attention and our respect. It is a sad fact that the youngsters who represent our successes usually get less public attention than do those who disappoint us. We as a society need to give more attention when students do something worthwhile: in functional reading tests, in scholarship awards, in the statewide film festival, in gifted and talented or vocational education programs, in school spelling bees, dramas, art displays, band performances, choral groups, dance troupes, in any area in which students do outstanding work.

I have always believed that the teacher's note to mother that says, "We are all proud of Karen today. She turned in a perfect arithmetic paper," does more for Karen, for mother, and for public education than most other activities of comparable effect.

The point is that we need to make it clear to our children that we value achievement in school. All of us need to acknowledge accomplishment more clearly: the school, the home, the media, and society at large.

One of the unhappy results of our relative silence on the accomplishments of students is that too many people think the public schools are falling. They believe what they hear about the high school graduate who can't spell, the teenage drug bust, and the adolescent pregnancy. Lacking contrary evidence they draw the inescapable conclusion.

But there is plenty of evidence to the contrary: rising test scores and diplomas that assure minimum competencies, to be sure, but also the light that brightens the face of a serious student when he or she begins to understand a theorem in math or an E.E. Cummings poem.

Educators are aware that less than half the voting population nowadays has school age children. Ten or twenty years ago, when a substantial majority had a direct connection with the public schools through their children, it was easier to get public attention and recognition. Today we must try harder. And the public must listen more carefully. When we say "good work" to a student who wins a prize, we are helping establish that youngster's set of values and perhaps improving the quality of a leader of tomorrow.

Who cares? Everybody should.

The Moon is in its first quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

American humorist Will Rogers was born November 4, 1897.

On this date in history:

In 1842, Abraham Lincoln, 16th president of the United States, married Mary Todd in Springfield, Illinois.

In 1952, Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower was elected President, ending 20 years of Democratic Administrations. He defeated Adlai Stevenson.

In 1979, some 450 Moslem militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran, taking some 70 people hostage - 63 of them Americans.

In 1980, Ronald Reagan was elected 40th president of the United States in a landslide victory over Jimmy Carter. Reagan won 44 states and 489 electoral votes to 49 electoral votes from six states and the District of Columbia for Carter. The Republicans won control of the senate and the Democrats wound up with a reduced majority in the house.

A thought for the day:

Humorist Will Rogers said: "Everything is funny as long as it is happening to somebody else."

Area Native To Manage Narrows Celanese Plant

Vernon G. Kight, former technical manager and production manager at Celanese Fibers Co.'s Celco Plant at Narrows, is returnng as plant manager.

He will succeed John S. Higgins, who retired Nov. 30. Higgins has been plant manager since June 1971.

Kight has been filament and PBI product manager at the company's Charlotte, N.C., headquarters since August 1980. Prior to that, he was Celco technical manager from 1974 to 1978 and production manager from 1978 until he moved to Charlotte.

A West Virginia native, Kight joined Celanese in 1958 as a development engineer following graduation from West Virginia University with a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering. He is the son of Mrs. Theodore Kight of Silver Lake and the late Mr. Kight.

Kight was at the Amcelle Plant at Cumberland from 1958 to 1968, when he transferred to a now-closed Celanese facility at Rome, Ga. He remained there until 1974, when he was promoted to the Celco Plant.

Kight is married to the former Dolores Ann Wotring of Aurora, W. Va. They have three children: Mrs. Kimberly Kight Woods of Blacksburg, Va.; Mike, a 1981 graduate of Virginia Tech; and Greg, a junior at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Mrs. Kight is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wotring of Aurora.

Higgins joined Celanese at Celco in 1939 following graduation from Virginia Military Institute. He held various engineering and utilities assignments until 1959, when he transferred to the Amcelle Plant. He was production manager at the Amcelle Plant when he was appointed Celco Plant manager in June 1971.

Straight Talk About Aging

By Matthew Tayback
State Director On Aging

MODIFYING MEDICARE

The nation's Medicare program is at a crossroads.

Costs are rising at roughly 15 percent a year (they're expected to hit $48.2 billion in 1982), yet many Medicare fees are below the charges made and thus only one doctor in two will "accept assignment."

Accepting assignment means that a doctor will bill Medicare directly for his care of an elderly patient and then will accept as his total fee whatever amount Medicare finally pays. Other physicians send bills for their full fees to their elderly patients and require the patients themselves to collect whatever they can from Medicare. Usually the amount the elderly collects is less than the one they have to pay.

Because of these and quite a number of other problems, the Medicare program is under scrutiny by several government agencies, two of the most notable being the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the U.S. House Select Committee on Aging. As you would expect, approaches and resulting recommendations differ.

To deal with fraud, for instance, HHS proposes to allow its Secretary to impose civil financial penalties on those who submit fraudulent claims for Medicare reimbursement. The penalties could be severe and include an additional amount for damages up to twice the amount fraudulently claimed. The Secretary currently does not have this authority.

To reduce administrative costs, HHS would, over a five-year period, phase in a system of competitive bidding for the award of contracts for claims processing. This action would permit Medicare to contract with any public or private organization for the execution of claims processing functions. Currently, competitive contracting is not required; incentives for efficiency and economy do not presently exist.

In another area, HHS suggests the repeal of what it considers to be minor benefit expansions. (It would not, for instance, extend coverage to alcohol detoxification facilities).

As you can see from just these few examples, when it comes to Medicare, problems are numerous and solutions far from clear.

The point is, the situation is finally being studied and evaluated. That is vital when we are talking about a government program which has been successful — one whose benefits are welcomed by the elderly and anticipated by those still working, yet one whose costs are clearly out of control.

It can be anticipated that after all the evaluations and compromises have been made we may have a formual which will allow us to have a program of health benefits which is affordable by the government and by our senior citizens. This can only come about by compromise by all concerned including physicians and hospitals, the major providers of care.

Celebrates Birthday

Catharine Anderson of Loch Lynn was the guest of honor at a recent dinner party held at the home of her daughter, Amy Rolf, in Bainbridge, Ohio. The party celebrated Mrs. Anderson's 80th birthday.

Present, in addition to her daughter and son-in-law, Jack Rolf, were her son Tom Anderson and wife Shirley, and son David Anderson and his wife Roma. Also present were grandchildren Dennis Anderson, Wendy and Danny Crisostomo, Scott and Christa Rolf and Beth Anderson.

The occasion also marked the announcement of the expected arrival of Mrs. Anderson's first great-grandchild by Wendy and Danny Crisostomo.

Tax Revenues From Admissions, Amusements Up

Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein announced that Maryland's counties and incorporated cities and towns have received checks totalling $4,766,710 representing their share of admissions and amusement tax revenues collected during the first quarter of Fiscal Year 1982.

"The $4.7 million distributed is a 25.5% increase over the $3,801,751 returned to the subdivisions for the same period last year," Goldstein said. "Despite the continued economic uncertainty, Marylanders continue to spend growing amounts of money on leisure time activities."

Garrett County's share amounted to $32,740.79, compared to $26,156.11 for the same period last year.

The State Comptroller's office collects the admissions and amusement taxes at rates set by local officials and returns the revenue to the subdivisions quarterly.

AARP To Meet

The course was part of an annual West Virginia state rescue school sponsored by the West Virginia University Fire Service Extension and the Monongalia County Emergency Medical Services. The squad members pictured above had previously completed the introduction to mountain rescue and intermediate mountain rescue courses. In the photo, left to right, kneeling, are Randy Crabtree and John Feather. Standing, same order, are Kyle Isenhart, president of Rescue Systems, Inc., and special instructor in vertical and high-angle rescue and evacuation with the WVU Fire Service Extension; Fran Pope, Dave Evans, and Dan Swartzentruber. The other instructor for the advanced class was Bill Ramsey, paramedic with Monongalia County EMS. Kimberly Frantz Becomes Bride Of Randy Butler In August Ceremony

Kimberly Sue Frantz and Randy Scott Butler were united in marriage on August 8. The double-ring ceremony was performed by Reverends Dewayne Johnson and Robert D'Angelo in Maranatha Assembly of God, Grantsville. Charles Yommer, Sr., organist, accompanied Linda Williams, vocalist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary W. Frantz, Grantsville. Mr. Butler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Butler, Accident.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of sheer organza. The bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline trimmed with Chantilly lace. The sheer bishop sleeves had lace caps and cuffs. Lace encircled the waistline holding the skirt sweeping to a chapel train beneath a lace overlay with a lace hemline. A Mantilla of Chantilly lace held a chapel length veil of lace edged with bridal illusion.

She wore a strand of pearls, borrowed from her grandmother, and pearl earrings. She carried a bouquet of cascading peach roses and baby's breath atop a lace-covered Bible.

Lisa Frantz was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cheryl Frantz, bride's sister; Connie Wagner, groom's sister; Sharon Miller and Gale Wengerd. Tammy Wagner, groom's niece, was the flower girl.

Acting as his brother's best man was Doug Butler. Ushers were Duane Butler, groom's brother; Jeff Frantz and Gary Frantz, bride's brothers; and Gerald Harman. Eric Frantz, bride's brother, was the ring bearer.

A reception followed the ceremony in the old Maranatha Church. Thelma Emory, Marie Brenneman, Claire Saulpaw and Leona Maust served at the reception. Mrs. Ora Younkin served the cake. Pam Tressler registered guests.

The bride is a graduate of Northern High School. She is employed at Penn Alps Restaurant, Grantsville.

The groom is also a graduate of Northern High School. He is employed by Art Butler Auto Sales, Grantsville.

Upon their return from Canada, they established residence in Grantsville.

The bride was the guest of honor at a shower given by the waitresses of Penn Alps and one given by her sister. A rehearsal dinner was held at Hilltop Restaurant, Grantsville.

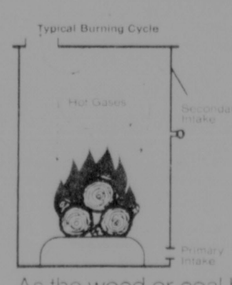
RIGHT NOW — Today — In approximately 4 hours — you can convert your home to warm, inexpensive wood heat and eliminate 60 - 80% of your current heating costs by doing only one thing: installing a Buck Stove in your existing fireplace. If you don't have an existing fireplace, the Buck Stove will add a warm attractive, free-standing fireplace to your home — and furnish your primary heat source.



The Buck Stove heating system is engineered to burn wood slowly, allowing a controlled, even flow of air across the fire. This precise draft control makes it easy to build a fire and eliminates constant fire tending.

As the wood or coal burns, unburned gases rise from the fire to the top of the stove. Upon contact with the top of the stove, they circulate to the rear of the firebox and downward back into the flame where they are burned as completely as possible.

TWO PLUS TWO EQUALS FIVE

For those of you inclined toward investing in residential income property, the question arises: "Should I start with two duplexes or one four-unit apartment house"?

Naturally, I am using minimum numbers, but the principle is the same. You will be better of financially with the most number of units in a building that you can afford rather than two separate buidings of half the number of units. The economic reasons are obvious. One lot, one tax bill, one boiler, one basic plumbing system and electrical system.

True, these costs are larger for larger buildings, but the cost per unit decreases in direct proportion to the number of units.

Consequently, if you buy for a minimum cash down, the greatest number of units you can get for your money, the better off you will be financially when you get to the bottom line of the income statement. Plus a real estate investment is the best hedge against inflation there is.

Survey Indicates GCC Students Most Likely To Attain Goals

In a recent state-wide survey designed to determine how successful community college students are in accomplishing their personal and academic goals, Garrett Community College ranked first, according to a release from GCC.

The survey was conducted by the 17 Maryland community colleges and the State Board for Community Colleges among both graduates and non-graduating students. The questionnaire, developed by the Maryland Community College Research group and used in this study, contained questions concerning the primary reasons for attending college and what the student hoped to accomplish.

The Student Goal Achievement Index summarizes student achievement in the four goal areas most often chosen by the students: employment, transfer to a four-year college, personal interest/self-enrichment, and degree attainment.

A table summarizing the 1976 survey which had a 47 percent response was published in a recent SBCC Bulletin. On this table Garrett Community College is shown as having a Student Goal Achievement Index of 78, the highest of any community college in Maryland. The degree of achievement indicated for the four goal areas by Garrett students was as follows: 80 percent for personal interest/self-enrichment; 100 percent for transfer to other colleges; 73 percent for employment, and 67 percent for degree attainment.

The object of the program is teaching prospective employees how to successfully list employment descriptions, duties, responsibilities, etc., when preparing to reenter the job market.

For further information, persons may contact the center at 334-9184.

Maryland Farm Bureau Members To Meet Dec. 3-5

Nearly 1,000 members of Maryland Farm Bureau are expected to gather at the Carousel Hotel in Ocean City December 3-5 for the annual meeting of the state's largest farm organization.

Convention attenders will meet to conduct business, elect officers and hear reports from the current officers.

"The main purpose of this meeting is to determine policy for Farm Bureau for 1982," said Leon Enfield, state Farm Bureau president.

According to Enfield, most of the attenders will be delegates from each of the 23 county units. They will represent 12,886 farm families that make up the membership of Maryland Farm Bureau.

On the second and third days of the convention delegates will consider over 100 resolutions that have been submitted by the county Farm Bureaus. There are state and national issues that affect the economic or social well-being of members. Those accepted by the delegates become policy guides for the organization, to be implemented by the elected leaders and staff.

Policy guidelines at all levels of Farm Bureau — county, state and national — originate at the grass-roots of the organization, according to Enfield. Individual members, discussion groups, or county committees may submit resolutions for consideration.

Unauthorized Removal Of Grain Will Bring Penalty

William B. Crum, Chairperson of the Maryland State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, says producers who remove farm-stored grain, whether it is under loan or in reserve, without first obtaining authorization will be subject to penalty.

To strengthen farm prices, the ASCS reserve loan program provides loans to farmers who hold their grain off the market for a specific period or until market prices reach certain levels. The grain under loan is then stored in an approved facility on the farm or in a commercial warehouse.

"Program regulations require that farmers notify our office if they intend to sell the grain, or if the grain is out of condition and needs to be moved," Crum said. If the grain is to be used for feed, the loan must be repaid before it is removed from the storage bin.

Farmers who remove reserve grain without prior authorization from ASCS will be required to pay an early redemption charge. They will lose storage payments on the quanity of grain removed and will be subject to having the loan called. Also, those farmers will be required to repay all storage payments, plus interest, in addition to the loan principal, plus interest and at least the release price for the commodity times the reserve loan quantity liquidated. Crum said the violators also may be denied future farm stored loans.

When reserve grain is authorized for release, farmers may pay off the loan and sell the grain, leave it in the reserve, or pay off the loan and hold the grain.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County: The Respondents, Gladys Skipper, Janet Skipper and Ross Skipper, and any unknown heirs, devisees or personal representatives of Gladys Skipper, Janet Skipper and Ross Skipper, are hereby notified that Complainant, Iris Violet Skipper, has filed an action to quiet title to real estate situate in Election District No. 14 of Garrett County, said real estate having been purchased by Complainant and her late husband, James Leo Skipper, from the heirs of Romanus M. Skipper, by deed dated December 4, 1958, and recorded in Liber No. 214, folio 264, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland. The said Respondents are heirs of Romanus Skipper and, as such, were apparently owners of an undivided one-seventh interest in the subject property, but never joined in the aforesaid deed. F. Rossing Smith To Speak During The Key Event

Dr. F. Rossing Smith of Roane County, W. Va. will preach during the Key Event, a contemporary model of evangelism designed for the local church, at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Oakland this weekend, November 6, 7 and 8. The public is invited to attend.

The program will cover the Incarnation, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection and Pentecost. According to program coordinators, it has as its primary aim the enabling of "church members to become disciples."

Dr. Smith received his bachelor of divinity and masters degrees from Garrett Theological Seminary in Evanston, Ill., and his doctor of divinity from West Virginia Wesleyan College in Buckhannon, W. Va. He has traveled to mission fields in South America, Africa and the Middle East.

Friday's program will begin at 5:30 p.m. with a youth session, followed by a carry-in dinner at 6:30 p.m. At 7:30 p.m. the Incarnation and Christmas will be discussed following celebration.

A Discipleship Seminar will be featured Saturday at 10 a.m., followed by a family luncheon at 12 noon. Saturday evening's program will begin with celebration at 7:30 p.m. and discussion of the Crucifixion and Good Friday, to be followed by a Discipleship Seminar at 8:30 p.m.

Church school classes will take place Sunday at 9:30 a.m., followed by celebration and discussion of the resurrection and Easter at 10:45 a.m. A youth session will be held at 6 p.m., to be followed by celebration, discussion of Pentecost, and a call and commission to Christian discipleship.

Gardening Project Deemed A Success

The 160 families which participated in the Gardening Project sponsored by Garrett County Community Action's Community Food and Nutrition Program showed a total yield valued at $23,278.71 or an average of $145.49 per family. The cost to the program shows ah average of $14.34 per family.

Patricia Callis, program director, stated that the program was a success, despite wet and cold weather conditions during the planting season. Evaluations were conducted by all of the gardens by Ray Teets, nutrition aide, and John Guthrie, volunteer from the Crellin area.

Some seeds for the project were donated by Agway, Inc., Oakland, and Southern States Inc., Richmond, Virginia. The majority of the seeds were purchased at below wholesale cost, keeping the project cost at a minimum, according to Ms. Callis. With cuts in funding anticipated for the coming year, CAC is seeking donations to enable the project to continue, she added.

County Schools Report Head Lice Outbreak

Broadford Elementary students are looking one another over a little more carefully this week after a recent outbreak of head lice there.

School principal Wayne Johnson reported that only two actual cases of the lice have been discovered, but 30 cases of nits, eggs of a louse, have been found since the first discovery last Thursday.

School staff immediately began checking students at the school Thursday and students with the nits were sent home with instructions to their parents for treatment. Cases were found Friday and Monday, but none was found yesterday or this morning.

Johnson said cloak rooms, lockers and infected rooms were sprayed with a chemical recommended by the Garrett County Health Department to kill the parasites.

Johnson said he sent letters home to parents describing how to identify the parasites and how to treat someone with lice.

Al Coviello, supervisor of pupil services, noted cases have also been reported at Kitzmiller Elementary School. He added there were outbreaks of head lice in some county schools last year. Other counties in the tri-state are also experiencing outbreaks of head lice.

Coviello pointed out the importance of parents' cooperation with the effort to stop the head lice from spreading. He explained head lice are very contagious.

The papers sent home with the parents, issued jointly by

Christmas Plans Finalized By Merchant Group

The Oakland Downtown Merchants' and Businessmen's Association made final arrangements for this year's Christmas Promotion at its meeting yesterday, conducted by Dee Raynovich, president.

Each store in downtown Oakland will donate a $100 gift certificate and there will be a drawing for approximately five winners of the certificates every Saturday, November 28 through December 24. Customers can begin signing up to win certificates on November 21 in participating stores. In order to win in any one week customers must sign up the week of that drawing. All slips will be saved for the final Grand Prize drawing to be held December 24. The Grand Prize is a 19-inch color television set. Winners will be announced live on WMSG Radio each week.

This year's annual Christmas Parade will be held Friday, November 27, the day after Thanksgiving, at 7 p.m. Traditional popcorn balls will be distributed following the

AS THE CHRISTMAS SEASON APPROACHES the White House in Washington, D.C., is once again preparing its spectacular Christmas tree display. For another year approximately 80 trees will come from the tree farm of Jim Holler in Crellin, to be placed around the large center tree at the White House grounds. Workers, pictured above, began this morning to unearth, wrap and pack the Garrett County trees for shipping to Washington, D.C.

Bolden Prepares For 1982 Session Of Legislature

Delegate DeCorsey Bolden (R-Allegany, Garrett) has begun to file bills to be introduced during the 1982 session of the Maryland General Assembly which will meet from January 13 to April 13, 1982.

Among the two Bolden has already filed is HB No. 3 which established terms of office for both appointed members and elected officials who by law serve on the Deep Creek Lake Advisory and Review Committee. In the bill, Bolden proposes that elected officials serve for the duration of their elected terms in office and that appointed members serve concurrently with the elected terms of Garrett County commissioners.

HB No. 7, as proposed by Bolden, would require wholesalers who sell alcoholic beverages in the county to provide the Garrett County Liquor Control Board with a copy of all invoices of sales to any Garrett County alcoholic beverages license holder within 10 working days from the date the order was received by the licensee. Violations of this law would be a misdemeanor.

Bolden will file six more bills

Coal Strike Blamed For Increase In Potomac Edison Electric Bills

Last summer's coal strike is currently being blamed for the 13.8 percent fuel rate adjustment charge rise being felt by Potomac Edison Company customers in Western Maryland.

Final approval to 5.7 percent of that increase was granted Thursday by Maryland's Public Service commission, according to company officials. The noticeable increase showed up on customer bills beginning September 8.

A second fuel adjustment increase of 8.1 percent, approved last month by the PSC, is currently being paid by customers. Attorneys from the Maryland People's Counsel have asked the commission to reconsider the decision for approval, representing the consumer interests in utility rate cases.

As a result of the combined increases, monthly fuel adjustment charges have risen approximately $1.09 for a customer who uses 500 kilowatt hours a month, and $4.32 a month for a 2,000 kwh customer. Persons who heat with electricity will probably use about 2000 kwh per month during the winter.

The fuel adjustment rate, only a small portion of the billing system, reflects an average two percent jump on the average bill.

Fuel rate charges can be increased by Potomac Edison on a provisional basis. If the PSC refuses to endorse a fuel rate hike, customers are reimbursed what they have paid. Approximately 130,000 customers are served by PE in the seven Western Maryland counties.

On October 30, People's Counsel attorney Gary Alexander asked the PSC to re-evaluate its approval of the August 7 fuel rate increase due to a breakdown of a turbine generator near St. Mary's, W. Va. One of two generators there was out of service for nearly three months this year, and had been in service less than six months when it broke down.

Alexander argued that PE should be responsible for the negligence of its contractors, stating that the company should take its loss.

Barn Destroyed By Fire Tuesday

Fire destroyed a barn located off the Finzel Road yesterday around noon. Firefighters from Eastern Garrett and Frostburg fire departments were summoned at 11:52 a.m. Eastern Garrett arrived on the scene first and, seeing that the structure was already destroyed, instructed Frostburg to return to their station.

The house that had once existed near the barn had been gone for years, according to a spokesman for the Eastern Garrett Fire Department, and the owner was not immediately known.

Fire personnel remained on the scene until about 1 p.m. Communications were handled by Allegany County Civil Defense.

Solid Waste System Transition Not As Smooth As Anticipated

The transition period from county to contracted operation of the county solid waste system has not been as smooth as county officials had hoped as citizens call in to complain about dumpster sites overflowing with garbage and the new operator discovers Garrett County is not the easiest of places to haul garbage.

"They got more than they bargained for," said Ken Metheny, interim administrator of the county roads department, at a meeting with the Garrett County commissioners Tuesday when they discussed the transition of county operation to operation by Browning-Ferris Industries, Winchester, Va.

Metheny noted that the BFI took over operation of the system the week of October 19, although county dumpsters were still at the sites. He explained BFI decided to operate two trucks in the county rather than one after the lone truck broke down the first week of operation and after the company became familiar with the rough terrain of the county.

Although officials of BFI could not be contacted for comment, Metheny said they have assured him that they are getting the sites under control and are beginning to clean up the debris covering the grounds of the sites.

Metheny added that another factor not considered by BFI was adequate winter preparation of their vehicles.

Metheny told the commissioners the BFI officials were concerned with the amount of garbage dumped on the ground at the sites. Commissioner Ernest Gregg noted that people will respect the sites more once they are cleaned and properly maintained.

Another point raised was that the state littering laws have not been properly enforced which would also help the situation.

The commissioner noted they would be passing an ordinance to specify types of garbage allowed to be deposited at the dumpster sites.

HOW DO YOU SPELL RELIEF? B-F-I, WE HOPE — This unsightly dumpster site was a typical scene throughout the county last week as Browning-Ferris Industries, the new operator of the county solid waste system, struggled to adjust to hauling garbage in Garrett County. Unforeseen problems, such as the rough terrain in the county, have been reasons given for what appears like a halt in garbage service. Although BFI officials could not be contacted for comment, county officials say they have been assured that BFI will soon have the sites under control.

Swanton Teenager Still Critical Following Single-Vehicle Mishap

A Swanton teenager, 15-year-old Robin Hinebaugh, was critically injured Saturday afternoon in a single-vehicle mishap on Route 50, approximately two-tenths of a mile east of Table Rock Road, near Red House.

Miss Hinebaugh was a passenger in a 1979 Willys Jeep operated by 16-year-old Carol Jean Jones of Oakland. Both young women were taken to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by the Southern Rescue Squad. Miss Jones was treated and released.

Miss Hinebaugh was transferred to West Virginia University Medical Center from Garrett County Memorial Hospital by Life Flyte of Pittsburgh, Pa. A hospital spokesman reported she had serious head injuries as a result of the crash.

According to Tfc. Gary Resh, McHenry detachment, Maryland State Police, who investigated the accident, the driver said she was eastbound on Rt. 50 when she swerved to the right to avoid an object in the roadway.

As a result of the action, she ran off the right side of the highway, losing control of the vehicle. When the Jeep returned to the road, it crossed over and struck the left embankment, overturning. No charges have been filed at this time.

Miss Hinebaugh was still listed in critical condition early this morning by personnel at West Virginia University Medical Center.

Gorman Fire Department responded to the scene of the accident, as well as Southern Rescue and state police.

County Liquor Store To Close Dec. 31

The Garrett County Liquor Store in Oakland will close on December 31 ending the county's 39-year venture in the liquor business.

Brenda Butscher, chairman of the Garrett County Liquor Control Board, made the announcement of the store closing at a meeting Tuesday with the Garrett County commissioners.

The work force at the store has been reduced from five to two over the past year, some have left on their own for other jobs, reported Joseph Wolf, administrative officer.

Butscher stated her owners in the county have been notified that both the retail and wholesale operations of the liquor dispensary will end and have been told this week was the final week for orders.

After this week the dispensary will try to deplete its stock before the store closes. Butscher said the Board was most concerned with getting rid of the slow-moving merchandise and the collector's items.

Wolf told the commissioners the store currently has an inventory of $60,000 and Friday he had turned over $27,000 to the county from dispensary sales and other sources of revenue. The money from sale of the merchandise would be used to pay off bills with the remainder to be submitted to the county treasury.

Board member Bill Naylor noted the Board would advertise for the sale of the fixtures in the store such as the shelving and cash registers.

Naylor stated he has some ideas how to attract sales of the slow-moving merchandise in the store, but he was not willing to divulge his ideas. Butscher told the commissioners prices of the merchandise would be reduced before the onset of the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays and deer hunting season.

Some of the reasons given for closing the Oakland dispensary were the competition from other stores and the recommendation by Delegate DeCorsey Bolden and Senator Edward Mason that the Board phase out the operations of the county dispensary.

The county will still continue to receive revenues from the county beer tax and the quarterly surcharge on county liquor license holders.

Schools To Close Friday

Parents and students are reminded that all Garrett County schools will be closed on Friday due to parent conferences. Parents are encouraged to visit the schools in an effort to learn about day-to-day pupil activities.

Snyder Trial Scheduled To Begin Monday

The trial of James Dwight Snyder, Oakland, who is charged with seven counts in connection with federal income taxes, is scheduled to begin Monday at 10 a.m. in Baltimore Federal District Court. Both Snyder and Elizabeth H. Trimble, Prosecuting Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Maryland, indicated they expect the trial to last about two weeks, and both noted that "it should be interesting."

Snyder, 45, a local cabinetmaker, was indicted by a federal grand jury in May and charged with three counts of willful failure to file federal income taxes from 1973 through 1975, three counts of concealment of assets for the same years and concealment of assets for 1980. Snyder, who has apparently not paid federal taxes for the past 10 years, pled not guilty to the charges during an arraignment before Federal District Judge Norman Ramsey in Baltimore on June 5. The Oakland man claims he is not opposed to paying taxes, but feels he was "mistreated" by the Internal Revenue Service, and he intends to base his case on Constitutional rights.

The charges followed Snyder's arrest on April 25, bringing to a head 11 years of encounters, investigations, liens and court proceedings between Snyder and the IRS, since the Oakland man reportedly began filing tax returns and withholding information in 1971. Snyder's case, presented to the Grant Jury by Ms. Trimble, has gained national publicity, particularly in regard to an IRS seizure at his home and place of business in February, 1980. The case was previously investigated by Special Agents with the IRS, and numerous Garrett County residents were called before the Grand Jury in Baltimore last May to offer testimony regarding the case.

Arthur Tronokas, a tax lawyer from Georgia, who filed a motion in June to have the trial moved from Baltimore to Elkins, W. Va. That motion was denied.

According to Russell T.

THE LEAVES FALL IN AUTUMN, with wind as their catalyst. Piles fo roll in, grounds carpeted to crunch in . . . the poet could go on and on. Appalachian Center Directors Approve Client Salary Fund

The Board of Directors and Parent Advisory Board of the Appalachian Center in Oakland, a facility for handicapped adults, recently voted unanimously to adopt a new client salary fund. The program was approved on a three-month trial basis, because it will have to rely on public contributions in order to continue.

Charlotte Griffith, acting director, stated that the client salary fund began "as a realistic recognition of the fact that we have a need at the center for custodial services, but no money in the budget (which was put together by the former director) to pay for the services."

Ms. Griffith said the dilemma left three options, the first to ask the staff to take on the additional duties. She noted, however, that the staff is already overburdened in terms of job duties and would not have the time to take on the additional work.

The second option, she said, was to ask the clients to perform the services needed and not pay them which would violate federal Department of Labor regulations, and the third, the one accepted, was to utilize clients who are capable of performing these services and create a fund through public contributions to pay them.

Ms. Griffith stressed that the fund and program are not to be confused with the businesses created through the center, as they already pay at least minimum wage and do not depend on public contributions. She said the jobs to be performed are not the type of jobs that produce a product, while profits from the businesses are generated back into the program.

The use of a large work force would involve an amount of paperwork the staff is not in the position to assume, Ms. Griffith stated, so the center looked at a few individuals who were not working as much as they could, but who have the skills. The program will employ three people, all of whom are part-time. Ms. Griffith said it will not involve a lot of hours, but the clients will be paid minimum wage for washing dishes, running the vacuum, handling the garbage and performing other custodial duties.

"People don't realize how often clients here ask, 'Do you have work for me?' " said Ms. Griffith. "Those who have the skills are trained in the workshops," she added, while the others see their peers gainfully employed and want to be part of that. The individuals in the client salary program will use their skills toward productivity and it will work to their benefit, Ms. Griffith noted, in keeping with one of the center's goals, to "get people employed and off Social Security and welfare."

The center receives a monthly contribution from the Catholic Daughters of America, and after talking with that group, that contribution has been placed in the client salary fund. In addition, the center raised $90 by renting chairs in front of its building during the Autumn Glory Parade, and $20 by participating in Browning's Supermarket register tape program, all of which went into the salary fund. Two private individuals have pledged contributions for the program, and the Garrett Organization for the Handicapped recently pledged up to $500 for the client salary fund.

Other contributions to the Appalachian Center include the Oakland Rotary, the Grantsville Lodge of the Fraternal Order of Police, and Woodmen of the World.

Ms. Griffith noted that this year the center is not receiving $15,000 requested in its transportation budget. The center is taking measures to address cutbacks in funding, she said, and it has initated a fee for services, in order to remain open. "Our funding source, however, continues to hold the bakery and the center as a model throughout the state," she added.

This year a large percentage of the center's funding is coming from the Mental Retardation/Developmental Disabilities Administration, with a small workshop grant from the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and monies from the Garrett County Health Department distributed through the Garrett County Commissioners.

Ms. Griffith emphasized the fact that the center is nonprofit. Once the center is not operating in a deficit, she added, profits from the businesses will help to reduce the state share of funding, and the center will be moving toward self-sufficiency.

Update On Rabies Outbreak Issued

Secretary of Natural Resources, James B. Coulter, recently announced an "all-out" cooperative effort between Department of Natural Resources personnel and appropriate units of the Maryland Department of Health and Mental Hygiene to help control the recent outbreak of rabies in Western Maryland.

Secretary Coulter's action followed a report of the rabies outbreak provided by Dr. Kenneth Crawford, chief veterinarian of the Department of Health.

The report stated that the total number of confirmed cases of rabies in the state this year to date is 47, all but 15 of which were bats.

Dr. Crawford also reported that 17 of the 47 cases occurred in Allegany County within a 14 mile radius around Cumberland. Two of the 17 cases were bats, seven were skunks, six were raccoons, one was a groundhog and one was a fox.

Dr. Crawford also stated that the outbreak appears at this time to be concentrated in the Cumberland area of Allegany County.

Preventive measures recommended by Dr. Crawford for hunters, trappers and all other persons who may be exposed to suspected animals are as follows:

1. Call the local health office in your county (see list of persons and phone numbers enclosed) to get information about or arrange for the three-shot, pre-exposure vaccination, a highly effective vaccine with minimal side effects.

2. Have all pets (dogs and cats) vaccinated against rabies by a veterinarian.

3. In addition to the pre-exposure vaccination, hunters and trappers should be equipped with approved rubber gloves to prevent infection before handling harvested animals.

4. Do not approach or touch any animal displaying abnormal behavior such as aggression, no fear of humans, roaming around during daylight hours or other activities not normal in healthy wild animals.

5. Report all such animals to the local health authorities as soon as possible.

For any information persons should call the local health department office, according to Crawford.

County School Board Releases Meeting Agenda

The Garrett County Board of Education has released its agenda for its November 12 meeting to begin at 1:30 p.m. in the meeting room at the Board of Education office building, Oakland.

During discussion of curriculum concerns, to begin at 1:40 p.m., the Board will take action on resignations from and appointments to the vocational advisory council and will discuss the status of vocational needs assessment, the youth employabilty project and the co-curricular draft policy.

At 2:50 p.m., under administrative concerns the Board will discuss possible construction of a tennis court at Southern High School, a recent bus inspection, and conversion to coal or gas heating systems at the high schools.

The Board will conduct an executive session at 4:30 p.m. to discuss personnel concerns and will reopen the meeting to the public at 6:30 p.m. for miscellaneous concerns.

Commission Takes Steps To Construct Transmission Line

The Garrett County Sanitary Commission decided at the November 3 meeting to request Appalachian Regional Commission grant funds for construction of a transmission line for the Mt. Lake Water Company. In order to receive approval from ARC the transmission line has to be considered a separate project and the commission would have to come up with the local portions, about 20 percent. The total estimated cost of the project is $204,000, but the alternative to constructing the line would be for the commission to buy into the Oakland Water Company which would necessitate a rate increase to water users in the district, according the Wendell Beitzel, Sanitary District Administrator.

Beitzel stated that the commission will attempt to borrow from a local lending institution for the local share, on a short-term basis. He added that if the ARC application falls through the commission will have to go to Farmers Home Administration to seek funding assistance for the project.

The commission received three proposals for engineering services on the transmission line, and it formally accepted a proposal from the low bidder, Western Maryland Associates, Oakland, at its Tuesday meeting subject to FmHA approval. If approved, the firm will proceed immediately with design of the project, Beitzel said.

In expectation of ARC funds for construction of the transmission line, and concurrent with FmHA guidelines, the commission has proceeded to repair streets in Mt. Lake Park and Loch Lynn. Funding for the street repair, which is being done by Keystone Lime Company, is from grant funds allocated for the Water Rehabilitation Project.

Possible Prank Investigated As Attempted Arson

What may have begun as a childish prank in Mt. Lake Park is being investigated as attempted arson by the Garrett County Sheriff's Department.

Paul William Cosner, Jr., of I Street, had a burning football placed on the front porch of his residence Thursday at 7:15 p.m. Police said the football had been cut open and inside it contained a few pieces of paper, the football tube, a chicken bone and an onion peel. The paper was the only item that burned, and police said there was no sign of gas or flammable liquid accelerants contained in the football.

Tire Slashings Reported Near Southern High

The Garrett County Sheriff's Department is investigating complaints of weekend tire slashings in the Southern High School area.

Juanita Bosley told police Saturday morning that some cars at Southern High School had flat tires. Investigation revealed the tires on three vehicles parked in the school lot had been slashed with a knife or some other sharp instrument, while other vehicles in the lot were not disturbed.

A 1978 Pontiac Grand Am, owned by Thomas Edward Bosley, Oakland, had four tires slashed; a 1979 Ford Fairmont, owned by Arthur G. and Jarlath Fitzwater, Swanton, had two tires slashed, and a 1979 Ford Fairmont, owned by Joyce Rowan Andrews, Mt. Lake Park, had one tire slashed.

Police said all of the victims had parked their vehicles in the lot Friday morning and left Calvert County to attend a football game. They returned late Saturday night.

In a separate case, William T. Welch, Oakland, told police that a tire on his school bus, which was parked at Par Matt Lanes, Mt. Lake Park, was slashed sometime over the weekend. The tire is valued at $70.

Coal Company Reports $1,349 Loss By Theft

Several cases involving theft were reported to the Garrett County Sheriff's Department last week, including theft from vehicles at a coal site which resulted in an estimated $1,349 loss.

The Buffalo Coal Company, Bayard, W. Va., reported that items were taken from four trucks at a coal site off Wilson Road sometime between 10:30 a.m. Sunday and 6:30 a.m. Monday. Thieves entered the property and removed three lug wrenches and sockets, two CB radios, an open and box wrench, a crescent wrench, two wheels and tires (size 10-22), three six-volt batteries and four extension cords from company coal trucks. The incident, which resulted in an approximate $1,349 loss, was reported by the company superintendent.

Leo F. Miller, Grantsville, also reported theft from vehicles at a barnyard off Miller Road, sometime during the night of November 2. Unknown persons removed assorted wrenches, sockets and miscellaneous tools located in tool boxes on two tractors parked near a barn on his property. Also taken was a Craftsman tool box which was in the bed of a pickup truck also parked near the barn. A total loss is estimated at $400.

In a separate case, Harold Park of Oakland informed the department of lost property valued at approximately $1,000. The loss occurred along the Silver Knob Road between Hutton and Accident on Thursday, between 8 and 8:43 a.m.

Park had a portable generator on the back of his pickup truck while traveling that route, and when he arrived at his destination in Accident it was missing, believed to have fallen off the truck. Anyone finding a Winco Mod. P 205 B8, IM/B portable generator, weighing about 150 pounds with a Serial Number 55310, KHF51, should contact the Sheriff's Office.

In a case involving burglary, the owner of Joe's Place, Oakland, told police that establishment was entered Saturday morning between the hours of 2:30 and 8 a.m. Entry was made by breaking out a kitchen storage room window.

The intruders carried away 10 liters of various liquors and a Power Master steel and wood crossbow, unassembled and still in a styrofoam container. A total loss is estimated at $155. Police said nothing else in the establishment was disturbed.

Three complaints of destruction of property within the county were filed last week.

A driver with R. Bruce Fike & Sons, Uniontown, Pa. told police that someone sho several BBs into the windshields of two delivery trucks, both owned by that company, while they were parked at the loading dock of Browning's Supermarket, Route 135, Mt. Lake Park, on Thursday at 6:30 a.m. The shots caused chips in both windshields. No estimate of damage was placed.

In a separate case, Phoenix Construction Company, Cumberland, reported that a window in that company's field office trailer was broken out sometime over the weekend. The trailer is located adjacent to Route 42 near Elder Hill for work on the Route 42 project. The window was a jalousie-type with two panes, approximately 10x30 inches each. Damage was to the glass only, amounting to an estimated $20 loss.

Mary M. Crowe, Mt. Lake Park, told police that someone pulled down a handrail to the outside stairs of her residence and placed it on H Street at 10:30 p.m. Saturday. No loss value was placed.

GARRETT COUNTY SMOKERS are being urged by local volunteers of the American Cancer Society to participate in the fifth annual Great American Smokeout by pledging a day of freedom from cigarettes on Thursday, November 19. The campaign is an effort to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours, hopefully to prove to them that they can give them up altogether. In the above photo, Garrett County Sheriff June Evans signs a pledge card while Kathy Eiswert, local Smokeout chairman, serves as a witness. According to a survey conducted by the Gallup Organization, nearly 16.5 million American smokers attempted to give up cigarettes on Smokeout Day last year. Just under five million succeeded for a full 24 hours and, one to ten days later, 2.2 million were still not smoking.

Gasoline Theft Reported Again By County Roads

The Garrett County Roads Department, Accident Branch, and the Garrett County Processing and Package Corporation, also of Accident, last week reported cases involving theft of gasoline to the Garrett County Sheriff's Department. The two incidents reported by the Roads Department added to numerous complaints of that type filed during the past several weeks.

Garrett County Processing and Package Corp. told police that approximately 50 gallons of gas was removed from a tractor and loader at a peat bog along Stevens Road, sometime during the night of November 1 or early morning hours of November 2.

A storage building at that location was broken into and unknown persons also removed two cases of Discal HX Plus oil and Exxon Extra oil. Police said there were two sets of tracks leading to the machinery and the storage building. The culprits had disconnected and drained the gas line leading to the loader, and the lock on the storage building had been pried off and thrown into a nearby grove of pine trees.

No other items were missing or damaged, however the company reports a total estimated loss of $160.

The branch foreman at the Accident Roads Department garage reported two additional thefts of gasoline from county vehicles, apparently stolen while they were parked in the garage lot.

An unknown amount of gas was removed from one vehicle which was parked in the lot Monday night, November 2, with a full tank. Tuesday the truck went to a garage for repairs and was returned to the department Wednesday morning. The driver refueled the vehicle with 80 gallons of gasoline that day when it apparently became empty.

The second incident there occurred over the weekend, when approximately 30 gallons of gas was taken from a county dump truck, the only one parked outside the garage. Police said the culprits again broke a chain from the gas tank cap to remove the gasoline. An estimated loss is $35.40.

Documents, Cash Stolen From Area Dwelling

The residence of a retired man in Friendsville was entered and important papers and cash were stolen on November 3, between 6 and 6:30 p.m., according to the Garrett County Sheriff's Department.

Gilbert Edward Friend, 60, who lives off White Rock Crosscut Road, told police he left his home at 6 p.m., and walked to a nearby residence to visit a friend. Another neighbor appeared there about 15 minutes later and informed Mr. Friend that he was just in his house. The passer-by said he saw a lot of smoke in the Friend residence so he went in (it was unlocked) and put out a cigarette.

Mr. Friend said he did not have a cigarette burning, and he returned home to investigate. He discovered a knife and a metal box containing important papers and $105 in cash missing from the dwelling. The knife is approximately 10 inches long with a fixed blade and brown spotted handle, contained in a brown leather sheath and valued at $20. The box is red in color, approximately 12 inches in length, eight inches in width and six inches deep.

Deer Park Hot Meals Program To Remain Open

The Deer Park Hot Meals Program, scheduled to be closed this fall, will remain open to serve senior citizens this year, announced Marilyn Metheny, director of the Garrett County Commission on Aging.

The Commission, operator of the hot meals program, had announced it would close the program at the Deer Park Community Building because it could not afford to continue to employ a janitor to fuel the coal furnace at the building during the winter months.

Originally the Center was to be closed Oct. 1, but local donations helped to keep the Center open until Nov. 1 which gave the Commission time to explore alternative ways to finance the employment of a janitor.

In the meantime, said Metheny, they acquired funds through CETA for a young man to fuel the furnace for six months. By then, Metheny believes weather will be warm enough that a full-time janitor will not be needed.

BIBLES DONATED TO GARRETT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL — Approximately 90 large print Gideon Bibles were given last week to the Garrett County Memorial Hospital for use in patient rooms. The Bibles were presented by the Garrett County Camp of Gideons International, a group of professional businessmen who include among their Christian services the distribution of Bibles in hospitals, nursing homes, hotels, motels and schools. Pictured above, from left to right, are Gorman Beitzel, secretary-treasurer of the Garrett County Camp; Robert Mayfield, minister and orderly at the hospital; John Irving, president of the Garrett County Camp; Charlotte Bock, Director of Nursing at the hospital; and Lucille Martin, Assistant Director of Nursing. Irving explained that Gideons International places approximately one million free Bibles every 17 days throughout the world. The local camp has placed over 600 Bibles in Garrett County to date, purchased by the camp through monies raised. For more information on Gideons International, persons may contact John Irving at 334-8873.

Unsettling Request . . .

A Maryland legislative committee, called the Administrative, Executive and Legislative Review Committee, yesterday asked Kalman Hettleman, the secretary of human resources, to devise a "creative" plan that would put approximately 36,000 former welfare recipients back on the welfare rolls. (See story on page 16). These persons were eliminated from the rolls when President Reagan's economic plan went into effect October 1.

There is something extremely unsettling about such a request. What the committee is suggesting, in effect, is that Hettleman rework some figures, thus providing a loophole to defy this portion of the Reagan economic program.

A few months ago in this column we identified a number of the situations in which welfare recipients in Garrett County would no longer be on the welfare rolls. These included those persons still receiving child support checks, even though the step-father in the family was earning a large salary. Other persons declared no longer eligible were those couples living under the same roof with another couple, usually parents, claiming to live in totally separate quarters, with separate kitchens, etc., and both receiving welfare checks.

This is one of the major difficulties with blanket judgments and blanket programs. There will always be some who need and deserve the help, but are eliminated from the program, and then there will be those who abuse the program and have no right to be included. A blanket decision is often the easiest and least expensive, but perhaps it would be far better to spend what is necessary to better identify those who should and should not be welfare recipients.

Persons should not be left to starve or freeze to death if they can't make it on their own. But those who can work and have the opportunity to work, but choose not to, should be prepared to bear the natural consequences of their decision.

The Party's Over . . .

By Carol Kapel

Well, it's done. The curtain has closed, the applause has died, the laughter has subsided, the makeup is gone.

Oliver is home with his grandfather. Fagin, the Artful Dodger, and the gang have disappeared into the streets of old London, as have Beadle Bumble, Widow Corney, and the workhouse boys.

Memories of the production will forever remain in the minds of hundreds of Garrett County residents, family members, and friends as one of the most successful ventures of the county arts-minded persons to date.

How sad . . . now that it's over. Even sadder is the one point so often missed by the audience.

Behind the scenes of every production of any size is a crew of remarkable individuals who escape the spotlight each time. The producer, the stage manager, the musical accompanist, the props crew . . . these persons get lost somewhere between the opening night excitement and the last curtain call. The players and directors are greeted, congratulated, and talked about for weeks afterward. The stage hands, the lighting consultants, the sound systems engineers, are too often left behind in the still of the auditorium.

How fitting it would be to make it a point to at least remember those silent figures behind every great production as we applaud, laugh, and ask for more.

Dear Editor:

After reading David J. Koontz's letter in the November 4th edition of The Republican I felt the need to respond. Mr. Koontz's attempt to discredit Ms. Griffith is completely unreasonable. What is wrong with seeking contributions to set up a salary fund to pay handicapped workers, especially if these workers would not be hired without such funds. I personally would like to see the handicapped given the chance they deserve for employment in any way possible. Many scholarship funds are set up in exactly the same way as Ms. Griffith's plan. Without scholarships many needy students would not receive the education they deserve. These students become more productive after they receive the education just as the handicapped workers would become more productive after given the chance to learn and hold responsible jobs.

If the Appalachian Center is not profitable it cannot be blamed on Ms. Griffith for she has been Acting Director for only a short period of time. Any business needs working capital to start and during these times of tight money perhaps outside contributions are the only hope for the continuation of this needed program.

Finally, I believe that a more dedicated and qualified person to be appointed director of the Appalachian Center than Ms. Charlotte Griffith would be very hard to find if not impossible. Her past achievements speak for themselves. She has devoted much time and effort to the handicapped. Without her there would be no group home. Each year she spends countless hours promoting the Garrett Organization of the Handicapped. Therefore, Ms. Charlotte Griffith's intentions could not possibly be for personal employment only as stated by Mr. Koontz.

Sincerely,
James P. Neville

Dear Editor:

We are writing in response to the letter published in last week's Republican (Nov. 4, 1981) apparently written by a former employee of one of the local nursing homes, "Injured Employee."

The writer is correct about the "Patient Bill of Rights," it is our policy to care for and protect those patients under our care. We are taught early in our Orientation and Training Program how to handle patients with dignity and respect, no matter how confused, disoriented, or upset they may be.

Employees are also instructed in reporting procedures so that any physically aggressive behavior towards a member of the staff is reported immediately to the Charge Nurse and Physician and appropriate steps are taken; patients who cannot be managed are transferred to a facility which specializes in mental problems.

Heavy emphasis is placed on the Lifting Procedure in the Nurses Aide Training Program; to use any lifting tehcnique other than that taught in the program is to guarantee the possibility of back strain. Aides are instructed also to always seek help with lifting patients, especially those who are heavy.

All employees are given in-service education on the "Psychosocial Needs of the Elderly" which includes, among other items, the sexual needs of the elderly; these patients need caring and understanding, sometimes just like a little child, because some of them don't always understand their own behavior. We are taught to handle all situations in our jobs as health care providers with professional understanding.

It appears to us that the writer must have slept through all her Training Program; if she had paid attention to her lessons, ask questions of her supervisors when she didn't understand something, and carried out her assignments as she was taught to do, she wouldn't find herself an "Injured Employee!"

Those of us signing below do not object to our names being printed in the paper.

Dear Editor:

In answer to a letter in this week's Republican about the Nursing Homes in this area: the injured party I take it, would have these aged residents stowed away in some institutions where they can't be seen, just because they are old and senile and do not know what they are doing sometimes.

I also am an employee of a nursing home in this area. I also was injured at one time by lifting a resident who didn't weigh over 35 lbs. It isn't the lifting that injures, it's the way we lift. We do not have to lift a patient ourselves. We can always ask for help.

And what would our aged residents do if we didn't have a nursing home for them and someone to love and take care of them? What would we employees do for employment if it wasn't for the nursing homes, especially in this area?

I worked in the nursing homes in this area off and on for 16 years and I had my back injured, but I had the help of a good doctor and with the Lord's help, I am still able to work.

I know some of the residents do things they shouldn't, but we have to be able to cope and remember they are someone's mother and father and need care and all the love we can give them. If we can't deal with these things, we have no right to work in a nursing home.

A Nursing Home Employee

To The Editor:

In response to the "Injured Employee" of a local nursing home. I would like to express a few words about the nursing home also.

It takes a really caring and sensitive individual to work with other human beings who are not as well off as we are or who are physically or mentally handicapped. As illustrated in this injured employee's little story, I guess a few people just don't have these traits.

The employees, when oriented to the nursing home, are taught the correct procedures and body mechanics for lifting to avoid back injuries. Hyrdraulic lifts, which are safe, comfortable and very easy to use, are readily available, so there should be no reason at all to injure one's self.

When these people are treated with respect and consideration, they treat the staff in much the same way.

When my co-workers and myself read the letter in the paper, at first we were furious because there are plenty of other places to find employment and we just wouldn't be working there if we didn't enjoy it. Then we thought, if this person felt so strongly about the abuse supposedly directed towards her, why didn't she state her name? Probably because she just didn't want everyone to know just how uncaring and insensitive she really is. We definitely don't need this kind of person taking care of our lovable residents.

A proud employee
Peggy Chappell

P.S. I could list a whole page of other employees who are proud to be helping others who are less fortunate than themselves.

"If you disagree with me, Filstrup, feel free to display your ignorance."

Dear Editor:

Hip, hip, hurray! Three cheers for the Terra Alta Dolphins, champions of the Mt. Top Youth Football League.

It must be a sweet victory for the Dolphins, to come from behind in the league standings, to the championship.

As many fans, parents, players and coaches know, it takes a lot of caring, patience, discipline and many long hours to build and mold a group of young boys into a team.

When representing a small community, the coaches have to work with the boys that come out and to plan and rearrange the team each time one drops out.

The coaches and the teams throughout the league need to be recognized for a job well done.

A Grantsville Colts fan

Dear Sirs:

Over the past several years I have read the letters to the Editor with almost every emotion known to man. I have read of the drug problem, drunk problem, child abuse problem, the alleged stupidity of county commissioners, the school lunch program, our law enforcement problem, ie, personnel.

After having read all the plaudits or kicks in the pants I have reached a decision which I would like to foist on us all. Our problem is that we are all individuals with our own idea of right and wrong as taught to us by our parents. We, the parents, by our actions, have made the society we live in.

I accept my share of the blame.

Dear Sir:

I would like to take the opportunity to express my thanks for the fine care and treatment I received while a patient in the Garrett County Memorial Hospital. The doctors, nurses and nurses' aides gave me great care. The staff does a fine job.

I feel that people should realize how much our hospital means to our community. You don't realize until you are a patient so please search your hearts and reach deep in those pockets and make a pledge to our project.

Thank you.

Dear Sir:

If law and order was something that came in a box, this country would be hard put to scrape up the equivalent of the box it came in. The laws of today are as full of technicalities and loopholes as Swiss cheese is full of air holes. Plus the fact that the judicial system has been for years and still is obsessed with coddling the criminal, which is right up the criminals alley, but bad news for the crime ridden public.

And why do we spend time and money to sustain the lives of human garbage like Charles Manson, John Wayne Gacy, Son of Sam, etc., etc. A relative of one of the victims at Son of Sams trial said to reporters, "I want him dead, dead, dead."

In recent years a good example of criminal coddling was the trial in Colorado of the French woman Claudine Longet for the murder of her ex-lover when he dumped her for another woman. The presiding judge sentenced her to 30 days in the local jail, to be served at her convenience, like a day or two a week. Shame on him all the way to forever!

An extreme in the other direction could relate to a street corner trial in Iran today with on-the-spot execution by Khomenis henchmen.

Anyway, if I was a judge and Son of Sam was on trial in my court I would have to say to him, "Son, if there's any way I can manage it, you are going to be a dead Sam, and the sooner the better.

H. Miller

P.S. Read Crime and Non-punishment, Nov. '81, Readers Digest.

To The Editor:

I would like to respond to concerned parent and teacher concerning the band.

First, seventh and eighth grade students were in Southern's band before we ended up with a middle school. These students are now unable to march or compete. Do you tiunk that is fair? Well, I don't.

As for band being so demanding, it gives our kids something to do while a lot of kids are out getting into trouble because they have nothing to do.

I have seen how great the band students can be. They helped my daughter get to practices and competitions last year after surgery on both feet. With wheelchair, crutches and casts on both feet, she couldn't have made it without the other students.

Competions do come on weekends, but if they were during the week teachers like you would really complain. If Saturday is late in the weekend, what do you call early? Twice, I believe, the band got back on Sunday this eason. This past week they got back about 9:30.

The purpose of a high school band may be to provide musical education, but competing gives an incentive to do their best. These students can still find time to study if they so desire. Don't blame the band for all the bad grades.

We should all be thankful that we have a band director dedicated enough to give his summers, weekends and evenings to help our kids. How many other teachers give so much to their students?

Anyone writing a letter to the editor should have the guts to sign it in the paper. Are you ashamed of your opinions? Why not tear sports apart for awhile? After all, they compete, practice and travel too.

Sincerely,
Velma Beckman
Mt. Lake Park

Dear Mr. Sincell:

I too have noticed with interest and distress the differing opinions that have been printed in The Republican regarding the Southern High School Band.

I am writing this letter in response to the opinions of "A concerned parent and teacher."

As I have discovered, most students who are involved in the band are academic students. Therefore your theory that "many students are deterred from belonging due to practice demands" is purely false.

Conscientious students in the band know that, even though there is a band trip during the weekend, which usually is on Saturday, there will be ample time to study Sunday. And the even more conscientious students take their homework with them.

You asked, "What is the real purpose of a high school band?" The purpose, in my perspective, is to learn discipline, leadership, how to get along with others, and through all this, the spirit of competition.

Even though I am graduated, it still hurts me that some students in high school, and even people in the community absolutely refuse to support the efforts of the band. Band members seem to be constantly in a battle for harmony with the community, (no pun intended).

Ask any band member if the time and effort is worth it! They'll tell you that the pain of practice and time spent truly pays off. How?

I always felt an unmistakeable feeling of pride and accomplishment, with my head held high, as we would exit the field after a show. The crowd would be on their feet, and sometimes I couldn't even hear the drum cadence due to the tremendous applause. Looking around I would see the tears running down other band members' faces, and we knew in our hearts the feeling could never be replaced. We had won.

Sincerely,
Drum Major 1980-81
Lisa Frazee

Second Impression

Home For The Arts

by Harry Fox

One discovers several things while working closely with a theatre group for several weeks. The intense effort, the concentration, and the sacrifice of time and energy toward a worthy goal become almost an obsession in the final days before production. The infinite variety of human responses to pressure is amazing—everything from unbelievable, selfless dedication to obnoxious pettiness. This is as it should be, if the theatre is to come to life in the minds of the audience. It has to begin in the hearts and minds of the producers and the actors.

The recent production of "Oliver!" sponsored by the Garrett Choral Society also revealed another, less pleasing side to the "state of the arts" here on the Mt. Top. Despite the cooperation and fine efforts of the Southern Middle School staff, the directors and actors faced a mountain of problems caused by the lack of an adequate theatre facility. It is simply not possible to stage and light some elements of a production on any of the existing public auditorium stages in Garrett County. These halls are basically just that—auditoriums—designed for speakers and school assemblies. They lack much of the necessary backstage equipment. They are woefully inadequate for makeup and costume change.

It is not a question of "making do." The fine arts must expect to live within the means of the community. But that is precisely the issue. This community does provide for many worthwhile activities. Look at the private support given to band, sports, and youth programs like 4-H. Surely the fact that a volunteer production like "Oliver!" can produce large audiences for three performances is saying something about what the public wants. That speaks louder than the almighty dollar.

Many will say that this is not the time, that money is too tight, that this county has gotten by with what is available. All valid points, it must be admitted.

But the real question is not one of money. No one could pay the dedicated people of the local "Oliver!" coropany to devote the time and energy required to present the play. No one could pay adequately for the frustration and backbreaking work needed to compensate for the limitations of the school cafeteria.

The real question of the moment is one of priorities. Do the actors, musicians, artists and artisans of this county need a decent practical facility? Once again, the public has cast its vote FOR a home for the fine arts, as they came by the hundreds to the Southern Middle School. The people of this community want, and deserve, a home for the arts. Is anybody listening?

the schools and the health department, described the adult louse as a tiny two to three millimeter insect with a slender, tapering body, three pairs of legs with delicate hooks, and either grayish or reddish in color. Lice can generally by found behind the ears, at the back of the neck or anywhere on the head. The nits attach themselves to the hair with a saliva and cannot be easily removed by picking them off by hand.

Lice are transmitted by contact such as through combs, clothing, carpets, bed clothing, or visiting an infested area.

Symptoms are an intense itching on the head, redish bites on the scalp, or white particles on the hair which cannot be easily pulled away.

There are special shampoos and sprays which can be used to treat persons or areas infested with the lice. Personal items, clothing and any possible areas of contact such as cars should also be treated.

Johnson pointed out that none are immune from head lice, cleanliness does not necessarily protect a person from head lice.

Persons with questions about head lice may either call school officials or the Garrett County Health Department, Johnson said.

ing in the state law.

Dr. Jerome Ryscavage, superintendent of county schools, stated the attorney who argued for the AFL-CIO, Joel Smith, of Baltimore, indicated the union may pursue the matter by either seeking a change in the state law or by appealing the Board's decision to a civil court.

Ralph Burnett, of the Burnett, Eiswert, Crawford and Janes law firm in Oakland, argued the case for the county.

Ryscavage noted that although the noncertified employees do not have a contract with the county board, as do the teachers, the board's director of personnel meets with three groups—food service workers, custodians and maintenance workers, and clerical workers—each year to discuss work conditions, benefits and salaries. He added these employees have a benefits package which is similar to that of the teachers and have received salary increases similar to those of teachers.

Fire Destroys Single Story Dwelling Sunday

A single-story wood frame cabin, located just off the O'Haver Road, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin Sunday night.

The structure, owned by Robert Meyers and used primarily as a hunting cabin and weekend retreat, had reportedly been on fire for some time before it was discovered. Garrett Central Alarm summoned the Oakland and Deer Park fire departments and the Southern Rescue Squad equipment truck at 10:31 p.m. Deer Park VFD was instructed to return to their station, however, after it was apparent to Oakland chief Buzz Updyke that the structure could not be saved. Only a portion of one wall of the dwelling was standing when Oakland personnel arrived on the scene.

The cause of the blaze is under investigation by James Martin, fire investigator for Garrett and Allegany counties, who said that the Meyers family had been at the residence earlier in the day.

Firefighters remained on the scene for about one and one half hours. There were no injuries.

The Friendsville Fire Department had a busy couple of days last week, responding to a brush fire on Tuesday and a flue fire and structure fire on Wednesday.

Friendsville was called to extinguish a brush fire at 5:35 p.m. Tuesday along Route 42 near Blooming Rose. They were assisted by the Forest Service and remained on the scene for about one half hour.

On Wednesday at 9:51 a.m. they were called to the residence of Donald E. Bradshaw, located just across from the fire hall, to extinguish a flue fire. They were on the scene for approximately 45 minutes.

What was reported to be a structure fire at 6:19 p.m. the same day at the Richard Umbel residence on Route 53 in Selbysport turned out to be a French fry cooker which had caught fire. The blaze was quickly extinguished and fire personnel returned to the station at about 6:50 p.m. The Accident Fire Department and county air cascade unit were also summoned but turned around shortly thereafter. Also respondng to the scene was the Northern Rescue Squad.

"OLIVER" DRAWS MASSIVE CROWD — The musical production "Oliver," by Lionel Bart, which was sponsored by the Garrett Choral Society at Southern Middle School on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, was attended by over 1,200 people. The production involved the efforts of more than 50 people, including many children. Pictured above, left to right, are Arthur Fedde, who played the part of Oliver; Ingrid Carlson, a member of the Poorhouse group; and Alane McCain, who played the part of Bet. The musical was directed by Nancy Learey and Jane Avery. Patti McLaughlin, pianist, provided accompaniment; Ben Sincell was in charge of set design and construction and lighting; and Greg Carrico served as stage manager. The society is already making plans for another musical production next fall, according to one member of the production staff. Photo by Craig Phillips WINS FIRST PRIZE — Aza Stanton, well known local artist and resident at Deep Creek Lake, took first prize in professional oil painting at the "Art For Giving" arts and crafts show held November 6 and 7 at the Country Club Mall in LaVale. The exhibit was sponsored by the Allegany Area Art Alliance of which Stanton is a member. The show was the largest ever to be held in Western Maryland, involving well over 100 exhibitors from several states. Stanton's award-winning entry was "The Sentry," a painting of an Amish horse and buggy in a rural setting. The painting was purchased by Paul Howard of the 3M company. "The Sentry," one of Stanton's most recent paintings, had previously been shown at the Allegany Community College, Frostburg State College, and the Autumn Glory exhibit sponsored by the Garrett County Arts Guild, of which Stanton is also a member.

THE LADY LOVES HER ART — Gayle Prentice, Oakland, the painter of this autumn scene, seems to literally thrive on art, as demonstrated simply by the persistence needed to be a self-employed artist today. At 45 she travels and draws portraits in shopping malls, does free lance work and portraits out of her home, and even paints in the evenings while watching television. "I'm busy all the time," she says enthusiastically, and she loves to draw people, holding as her record 54 portraits completed in one day. Artwork by Ms. Prentice will be on display at the Ruth Enlow Library in Oakland through Saturday, including this brilliant scene from nature. Done in oils (her favorite medium), the painting contains nearly every color and shade imaginable, with emphasis on fall colors and earth tones that blend together at a distance. The artist uses bold thick brush strokes that reflect energy and life. But her favorite subjects are people, which she portrays in a serious fashion, with emotion coming out through the eyes, her major source of concentration. The exhibit includes landscapes, still life and portraits.

Three Persons Treated After Vehicle Mishap

Three Swanton residents were treated and released at Garrett County Memorial Hospital yesterday morning following a one-vehicle accident at the intersection of Route 495 and Glendale Road. Slightly injured in the mishap were Elizabeth Ann Friend, 41; Adam Rohrbaugh, four, and Connie Sue Rohrbaugh, 20.

Maryland State Police at McHenry investigated the 6 a.m. mishap and reported the Friend woman was eastbound on Glendale Road and failed to see a stoplight in the fog. The vehicle allegedly crossed Route 495, struck the guardrails and continued through a pasture, where it struck several trees.

The accident victims were taken to the hospital by the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad. Garrett County Central Alarm also dispatched the Bittinger fire department to the scene.

This is a telephone.
It may look a little strange. But it does everything your phone does. And more.
We designed it for people who can't move their legs to walk to the phone. Or lift their arms to reach for the phone.
All they have to do is blow on the card to reach the operator. Then speak into the speaker. To call the fire department. Or talk to friends. Or take part in the world of business.
And it's only one of many remarkably designed phones that C&P Telephone offers.
We also have phones that can help the blind. The hard of hearing and the mute. Special phones for special people.
If you'd like to find out more about them, consult the Consumer Guide in the front of your White Pages. Just look for the number of the Telephone Service Center for Disabled People.
Then we'd like you to call.
Because no matter how strange some of our special phones may look, they're all designed to let people do one special thing.
Communicate.

Elk Garden Student Named Winner In Century III Contest

Darlene Moreland, a senior at Elk Garden High School, has been named the top Century III Leader in a competition there, according to Michael Burke, principal.

The 16-year-old student is now eligible to compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1,500 scholarships and an all-expense-paid trip to the national Century III Leaders Conference, slated for March 5-8, 1982, in Colonial Williamsburg, Va. State winners will compete for the national winner's prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

The Century III Leaders program is designed to bring together and recognize student leaders who show both strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America. Miss Moreland was judged on the basis of leadership skills, school and community involvement, and a current events examination. She also wrote a short essay on a particular issue which challenges America in its third century.

Runners-up in the competition at Elk Garden High School were Annette Jones and Todd McLaughlin.

Century III is sponsored and administered by the National Association of Secondary School Principals and funded by the Shell Oil Company.

Darlene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Moreland of Rt. 1, Elk Garden, is the senior class vice-president, business manager of the Yearbook, member of the French Club and Pep Club, and was recently selected by the student body as 1981-82 Homecoming Queen. She has an interest in social services and plans to attend college after graduation.

PARTICIPATE IN WALK-A-THON — The Accident area churches recently sponsored a 10-mile walk-a-thon to raise funds for the Accident Volunteer Fire Department to purchase a new pumper. Each of the 38 walkers contacted people from throughout the community to pledge a certain amount of money per mile walked. Approximately $3,500 was raised in this effort. Officers of the fire department indicate that the new pumper has been ordered at a cost of $65,000 and is expected to be ready for service sometime next spring. So far, gifts to the department, all of which are tax deductible, total approximately $7,500. Pictured at right, Betty Wellborn and Claudine Opel begin mile number six, returning from Glade Church toward Accident.

Preston County Jail Cited In Juvenile Justice Committee Report

CHARLESTON, W.VA. (UPI) — The Juvenile Justice Committee Monday issued a report critical of the Preston County Jail, where some adult inmates are locked in their 6-by-8 cells 23 hours a day, a policy known as "deadlocking."

The jail permits deadlocking of prisoners and solitary confinement as punishment.

"The committee was told by the sheriff that all residents were deadlocked because of an alleged incident of sexual assault and because residents had generally not followed jail rules," the committee said.

Residents report being deadlocked since June 18.

"If the group deadlocking is being used as group punishment for individual misconduct this is illegal and any rule permitting it must be changed," the report said.

"Residents reported that the deadlocking of adult prisoners created a life-threatening situation in that a recent unsuccessful suicide attempt came as the result of one man's despair at being caged in an unconstitutionally small space for an indefinite period of time."

He slashed his wrists and swallowed razor blades, the report said.

"Committee staff was informed by a source skilled in working with persons under stress that there has been an abnormally high number of adult residents seriously contemplating suicide since the deadlocking began . . ."

The report asked Judge Robert Halbritter investigate the deadlocking policy.

The committee inspects jails on behalf of the state Supreme Court to ensure juvenile laws are being properly enforced.

The report said most of the jailings of youths in the jail from January 1, 1980, to July 1, 1981, were done incorrectly. Twenty-two juveniles were detained a total of 25 times. Only one detention was done in conformity with state law.

"The remaining 24 incarcerations primarily involved juveniles charged with non-violent felonies or misdemeanors. In the case of five juveniles no adequate reason was offered for their incarceration."

Other things included in the report were:

—The committee said at least one adult resident was beaten with nightsticks in his cell by two sheriff's deputies and had to be taken to a hospital.

—A policy which prohibits snacks, coffee and cigarettes being brought in by family members has to be changed. "The current exclusionary policy is overboard."

"During the former sheriff's administration the prices at the commissary were artificially high and the profits were used to finance parties and picnics sponsored by the deputy sheriff's association, according to deputy reports. It is to the sheriff's credit that the prices have now been lowered."

—Fire escapes need extensions in order for prisoners to reach the ground safely.

—Prisoners complained of being frequently bitten by small bedbugs and have noticed roaches despite the sheriff's report there is a bi-weekly extermination.

District Court Cases Are Heard

District Court cases heard in the last ten days include charges of assault, battery, worthless checks, and illegal use of a telephone.

Cynthia Doris Queer, 39, Bloomington, was found guilty of resisting arrest charges brought against her by Luke Police Chief Raymond Guy. According to the report, Ms. Queer was stopped on a drunken driving charge, and refused to cooperate with the officer's questions. Guy stated that the defendant began kicking and fighting, and refused to submit to a breathalyzer test.

She was fined $25 plus court costs.

Maryland State Police officer J. W. Michael charged Joseph DeMaske, 28, Smithville, Pa., with public intoxication following his behavior at the scene of a drunken driving arrest.

DeMaske was fined $50 plus court costs.

Two Swanton residents and a man from Rawlings were found guilty of assault, battery, and malicious destruction of property charges filed against them by Jerry A. Cline, Oakland.

Gary Daniel Bray, 32, Carl Lee, 22, and Fred Crossland, 32, will be recalled following a presentence investigation.

According to the complainant, the men attacked him last August 2 in the parking lot of El Lobo's Restaurant, Rt. 135, Mt. Lake Park. Cline was dragged from his vehicle and physically assaulted by the trio. The windshield of his automobile was destroyed in the fracas.

The men were found not guilty on a charge of conspiracy.

Maryland State Police officer John Foley lodged a disorderly conduct complaint against Robert Allen Sharpless, 20, Deer Park, stemming from a July 16 incident at the VFW hall on Rt. 135 in Mt. Lake Park.

According to Tfc. Foley, when he arrived in response to a complaint of disorderly conduct, he was verbally assaulted by Sharpless.

The defendant was fine $25 plus court costs.

An Oakland man, Steven Kitzmiller, 21, was found guilty on charges of using the telephone to threaten and harass Wanda Collins of Deer Park.

Judge Jones sentenced Kitzmiller to a three-month term, to run consecutively with a term now being served.

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered for a Frostburg woman, Helen Jay, who was charged by her husband with battery following a recent altercation between the couple in Cindy's Tavern, Finzel.

The report states that Mrs. Jay entered the tavern looking for her husband, and ordered him to go home. The report further states that Mrs. Jay kicked, slapped, and dragged her husband from the tavern, continuing the abusive treatment in the parking lot.

Judge Jones found the woman guilty.

David Allen Shope, 26, Gorman, was found guilty of battery against Lisa Shope, who lodged the charges against him.

The report indicates that Shope had been drinking and had taken his young son from the home. Mrs. Shope claims she called her husband at the home of his brother and requested that the child be brought back to her. When the father eventually returned with their son, a struggle ensued, and Mrs. Shope was struck by her husband, according to her testimony.

A pre-sentence investigation was ordered.

Daniel Paugh, Kitzmiller, was found guilty of writing a worthless check to Heck's Department Store during June of this year.

The defendant was fined $100 and ordered to make restitution on the check to Heck's, as well as several other outstanding checks in the area during the same period. He was placed on 18-months unsupervised probation.

Jeffrey Allen Fisher, 24, was found not guilty of charges of possession of a controlled dangerous substance lodged against him by Maryland State Police officer Jerry Michael.

Ralph Park, Oakland, was found not guilty of disorderly conduct, assault and battery, and resisting arrest lodged against him by Garrett County Deputy Sheriff Donald Tucker and Denver Welch.

The state's attorney declared nolle prosequi in cases involving the following persons: Eugene Coddington, Mark Allen Ford, Barbara Allen Joseph, Patricia Ann Hinkle, Billy G. Herman, Edward Hutzel, Jack Beitzel, Larry Corner, James C. Lipscomb, David Clarence Shaffer, and Cathy Kisner.

The following cases were placed on the stet docket for a period of one year: Joseph C. Lewis, Eugene Loren Roy, Gerald Broadwater, Sherry L. Tyler, James D. Brady, and Inez R. Tyler.

The next meeting will be Tuesday, December 1, at the home of their local leader, Mrs. William Harman. She will be assisting the girls in a cookie baking project.

Arnold Kromphardt, president of the Eastern District of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, was the installer and delivered the sermon. Among the pastors from the Pittsburgh area attending the installation was Rev. Robert Bentz, brother of Fred Bentz.

Paul Thomas, Robert Resh, Dennis Margroff and James Oester were among those going to Glen Savage, Pa., for the installation there.

Several residents from this community have visited Mrs. F. E. Smith of Sacred Heart Hospital, Cumberland, where she has been a patient for several weeks. She underwent surgery on Friday.

Hess Anxious For Start Of 1981-82 Season

Coach Randy Hess says he is anxiously awaiting the start of the 1981-82 season for his Garrett Community College Lakers as three of the top six players return from last season's 14-11 team.

Brian Black, a 6'2 guard from East Bank, W. Va., was the second leading scorer last year averaging 13 points per game. Shawn Finney from Mullens, W. Va., was the leading assist man and starting point guard last season. Bill Bender, a graduate of Northern High School, who added six points and four rebounds per outing last season, also returns for his final season. "These three sophomores must provide the leadership we need to be successful," stated Hess. "They are three fine young men and have been a pleasure to coach."

Nine newcomers will blend their collective talents with the three lettermen. The recruits represent five states with three from Maryland, three from West Virginia, and one each from Ohio, New York and Virginia. Clarence Allen and John Steele are the tallest players in years for Garrett, each standing 6'7. Kevin Phillips and Tom Johnson, each 6'5, figure to bolster the rebounding corps for the Lakers. Jeff Burton, Dennis Goodson, Addison Fair, Robert Smith, and Brian Selders, a Southern High School graduate, rounds out the new group of freshmen.

"Our quickness will make us exciting to watch," said Hess. "We have good team height and our team defense has improved." Seven of last year's 11 losses were by less than 10 points. Hess hopes that the newly acquired depth will turn many similar contests into victories.

Garrett plays a 25-game schedule with 14 home and 11 away contests. Hess believes Maryland JUCO is balanced with Allegany, Baltimore, and Hagerstown the strongest preseason picks.

A new addition to the schedule is a preview tournament on November 20 and 21. The initital field includes Cecil, Altoona, Potomac State and the host Lakers.

Racers' Banquet Set

The Garrett County Racing Banquet will be held this Saturday, November 14, at the Island Creek Community Building along West Virginia State Rt. 90, just south of Bayard. A buffet meal will be served from 7 to 9 p.m., and dancing will be from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. Music will be provided by Town and Country Band.

Friend Evaluates Lakers' Success

What make the women's volleyball team from the smallest community college in the Maryland JUCO become one of the toughest teams in the league, finish the season with a 20-6 record, and go on to the Region XX Tournament?

According to Garrett Community College Coach Mike Friend, it is "hard work and mental outlook — thinking you can win." He attributes his team's success to these two ingredients.

Although his team has had a winning season, Friend says he is a big believer in setting goals and priorities: in teaching women athletes that winning isn't everything. He considers competition an art form. "There should be a sense of comradeship, as in dance," he says. "The scoreboard is for the people watching the game. I would rather play well and lose than play poorly and win."

This philosophy has obviously spelled success for the 20-6 Garrett team. Five of the six starters are local women and holddovers from last year's Laker team. Patty Harsh, Becky Remley, Lisa Stark, and Sue Mason all had some volleyball experience at Southern High School. Sharon Lipscomb is the starter from Northern High School.

Other women on the team are Sue White from Fort Hill High School in Cumberland, Sue Jack from Clendinin, West Virginia, Nancy Otte from Wheeling, Peggy Kelly from Pasadena and Valerie Thawley from Centreville.

According to Friend, the best teams the Lakers met this season were Alderson Broaddus, Carnegie Mellon, and Hagerstown Junior College. He maintains that his team generally played its best against these good teams.

Another factor in the team's success Friend says has been the "110% cooperation" he has received from the college. "There is no question that we have a quality class program here," he stated. "We see many larger colleges that have a second rate volleyball program. Here we have no problem with practice times. We share the gym facility equally with the men, and that makes for good morale. The other Garrett coaches are all very supportive."

Friend, who has coached community volleyball in the mid-west and private school and YMCA basketball in Cumberland, says he enjoys coaching the women's team. "It's interesting because women are more volatile than men," he says. "They bring their emotions into the game."

Lakers Win 20th; Seeded Seventh In Region Event

The Garrett Community College Laker Volleyball team picked up its 20th win of the 1981 season by stopping Frostburg State College, 3-2, in the final regular season contest. Coach Mike Friend's squad will travel to Charles Community College in LaPlata this Saturday to compete in the opening round of the Region XX Tournament, in which Garrett is seeded seventh.

Against Frostburg, Lisa Stark and Sharon Lipscomb shared 23 assists, while Susan Jack had ten digs to pace the defense. Patty Harsh and Sue Mason combined for 14 spikes and 19 blocks.

"I'm very pleased with how the program has progressed in only three years," Friend stated. "I feel we can compete with anyone in the Maryland JUCO."

In the Region XX tourney the Lakers will open against powerful Catonsville Community College, seeded first in the tournament and fourth nationally.

The nine teams in the tournament are split into two pools, with GCC meeting Catonsville at 10:30 a.m., Dundalk at 11:30, and Anne Arundel at 1 p.m. The two survivors from each pool will then square off Sunday at 11 a.m., for the semi-finals and the winners will then immediately play for the championship. The round-robin format is new this year and attempts to give all the teams an equal opportunity, according to Friend.

Partial deregulation and the cost of natural gas.

Before the Natural Gas Policy Act was approved by Congress, the Federal Government tightly controlled the price that could be charged by those who locate and drill for natural gas. That kept gas rates down, but the natural gas supply suffered. The low-priced gas was being used faster than producers could afford to replace it. And it wasn't economically feasible for them to drill for deeper, hard-to-get gas.

Now, through phased partial deregulation, an important part of the Policy Act, natural gas prices are being allowed to rise to realistic market levels. So producers in the Appalachian area as well as the Southwest now have the economic incentive to find new natural gas supplies. They can afford to drill into the vast known gas reserves which are deeper in the ground. They can afford to search out new fields and invest in better, more efficient ways of reaching untapped reserves to replace the enormous amount of gas we're using daily. That means money, jobs and energy now as well as in the future.

Partial deregulation also means your Columbia Gas bill will be rising, because the cost we must pay for gas is rising. But the energy assurance it represents for the future is priceless.

Huskies Rip Hancock, 35-0; Set For County Showdown

The Northern High Huskies picked up their sixth win and fourth shutout of the year Friday evening by crushing Hancock, 35-0, on the losers' field. The Husky defense, which is giving up only about 6 points per game, held Hancock to only eight yards on the ground, while Rob Carr rushed for 124 yards on 19 carries, his third 100-yard plus game this season.

The record books will indicate the contest was only the third win for the Huskies, who were forced to forfeit three opening wins.

The bulk of the Huskies' scoring came in the first half, which allowed Coach Jack Settle to do heavy substituting throughout the second half.

Sophomore running back Greg Diehl, who ended the game with 68 yards on just six carries and two touchdowns, opened the scoring on a 14-yard run in the first quarter. Dave George kicked the first of his five successful conversions of the evening.

Troy Margroff plunged over from the one, also in the first stanza, to give the Huskies a 14-0 lead.

Carr connected with Stan Eggleston on a nine-yard scoring toss in the second quarter and, on the next offensive series for the Huskies, Carr carrried the ball in from the 17 for the Huskies fourth and a 28-0 halftime lead.

The final six-pointer of the game occurred in the third quarter when Diehl rambled in from the ten-yard line.

"We played well all the way around," he said. "We moved and controlled the ball all evening and our defense showed a lot of team effort." The Huskies gave up 43 yards in the air, most of it in the first quarter. "We made some quick adjustments and applied more pressure on their quarterback," Settle said, "which virtually shut down their passing game."

He credited linemen Jim Swauger, Mike Robinson and Luke Maust with leading that pressure. Stan and Mike Eggleston added to the Husky defense effort by picking off a pair of passes.

Offensively, Settle said he was pleased with the running of Carr and Diehl. "Gregg has been doing a lot of substituting in three different positions in our backfield. He shows a lot of potential and will no doubt have a permanent position next year," stated Settle. "Our offensive line also provided excellent blocking."

Settle hopes his team can turn in an equally aggressive performance this Friday evening when the Huskies host cross-country rivals, the Southern Rams, to wrap up the season.

"Southern has an experienced, solid team," Settle said. "They have an exellent running game, one of the best blocking lines I've seen this year and a quick defense. They have been in a lot of big games and I feel that some of their four losses could be attributed to injuries.

"Ron Bosley is an outstanding back and linebacker; Andrew Orr is a tough blocking center and excellent defensive player; Tim Tharp is a hard-running, young fullback; Dave Terrant is another solid threat in the backfield; Dave Scott runs good patterns at tightend; Paul Harvey and Matt Scheffel are outstanding in the defensive backfield; and Jim Lyons and Pat Rodeheaver are two of the finest linesmen in the area," Settle continued.

"It's impossible for a coach to gauge emotion," he said. "I am anticipating an excellent game and I feel that the kicking game and the turnover situation will decide who will win."

Settle also said that he wanted to publicaly thank the efforts this season of the Northern varsity cheerleaders. "They and their advisor, Joanne Robinson, have just done a super job" he said. "They have been our 12th player during the games and they have kept spirit high among the student body with their numerous banners and activities."

Settle also commended the work of assistant coach Harv Speicher, particularly during the latter half of the season. "Harv had made some valuable suggestions, especially for our offensive game," Settle said.

Kickoff for the Garrett County title will be at 7:30 p.m. The only Northern player expected to miss the contest is defensive linesman Bill Uphold, who suffered a serious hand injury while at work.

OPENING CEREMONIES HELD — Mary Helbig and Oakland Mayor H.D. "Hub" Swartzentruber cut the ribbon during opening ceremonies for the Western Maryland Women's Bowling Association 22nd annual tournament which began Saturday at Par-Matt Lanes, Oakland. Carrying flags for the ceremonies were junior bowlers Brian Dixon, Courtney Smith, Carl Ratliff and Bonnie Ruston. Below, Mary Helbig, the oldest association member, bowls the first ball of the tournament. The tournament will continue through the next two weekends.

Terrant Paces Ram Victory Over Cavaliers, 26-14

Sophomore tailback Dave Terrant rushed for 166 yards on 30 carries and scored a pair of touchdowns as the Southern High Rams picked up their fifth win of the season, a 26-14 decision over Calvert County Saturday afternoon at Prince Frederick County in Southern Maryland. The Rams will now take a 5-4 record against cross-county rivals, the Northern Huskies, in the season finale for both teams.

After a 0-0 deadlock at the end of the first quarter, the Cavaliers' Winthrop Chew, one of three brothers in the Calvert backfield, broke free for an 84-yard scoring run on the Cavaliers' only offensive play of the second quarter. The attempt for the conversion kick failed.

The Rams retaliated about two minutes later however, when Ron Bosley crossed the goal line from seven yards out. Bosley was moved from the tailback position to fullback to fill in for regular Tim Tharp, who could not carry the ball because of a thumb injury. Bosley finished with 86 yards on 17 carries.

Terrant recorded the first of his six-pointers late in the second quarter on a four-yard run to put the Rams ahead for good. Todd Lewis connected with Dave Scott on a pass play for the two-point conversion and the Rams led at the half, 14-6.

Paul Harvey set up the Rams' third TD when, early in the third quarter, he jumped on a loose ball on the Cavaliers' 13. Terrant ran the ball into the end zone from that point for his second score of the evening. The conversion attempt failed.

Southern's final score came late in the fourth period when Scott hauled in a four-yard pass from freshman J.R. Gibson on the halfback option.

Against primarily a Southern freshman and sophomore defense, Calvert was able to put together one final drive and, with a little over one minute remaining, quarterback Bertram Chew carried the ball in from the five to score and also took the ball in for a two-point conversion.

The Cavaliers finished the contest slightly ahead in total offense, 298 to 287 yards, with one-third of that coming in their final drive and nearly another third on Winthrop Chew's 84-yard scoring gallop. Winthrop Chew led all rushers with 179 yards on 21 carries.

"We expected to have a little tougher time moving the ball against Calvert than we did," stated coach Tom Woods. "However, we maintained good control of the ball, despite having four fumbles."

Woods praised the running of Terrant, whom he said would have had over 200 yards if it weren't for a few penalties. "Dave gave us the quickness we needed in order to get by the Cavaliers' defense," Woods said.

He also stated that his team's passing game was better, although windy conditions forced primarily a ground game.

"Our defense also played a good game," Woods said. "They picked up a large portion of their yardage against our freshmen and sophomores late in the game."

A difficult task still lies ahead for the Rams in their bid for a winning season as they travel to arch rival Northern High School Friday for the county showdown.

"Northern's team this year is the best that I have seen in my five years in Garrett County," Woods stated. "They have one of the finest defenses in the area, having given up only 55 points. All 11 of their defensive starters are outstanding players, with defensive end Troy Margroff and linebacker Stan Eggleston as good as any we've faced this year."

Woods also spoke highly of the Huskies' ground game, calling Robb Carr "one of the best backs in the area." He also noted the talent of Eggleston at tightend.

"They are just as talented as we are this year and, as usual, much bigger," stated Woods, who also expects the usual highly emotional contest. "Last year we went into the game a three or four touchdown favorite, at least on paper, and we were extremely fortunate to win that game (6-0). There will be no favorite this year. Our teams are both young and I look for a real close, physical game."

Woods said the mental preparation for the final regular season game has been a little unusual for his team, which for the past two years moved on into the playoffs. Southern finished in second place this year, however, in Class C. "But," he said, "we have had highly spirited practices this week and our players, especially the seniors, want to perform the best they can Friday night and finish up with a winning season."

The contest starts at 7:30 p.m.

"The Book That Would Not Burn"
"Destroy the Christians and Their Book!"
Ranivo, a teenager in a Madagascar village, sees her people's lives transformed as they read the missionaries' Bibles. Hundreds of people become Christians.
The queen, however, is suspicious of this new faith and orders the burning of all Bibles. Then she forbids Christians from meeting together. Finally, those who refuse to renounce their faith are tortured and killed. Bibles are hidden in caves and brought out secretly for prayer and study. Ranivo, though fearing persecution, wants the same peace of heart shared by her Christian friends. When her turn comes to die, God intervenes—to allow this true story to be told to succeeding generations.
This powerful missions emphasis film shows the importance of memorized Scripture and faithfulness despite persecution.

Man Arrested After Incident At Bowling Alley

A Loch Lynn man was arrested by a Garrett County Sheriff's deputy late Tuesday night, November 3, after he was allegedly acting disorderly at Par-Matt Lanes bowling alley at Oak Park.

Upon arrival at the premises the officer, who had been called to the scene, said he observed Clayton Lewis Donham, 24, at the patio entrance to the establishment, using loud and obscene language and verbally threatening the manager.

Police said a group of people had gathered in the area, and Donham appeared intoxicated. He was reportedly told by the manager to leave the premises, but refused. He was arrested and charged with disorderly condition, and was released the same day on his own recognizance.

The Oakland Police Department was assisted by the Sheriff's Department Friday during the arrest of Junior Lee Guthrie, 23, Mt. Lake Park. Oakland Police Chief Hobart Shillingburg said the department received a complaint that Guthrie was carrying a gun in his pocket. He was arrested at Englander's Pharmacy in Oakland with a .22 revolver on his person. The gun was not loaded.

Guthrie was charged with carrying a concealed weapon. He was released the same day on his own recognizance.

The Sheriff's Department made an additional six arrests last week.

Howard Rell Fulk III, 37, Bayard, W. Va., was arrested Thursday and charged with driving while under the influence. He was released the next day on his own recognizance.

Dannie Allen Stemple, 27, of Garrett County, was incarcerated Friday and charged with a controlled dangerous substance violation. He was released the same day when he posted 10 percent of $1,000 bond.

Theodore Uphold, 73, of Friendsville, was arrested Friday and charged with theft (shoplifting). He was released the same day on his own recognizance.

Kenneth Gilbert Marple, 18, address unknown, was arrested Saturday and charged with driving while under the influence. He was released the same day on his own recognizance.

John Allen Hinebaugh, 19, Mt. Lake Park, was incarcerated Monday on a bench warrant for failure to appear in court. He was released the same day on his recognizance.

Leo Tasker, 46, Kitzmiller, was arrested Monday and charged with theft (shoplifting). He was released the same day on his own recognizance.

Property Destroyed

A destruction of property was recently reported by Sue Cecelia Shaffer, New Salem, Pa., to Maryland State Police.

According to the complainant, her vehicle, a 1977 Cadillac, was parked on Maple Street in Friendsville last Wednesday night when an unidentified culprit threw a large rock at the windshield, completely destroying the surface.

The investigation is continuing.

STILL LIFE IN PASTEL is among the works by Gayle Prentice, a local artist, which are displayed at Oakland's library. Ms. Prentice, originally from Pittsburgh, Pa., is a 15-year resident of Garrett County. She is a 1956 graduate of the Art Institute of Pittsburgh and has worked in the field ever since, as an art department illustrator for Kaufmann's and as a self-employed artist. She has been doing portraits for about 12 years, and taught art at Garrett Community College from 1971 through 1977. Ms. Prentice is a realist. She enjoys working from real life and she works in every medium, although she prefers working with oils. She paints on glass, plates and milk cans, and says she'll draw anything, including the family pet. Ms. Prentice first began with art at the age of seven, and today it still captures the majority of her energy. The display will be up through Saturday.

Children, Youth Week Activities Being Planned

Governor Harry Hughes, as part of a nationwide effort, has designated November 16 through 27 as Children and Youth Week. Governor Hughes will hold a Governor's Conference on Children and Youth at that time, involving a series of local activities.

Dave Ford, who has been designated local coordinator in Garrett County, and Linda Wengerd, Becky Seib and Lynn Elmlinger, children's advocates, are planning local activities for that week. The group is seeking youth and adults and youth organizations to assist in that planning or to sponsor programs of their own.

The purpose of the Governor's Conference is "to identify the most productive steps that governments, private agencies, businesses, community groups and individuals can take with respect to significant matters involving children and youth," according to Howard Bluth, State Conference Coordinator. The goal is "to strengthen relationships between children, youth and adults. Emphasis will be on involving all segments of the community, especially children and youth themselves," he added.

The local group is joining others throughout the state in asking all Maryland citizens to write to Governor Harry Hughes about children and youth, specifically addressing the above-described purpose of the conference and where responsibility should be placed in order to effectively implement steps taken regarding significant matters affecting children and youth.

According to local advocates, the community's feelings on steps that can by taken will constitute the heart of the final conference report, and may be submitted to Governor Harry Hughes, c/o Office for Children and Youth, Room 1502, 301 W. Preston Street, Baltimore, 21201.

Ford noted that the local group is considering the possibility of involving students at Northern and Southern Middle Schools, and is attempting to get individual groups to sponsor different projects. Topics of interest for discussion can be provided by Ford. Any individuals or organizations interested in helping with activities during Children and Youth Week may call 826-8894 after 4 p.m., for more information.

which are currently being drafted. Among those bills is one which would prohibit the transportation and entrenchment of wastewater treatment sludge into Garrett and Allegany counties without the express approval of the commissioners of either county. A similar bill for St. Mary's and Charles counties passed during the 1981 General Assembly session, Bolden noted.

Other bills to be filed by Bolden are:

—One which would require a person carrying a gun in his automobile to encase the gun. Bolden noted this would help prevent the use of guns for poaching or other illegal uses.

—One which would provide a procedure for the recall of public officials in Garrett County. A similar bill has been filed which would cover the entire state and which would require a statewide vote because it would be an amendment to the state constitution. Bolden's bill for Garrett County would not need to be put to a vote because it would only involve elected officials on the county level.

—One which would set up a $10 million bond for a statewide revolving loan fund for volunteer fire departments and emergency rescue squads. The bill would allow these volunteer organizations to borrow money through the state for capital expenditures at low rates.

—One which would designate the Town of Accident as the underwriter for a loan to the Accident Volunteer Fire Department, but which would not make the town liable for any debts incurred.

—One which would authorize the Maryland Motor Vehicles Administration to issue free license tags to the former prisoners-of-war who now live in Maryland. Bolden said he is introducing the bill because he feels little has been done for the POWs who comprise about one percent of the 625,000 veterans in Maryland. He estimated the cost to the state would be minimal.

In other news from Bolden, he said he has accepted the position of campaign chairman in Garrett County for Larry Hogan who has announced his candidacy to the U. S. Senate. Hogan will oppose Senator Paul Sarbanes in the 1982 election.

Bolden also said he and Tom and Brenda Butscher, Oakland, will attend a reception at the White House for Don Devine, director of personnel management. Devine, who was appointed to his post by President Ronald Reagan, was the compaign chairman for Reagan in Maryland.

Sachs Issues Warning About Crooked Fund-Raising Promoters

Maryland Attorney General Stephen H. Sachs has warned schools, Parent-Teachers Associations, day care centers, children's nurseries and other groups to beware of dubious business people offering to set up fund-raising promotions for them involving the sale of candy, candles, photographs and similar consumer goods.

Such fund-raising schemes have defrauded consumers in several states, Sachs warned, and some questionable entrepreneurs are believed to be at work in Maryland promoting similar operations here.

According to a letter Sachs has sent to school boards throughout Maryland, investigators have shown that the promotors persuade local PTA or school system to begin a fund-raising effort by obtaining orders for various consumer items, especially those in demand during the holiday season.

Once the innocent participants obtain orders from customers and give all the receipts to the promoter, the "commission" check they later receive bounces and often the merchandise either fails to arrive or is unsatisfactory, Sachs said. Similarly, the special "prizes" that often are promised to the fund-raisers either don't arrive or are of poor quality, he added.

Sachs strongly urged the schools, PTAs and other groups to check out the credentials of any would-be promoter carefully by contacting the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office of the Better Business Bureau to determine if complaints have been received regarding the particular promoter.

The company that manufactures the candy, candles or other products offered by the promoter also should be contacted to see if the promoter is reputable, the Attorney General said.

The consumer Protection Division advises the fundraisers to arrange to keep the receipts they obtain for the goods in their own escrow account until they are sure all the merchandise and prizes have arrived and are satisfactory. Then they can give a commission check to the promoter.

"Beware of promoters who promise to 'take care of everything' for you," Sachs warned in the letter. "In too many cases, if you do little or nothing to protect your interests, what you get is nothing in return."

Change In Maryland Policy

Fire Prevention Commission Permits Kerosene Heater Use In Homes

LAUREL, Md. (UPI) — The state's Fire Prevention Commission Tuesday overturned a 20-year ban on kerosene heaters in Maryland, voting 4-2 to allow the heaters to be used in one or two-family homes.

The commission, part of the Department of Public Safety, made its decision after hearing arguments from both heater manufacturers and fire officials from across the state.

Public Safety spokesman Dan McCarthy said local codes can continue to ban kerosene heaters even after the state ruling goes into effect on Dec. 7. He emphasized Maryland residents using kerosene heaters must abide by the guidelines set up by the Fire Prevention Commission.

"The types of kerosene heaters to be sold and used must meet or exceed the safety standards set by Underwriter Laboratories and bear the UL label," McCarthy said. "The units shall contain a warning device that they not be operated while unattended."

The commission also urges people to store kerosene fuel outide their homes and carefully read manufacturers instructions for the heaters, he said.

"Basically we've seen a lot more use of kerosene heaters because of the economic conditions. Peopleswant to use the cheapest source of heut they can," McCarthy said.

The controversy at Tuesday's public hearing centered not on whether kerosene heaters were safe, but on whether people could and would operate them in a safe manner.

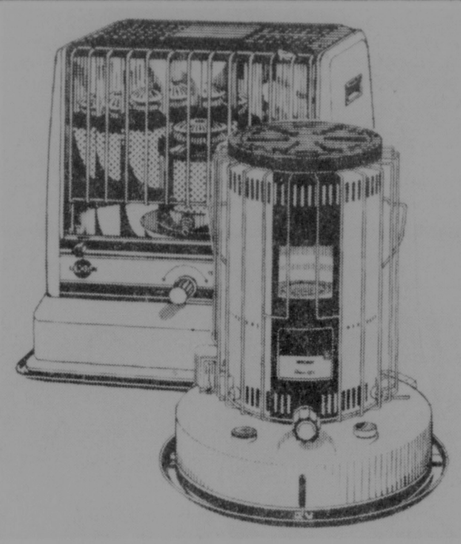
Lt. Ronald Kane of Baltimore Fire Prevention Bureau told the hearing that kerosene heaters are "too much dependent on people."

"In the fire service we learned a long time ago that buildings don't catch on fire. People set them on fire either accidentally or on purpose," Kane said.

The fire prevention official also feared kerosene fuel might prove tempting to would-be arsonists.

"Five gallons of kerosene sitting on the back porch of a building, somebody gets mad at you and you've got a definite problem on you hands," Kane said. "Storage tank oil has never been used to this effect, but a five gallon container (of kerosene) somebody could light it and throw it.

Try Our Want Ads. They Pay.



EFFECTIVE DECEMBER 7, the Maryland Fire Prevention Commission will permit the use of kerosene heaters similar to the models pictured above in single and two-family dwellings. This change in the state code overturns a twenty-year practice, and was made following a public hearing on Tuesday. Local codes can still ban the use of such heaters, the Commission said.

Hagerstown Prison Planned

More Guards, Better Walls Are Sought For State Penal System In 1982

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — The Board of Public Works voted Tuesday to hire more prison guards, build sturdier walls at a new prison planned for Baltimore, and authorize the money necessary to construct a new prison in Hagerstown that orginally had been planned for Jessup.

The board, Gov. Harry Hughes, Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein and Treasurer William S. James, also agreed to spend $4.1 million to provide the sewer and water services that will be necessary to expand the prison complex south of Hagerstown as Hughes has proposed.

In another prison-related action, the board agreed to change the official name of the recently opened prison annex at the House of Correction in Jessup to the Maryland Correctional Institution-Jessup.

The board agreed to spend $368,766 in emergency funds to hire 53 new prison guards, 23 of whom will be placed at the newly opened Reception and Diagnostic Center in Baltimore and 30 more at the Maryland Correctional Institute in Hagerstown.

In both instances, the board said the guards are needed to handle unexpected increases in inmate populations: 288 additional prisoners at the Baltimore facility and 160 at Hagerstown.

The board agreed to Hughes' new plan to build a prison in Hagerstown instead of in Jessup although the Hagerstown facility will cost nearly twice as much to design.

The state had planned to spend $748,750 for the Jessup prison, money left over from a 1977 authorization bill enacted at a time when legislators thought the state's newest prison would be built in Baltimore.

In 1980, the General Assembly decided to build in Jessup instead and early this year appropriated an additional $800,000 to plan still another 500-bed prison, although no specific site was designated.

Hughes and the board decided to combine a portion of the money from both authorizations to finance the nearly $1.7 million architectural and engineering contract for the new Hagerstown prison.

General Services Secretary J. Max Millstone said the prison will eventually cost about $40 million to build.

The board also decided to spend an additional $96,000 for the first phase of a plan to upgrade the perimeter fence and overall security at the minimum security prison to be built in Baltimore.

The prison was originally conceived as essentially a $6.4 million dormitory for inmates, but now will include reinforced masonry or concrete walls and a variety of security hardware that have pushed the overall cost to $9.8 million.

Hughes called the actions by the board "another saga in an ongoing effort to have adquate facilities to accomodate the ever increasing population of inmates.

"I just hope (the prison population) levels off," he said.

Veterans Leadership Program

Reagan Kicks Off New Self-Help Program For Vietnam Veterans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan officially inaugurated a self-help program for Vietnam veterans Tuesday, a program designed to buff up their tarnished image and increase their chances for jobs.

"Recognition and appreciation for all they went through is long overdue," Reagan said in a ceremony in the chilly White House Rose Garden. "The nation must be as loyal to them as they are to the nation."

The Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program "is designed to draw volunteers from the pool of successful Vietnam veterans to provide guidance for those with lingering problems," he said.

Reagan said the U.S. troops who fought in Vietnam "have never received the thanks they deserve for their extraordinary courage and dedication" for their efforts "in a war they were not allowed to win."

The VVLP is budgeted for $2 million per year for three years through ACTION, a federal agency coordinating administration volunteer programs. The veterans' program began at the start of the fiscal year on Oct. 1 but was formally initiated Tuesday, a day before Veterans Day. Federal participation is to be phased out by September 1984.

Plans call for the VVLP in its first year to set up centers in 50 cities to offer guidance and employment help for Vietnam veterans, said Thomas Paulken, ACTION director and a veteran. The centers will be headed by men and women who served in Vietnam and have since risen to solid positions within their communities.

The list of those already signing up to help fellow veterans include lawyers, educators, physicians and writers such as best-selling author Jim Webb, who wrote "Fields of Fire."

Spokesmen said the primary goal is to attack "unemployment and underemployment" among veterans, but also major steps would be taken to refurbish the image of the Southeast Asia veterans.

"The image is a critical factor," said Paulken, saying much of the program will be geared for "the young high school-age ground pounder...-who came back confused" and has not shaken his wartime problems in the decade that has passed since the end of the conflict.

Pauken said that "more than 80 percent" of those who served in Vietnam "have made it back successfully ... but there are a lot of guys that need a hand."

Kip Becker, an assistant dean at Wilmongton College and former helicopter pilot in Vietnam, complained about the "extremely negative" publicity that has surrounded the veterans and said the program would attempt "to present a different" view of the former servicemen.

"Our intention is to get the Vietnam veteran out of the closet ... to improve their self-esteem and pride," said Sam Bartholomew, a Nashville lawyer.

State Would Regulate Form

Off-Track Betting In Maryland Seeks Private Operation Of Parlors

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A state task force considering off-track betting Tuesday expressed support for a key member's plan to have private interests control and operate the gambling form.

The plan offered by Jerold C. Hoffberger, the former Baltimore Orioles' owner and a well-known horse breeder and owner, would have private interests raise needed capital for off-track betting and also have them run the operation. The state would solely regulate the betting form.

"We ccould start off-track betting on a small scale and adjust it later to make it grow or shrink as required by the public and the industry," said Hoffberger, whose comments evoked wide and strong support from fellow members of the Joint House-Senate Task Force on Off-Track Wagering.

The commission was appointed by Gov. Harry Hughes to explore the prospect of the gambling form and to report to the 1982 General Assembly. Despite that charge, panel chairman Rafael Cortada said he will seek to postpone the report until 1983.

Besides giving the group more time to study and refine Hoffberger's proposal, postponment would also increase chances of legislative action on task force recommendations, task force members said.

Sen. Melvin A. Steinberg, D-Baltimore County, agreed, saying, "I am a practical politician, and we are coming up on (the 1982 election year). Come January, we will be up to our ears with bills on reapportionment, salaries, transportation, the loss of federal funds. If you're talking about off-track betting, well, you might have a problem."

Off-track betting is a controversial topic in Maryland.

The betting form is mainly viewed as a means of increasing the handle, or amount of money bet, at the state's harness and thoroughbred tracks. Opposition centers on the perceived addictiveness of gambling.

During an Oct. 21 public hearing, seven of nine people testifying opposed off-track betting, including James Morrow, head of The Johns Hopkins University compulsive gambling counseling center.

"To allow off-track betting in neighborhood communities is to make it available to segments of the population such as the young and the poor," Morrow said.

During Tuesday's discussion, task force members suggested means of defusing some of the criticism, such as calling off-track betting some another name, such as "extended-track betting."

"As soon as we say off-track betting, I immediately think of New York and the parlor betting that goes on there," said Frank DeFrancis, owner of Freestate Raceway.

Parlors set their own odds on individual races, odds that often differ from those set by the tracks. Several commission members advocated a "phone-in" system, whereby bettors could place their wagers over the telephone.

Death Sentence Handed Down

ROCKVILLE, Md. (UPI) — A man convicted of slaying a police officer and a security guard during a robbery in White Oak last March was sentenced to death Tuesday by a Montgomery County judge.

Circuit Judge William M. Cave sentenced James A. Calhoun to die in the gas chamber for the murder of Montgomery County police officer Philip C. Metz during the robbery of a W. Bell Co. store.

Although Cave denied a defense motion for a new trial, all death sentences are automatically appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Calhoun also was given a life sentence for lhe felony murder of security guard David W. Myers, who was killed during the robbery. And Calhoun received concurrent sentences totaling 90 years on several other convictions, including 30 years for the attempted murder of Douglas Cummins Jr., assistant manager of the Bell store.

Cummins was the sole survivor of the shootings and earlier had identified Calhoun as the man who shot Metz. Cummins also was shot in the chest during the incident.

Baltimore Co. Brings Indictment In Rape-Murder Of Arbutus Couple

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — A Baltimore man was indicted on murder and rape charges for the deaths of an Arbutus couple and the rape of a woman boarding at their house, court records showed Tuesday.

The indictment, ceturned Monday by a Baltimore County grand jury, charges Donald Thomas, 23, with two counts of first-degree murder, three sex offenses and armed robbery.

Investigators said Donald L. Spurling, a former state trooper, and his wife, Sarah, were found murdered in their home. Police said a 24-year-old boarder, a student at University of Maryland in Baltimore County, was raped.

Thomas S. Basham, an assistant state's attorney, said Thomas could face the death penalty. But Basham said prosecutors have not decided whether to request the death penalty, although the case "qualifies for it" under state law.

The Spurlings' bodies were discovered about 5 a.m. Oct. 2 after the rape victim, who had been bound to her bed, freed herself, jumped from a second-floor window and ran across the street for help.

Thomas, who Baltimore County District Judge Gerard Wittstad described as a heroin addict with a $70-a-day habit, was held without bail in the county jail.

Caucus Leaders Seek State Funding

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — The heads of three legislative caucuses pleaded before a panel of General Assembly leaders Tuesday for continued state funding of at least a portion of their operations.

The Legislative Policy Committee, headed by House Speaker Benjamin Cardin, D-Baltimore, Senate President James Clark, D-Howard, and composed of committee chairmen and minority leadership from both houses, is considering changing the rules that allow individual legislators to divert some of their expense money to finance caucuses such as the five that now exist: the Legislative Study Group, the Women's Caucus, an energy caucus, the Black Caucus, and a caucus of Baltimore delegates.

After a hearing at which representatives of the first three of those five testified, the legislative leaders decided to put off any vote on the issue for at least two weeks.

Cardin, however, was optimistic afterwards that a compromise could be reached with Policy Committee members who want an end to any state funding of caucuses.

"I would hope we wouldn't put out of business the Legislative Study Group, and the Women's and Black Caucuses," he said. "We're just trying to avoid a problem from happening."

At issue is whether taxpayer dollars should be diverted to small groups of legislators who voluntarily form the caucuses, which in turn could be used to lobby for or against specific issues before the General Assembly.

Delegate Sheila Hixson, D-Montgomery, this year's chairman of the oldest legislative caucus, the Legislative Study Group, said the LSG was bipartisan and that it did not lobby for or against issues, but rather offered its legislative members educational material on issues confronting them and advice on procedural matters.

"We do not lobby, we educate," Ms. Hixson said. "We do not campaign for any party — witness our bipartisan support."

Each of the caucuses operates at least in part with funds contributed by its legislative members from "interim expense accounts" granted the lawmakers for use in setting up and operating district offices.

General Assembly leaders have said they fear the "loophole" that allows such financing could lead to abuse, with caucuses being formed for or against virtually any specific issue.

The Legislative Study Group is the largest caucus, with 52 members who have contributed $29,069 for caucus activities. It also holds its own fundraisers, has a private office and a full-time staff director.

Sen. Hoyer Criticizes Insurance Change For Federal Workers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Steny Hoyer's criticism of a decision to drop the "open season" in which federal employees may change their health insurance plans is "overtly political", a personnel spokesman said Tuesday.

"That criticism is unfair and does not accurately portray the factors that have led to the need for cuts in the program (and the postponement of the "open season)," said Pat Korten, a spokesman for Donald Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management.

Hoyer, a Democrat, called for the reinstatement of the open season and said the decision drop it "raises serious questions about the ability of (Devine) to manage effectively the most fundamental of personnel matters."

Devine, a former Republican candidate for Maryland Secretary of State, helped direct President Reagan's 1980 campaign in the state.

Hoyer represents Maryland's 5th Congressional District, which includes thousands of government employees and retirees.

Hoyer said Devine ordered an end to the "open season" and reductions in federal payments to health plans "after it was learned that OPM miscalculated by $500 million the amount needed to fund current health benefit levels."

But Korten said the $500 million miscalculation was the result of a miscalculation by Carter administration.

Several insurance carriers have challenged the government's request in court, Korten said, resulting in delays in the printing of brochures needed for federal employees to choose among the various plans.

36,000 Affected

Committee Seeks To Restore Names Removed From State Welfare Rolls

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — A legislative oversight committee Tuesday asked the state's secretary of human resources to come up with a "creative" plan that could put most of approximately 36,000 welfare recipients back on the welfare rolls.

Benefits to the Maryland recipie. Vs were eliminated ear lier this month by higher income eligibility requirements that were part of the new federal budget that went into effect Oct. 1.

Secretary Kalman Hettleman, however, told members of the Administrative, Executive and Legislative Rev' iew Committee that he was considering raising the "standard of need" for welfare recipients, an adminis-atrative move that could put most of the 36,000 back on welfare, although with lower benefits than they had been receiving.

The "standard of need" is the amount of money the department says welfare families of various sizes need, at a minimum, to live.

The current standard of need in Maryland is $326 a month for a family of four, which is also the maximum amount of combined federal and state money recipients receive under the Aid for Dependent Children program, the largest of the welfare programs.

Under the new Reagan administration budget, however, states were told they would not receive the 50 percent matching share from the federal government for any recipients whose earnings were more than 150 percent of the standard of need, or, in Maryland's case, $489 for a family of four.

The result was that 36,000 Maryland residents who received A.F.D.C. welfare checks in October suddenly were notified they would get nothing in November.

Hettleman, supported by groups such as Associated Catholic Charities, proposed administratively raising the standard of need from $326 to $400 a month, a change that would raise the Reagan administration cutoff for Maryland from $489 to $600 a month.

Actual payments, however, would not be changed.

The AELR Committee, which must approve emergency regulations adopted by executive departments, said it favored such a concept and requested Hettleman to report back in two weeks with a firm proposal.

"Star Wars" In Federal Court During Infringement Argument

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A copyright infringement battle that turned the U.S. District Court into a makeshift arcade ended with attorneys arguing on the relative merits of feath rays and the like in the games "Meteors" and "Asteroids."

Atari of California Inc., based in Sunnyvale, Calif., had charged Amusement World, of Eldersburg, Md., with infringing on its copyright for "Asteroids." The copyright was granted June 17, 1980, and attorneys contended Monday the Meteors game too closely resembles it.

Both games, brought into the courthouse and demonstrated before Judge Joseph H. Young, are housed in black cabinents with drawings of space ships and exploding stars painted in pastel colors. In each game, players try to destroy moving objects with death rays before the objects may destroy them.

During testimony, Stephen D. Holnicker, a self-described computer hobbyist and Amusement World president, said "Meteors" is much faster than "Asteroids" and has other distinct features.

Raffle Violates State Law

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The Maryland Department of General Services apparently violated state law Tuesday when it allowed a raffle to benefit the Maryland United Way campaign to be held on government property, officials said.

Richard Nietubicz, head of the agency's United Way campaign, said a group of 100 employees decided to raffle off a television Tuesday to boost sagging contributions to the charitable cause. Apparently those employees didn't know raffles were banned in state buildings, he said.

"It's embarrassing. If I could think of a tactful way of stopping it I would," said Nietubicz, explaining he feared halting sales of the $1 raffle tickets would "turn people off" the United Way campaign.

"We'll turn our back and let the thing take its course, but we won't let it happen again."

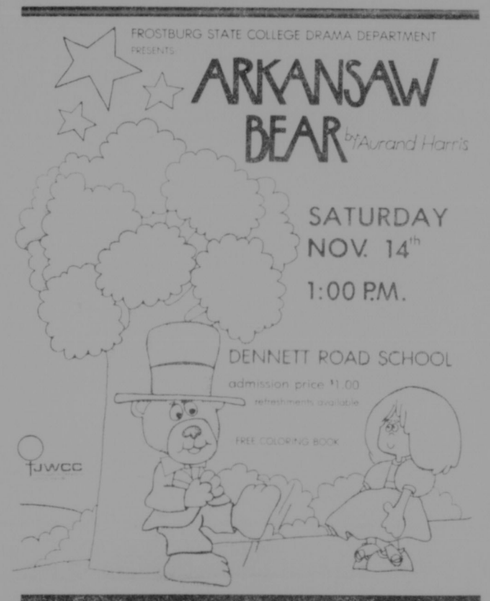
Missionary To Speak At Kitzmiller Church

The Reverend David W. McCully, missionary to Nigeria, Africa, will be the featured speaker at the Kitzmiller Assemblies of God Church this Sunday, November 15, at 7 p.m.

Rev. and Mrs. McCulley are veteran missionaries with over 31 years of missionary service with the Foreign Missions Department of the Assemblies of God. Prior to their missionary appointment, the McCulleys pastored in Baltimore and in Fairmont, W. Va. They began their missionary ministries in 1950 with an appointment in Liberia. Later they were transfered to Nigeria and served in many teaching, preaching and administrative positions.

The public is invited to share in this special service, according the Juris V. Reneslacis, pastor.

QUILT AWARDED — The Garrett Holstein Club recently raffled a quilt made by the Amish community (seen in the other photos on this page), with the proceeds being donated to the Jesse Swartzentruber fund. The quilt was purchased at the recent county Holstein sale by the Garrett National Bank and then donated to the Holstein club for use as a fundraising raffle project. In the photo are Robert Custer, left, manager of the Potomac Valley PCA/FLB, one of the promoters of the raffle, and Oren Bender, of the Holstein Club, who organized the project, which raised $1,176 to help defray medical expenses incurred by the Swartzentruber family. Drawing the winning ticket was Dale Rodeheaver, of the Garrett National Bank. The winner of the quilt was Mrs. Ralph Burnett, Swallow Falls.



Workshop On Job Hunting Strategies To Be Offered

Barbara Carl, administrative assistant of the Homemaker Career Opportunities Program of Garrett Community College will be at the Grantsville Library branch on November 16 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. to meet with anyone interested in learning more about the free career counseling services of the Homemaker Career Opportunities Program.

Many people find themselves in a transition period of their lives, Mrs. Carl said, due to separation, divorce, widowhood or the economic crunch. These individuals may need to go to work, but lack the skills or self-confidence necessary to reach their employment goals. Mrs. Carl will be available to offer guidance regarding career decisions and answer questions persons may have regarding the opportunities available through the displaced homemaker project.

Persons interested in learning more about the program or participating in its free career counseling are invited to be at the Grantsville Library on November 16 or to call 334-9184 for further information.

Census Bureau Slates Survey

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment in Garrett County during the work week of November 16 through 21, John Kuntz, Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Philadelphia, announced recently.

The survey is conducted for the U.S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 71,000 households throughout the United States. Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the Nation.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals, according to Kuntz.

Why does life put such a premium on balance?

I've been trying for years to fit junk food into a balanced diet. When I succeed in anything someone says the scale's more tipped in my favor. When I fail I wasn't equal to the challenge.

This emphasis we place on balance is not an accident. Man has always been aware that God built into his creation order and stability. Without solving the whole mystery, I realize that my spiritual growth has to keep pace with my physical and intellectual development.

Worshipping each week helps for a well-balanced life.

WHEN TO SEE A DOCTOR IF WOUNDED

It is most important to know when to see a physician for first aid.

If there is real spurting bleeding, this is an emergency. If slow bleeding continues beyond four to ten minutes, medical attention is needed. If there is foreign material in the wound which does not clean out easily; if it is a deep puncture wound or is long or wide so that stitches may be required, a physician is needed.

Also, if the wound has been in contact with soil or manure, or if signs of infection such as pain, redness, or swelling develop, don't wait. Expert attention quickly will prevent hours of pain and possible infection.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU CHARISMATIC?
November 15, 1981

Background Scripture:
I Corinthians 12 through 13.

Devotional Reading:
Romans 12: 1-13.

Knowing of my interest and involvement in the ministry of spiritual healing, the newspaper reporter said, "Are you a charismatic?"

My first impulse was to reply in the negative. I realized that he assumed that only members of the "charismatic movement" are interested in the healing ministry of the church—a wrong but understandable assumption. But I decided the time had come for someone to try to put the controversy over the "gifts of the Spirit" in a different perspective.

Except by the Holy Spirit

"The answer to your question is both 'yes' and 'no'," I replied. "I am charismatic and, if you're a Christian so are you, but that doesn't mean that we are necessarily part of what is known today as the charismatic movement." I went on to say that, while I have no quarrel with that movement, I have not been attracted to become part of it.

My quarrel, I said, is with those who use the issue of the gifts of the Holy Spirit to divide and antagonize Christians. The Holy Spirit is not the special or unique possession of one particular group of Christians, nor are the gifts of the Spirit limited to people following one Christian lifestyle. All of us have the Holy Spirit within us and all of us are granted gifts by the Spirit, although we may not be aware of them or make use of them.

Today, however, it is customary for some Christians to insist that they alone "possess" the Holy Spirit and are endowed with the gifts of the Spirit. Even more arrogantly, some of these further hold that when the rest of us preach, teach or heal in Christ's name, we are endowed not by the Holy Spirit, but the devil. Remember that the same charge was made against Jesus (Matthew 12: 24).

But the Same Spirit

Thus in I Corinthians 12, 13 and 14, Paul deals with the same problem. Some people in Corinth are claiming that they alone have the gifts of God's Spirit while others are empowered by the power of Satan. Paul says it plainly: "I want you to understand that no one speaking by the Spirit of God ever says 'Jesus be cursed!' and no one can say 'Jesus is Lord' except by the Holy Spirit. Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of service, but the same Lord" (I Cor. 13: 3, 4).

Paul goes on to say that the gifts of the Spirit without love—love that is not jealous or boastful, love that does not insist on its own way — are worthless. Thus, if we have the Holy Spirit in us, we will be humble, not proud, loving of others, not contentious, and willing to acknowledge that all of God's children are gifted with the charisma of the one Spirit.

Recycling Of Wastewater Within Home Being Investigated At WVU

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.—If you live in a rural area and have a limited water supply, sewage disposal can be a real problem.

A scattered rural population can't support a central sewage treatment plant and in many areas where a layer of rock or clay is near the surface, septic tanks are not effective. In addition, both of those systems require large amounts of water.

Recycling of wastewater within the home — to alleviate the need for both fresh water and sewage disposal — is being investigated by the Water Research Institute at West Virginia University.

A report on the subject, "Microbial Purification of Recycled Wastewater," has been published by the institute. Its authors are William J. Shoupp and John M. Digness, former graduate research assistants with the institute, and the late Paul G. Moe, professor of bacteriology.

The WVU system consists of an aerobic digestion tank, a settling tank, a filter, an ultraviolet light disinfecting unit, a reservoir tank, three pumps and an air compressor. It was tested on a laboratory scale with synthetic sewage.

Aerobic sewage systems employ oxygen-using bacteria to destroy the objectionable material. In this system, compressed air was fed into the digestion tank to supply the oxygen. And the spent water in the reservoir was recycled into the digestion tank. About 270 gallons of water were used in the test runs.

Key to an aerobic treatment system is that there are naturally occurring bacteria in the sewage that will break down the objectionable material. Enough oxygen has to be supplied to maintain a sufficiently large population of bacteria.

Test organisms, used to check the survivability of disease-causing organisms, were unable to establish themselves in the microbial population and perished within a few hours. This indicates that no serious health hazards would be associated with the system in a home.

Overall efficiency of the system was about 85 percent, similar to the 85-95 percent efficiency of a modern secondary sewage treatment plant, according to the report.

Limiting factors of the present test system are inadequate aeration and the high rate of mineral-salt accumulation. Thus a chemical disinfect. The ultra-violet light unit also was unable to sterilize the effluent. Thus a chemical disinfect probably would improve effluent quality, which would require another filter to remove the disinfect before the effluent was returned to the digestor tank.

Other concerns are that frequent replacement of the filter cartridges is necessary and the three water pumps and the air conditioner must be maintained. In addition, the system would have to be flushed periodically to eliminate the buildup of salinity.

Copies of the report may be obtained by writing the Water Research Institute, West Virginia University, 202 Knapp Hill, Morgantown, W. Va. 26506.

Jobless Rate In Maryland Steady, Higher In Garrett

The Maryland unemployment rate remained at 7.2 percent in September, according to statistics released by the Maryland Department of Human Resources, while Garrett County's rate increased from 12.0 percent in August to 14.4 percent in September.

This state rate has been stable for four consecutive months. Usually, during this time of year, the rate declines as a result of summer workers leaving the labor force, according to the Department.

Maryland's September rate of 7.2 percent also equals the record rate for September hit during the recession in 1976 and it greatly exceeds the rate of 6.2 percent set last September. And, for the third consecutive month, Maryland's unemployment rate essentially equaled the national rate which is usually higher than the rate set by the State.

Maryland's labor force expanded slightly in September by an estimated 600 persons. Some 1,400 more persons became employed while the number of unemployed persons declined by 800. Last year, during this same period, unemployment and employment experienced a substantial decrease. The decline last year was attributed to an increase in hiring summer workers in city and county government. As a result, at the end of the summer months, a larger number of government layoffs was necessary.

Manufacturing employment advanced this September with vacation recalls in non-electrical machinery and seasonal hiring in food processing. Hiring also occurred in transportation, in education as the school year began, and in trade as the convention and holiday seasons got underway. Nonetheless, federal and local governments did layoff summer workers, this year, and construction demonstrated unseasonable layoffs for the second consecutive month.

The Baltimore metropolitan area's unemployment rate inched down from 8.5 percent in August to 8.4 percent in September. Staff cutbacks in education, the end of the city's summer job programs, and layoffs in shipbuilding and repair contributed to the increase in Baltimore city's unemployment rate from 10.3 percent to 10.7 percent. Carroll County's rate dropped from 11.3 percent to 6.4 percent as vacation layoffs ended in nonelectrical machinery manufacturing.

Large layoffs of summer workers in federal government were observed in the Maryland suburbs of the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, contributing to the rise in the area's unemployment rate from 4.5 percent to 4.7 percent.

As unemployment gains matched employment losses, Western Maryland's unemployment rate advanced from 8.7 percent to 9.4 percent. Layoffs in coal mining and at a utility company in West Virginia caused the notable increase in the unemployment rate in Garrett County, according to the Department.

The end of summer jobs in resort areas also affected Worcester County's employment picture as its unemployment rate rose from 5.9 percent to 7.2 percent.

Unemployment rates subsided during the month in other counties on the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland due to seasonal hiring in food processing and education. Recalls in Delaware's transportation equipment industry caused the unemployment rate for Cecil County residents to drop from 13.6 percent to 8.3 percent.

Yoder Addresses Ministers, Seeks Volunteer Help

At a recent meeting of the Mountain Top Ministerial Association, Duane Yoder, Director of the Garrett County Community Action agency shared with the group his concern over federal budget cuts and how these cuts will affect government programs which have been in existence in the county.

A particular concern, he noted, is the cutbacks in Housing Rehabilitation Programs. Because of restrictive program guidelines and funding limitations Community Action and other agencies are not able to assist many families in Garrett County who are in need of help, he said.

After some discussion the ministers agreed to solicit members from their respective congregations to form a volunteer network which will come together as needs arise to make repairs on houses. The Community Action Agency will work with the group in identifying families who are in need of housing repair.

Community Action has already presented the Ministerial Association with a list of six families who need immediate help. These six situations involve roof repair, electrical hook-up, repair of a sewer line and weatherization on windows.

An organizational meeting will be held on Thursday, November 12, at 7:30 p.m. in the basement of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, Second Street in Oakland. All interested persons are invited to attend.

November Designated As Epilepsy Awareness Month

EPILEPSY POSTER CHILD — Brenda J. Buckley, six-year-old Bountiful, Utah, resident will represent the more than two million Americans with epilepsy during the 1981-82 public education campaign. Brenda began having seizures when she was four years old, but now leads a normal, active life with daily medication. November is Epilepsy Awareness Month, during which time foundations around the country conduct a nationwide public education campaign.

November is Epilepsy Awareness Month. More than any other disorder, epilepsy has been surrounded by misunderstanding, prejudice, and even fear — attitudes that may block the hopes and aspirations of the more than two million Americans with epilepsy.

The Epilepsy Association of Maryland conducts public education campaigns throughout the year in an attempt to combat such misunderstanding.

More than 40,000 persons in Maryland have epilepsy, ranging from convulsive seizures to brief periods where the person loses consciousness and appears to daydream. Epilepsy is not a disease and is not contagious. It is a disorder of the brain caused by temporary generation of excess electrochemical energy inside the brain cells. There is no single cause for the disorder. It can be triggered by a number of events, such as birth trauma or a severe head injury. It can arise without being triggered by any specific event.

Each year, approximately 100,000 new cases develop, mostly among children. For most people, the seizures are brief and infrequent. Between seizures, most people with epilepsy are perfectly normal and healthy. For the vast majority of people with epilepsy, medication can control their seizures.

According to many persons with epilepsy, it is the public's reaction to the disorder — not the epilepsy itself — which creates the disabilty.

For facts on how to help, contact the Epilepsy Association of Maryland, toll free, at 800-492-2523, or write EAM, Suite 20, 3121 St. Paul St., Baltimore, Md. 21218.

Delegate Bolden Will Be Guest On "In Person"

Delegate DeCorsey Bolden (R-Allegany-Garrett) of Oakland will be the guest on the "In Person" show, sponsored by the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting, to appear on television channel 36 this Sunday, November 15, and Sunday, December 13, at 10 a.m.

During the interview Bolden speaks of how he became involved in politics, he talks of his grandfather who was with the General Assembly in 1910 and his father, and Bolden's relationship in the General Assembly with other legislators and how he functions as a single representative.

Also discussed is the coal tax issue and "how it was diffused or watered down by the local county commissioners and the coal industry, and how difficult it was to try to bring that bill to the floor," Bolden stated.

Bolden was one of five persons interviewed for shows when "In Person" host Rich Breitenfeld was in Garrett County the first week of October. Also interviewed were Maryland Governor Harry Hughes; Dr. Donald L. Ruhl, president of Garrett Community College; Ruby Collins, a student at GCC, and Judge Lewis R. Jones, District Court in Garrett County.

Democracy's Cornerstone

THE GIFTED AND TALENTED
by David W. Hornbeck
State Superintendent of Schools
Maryland State Department of Education

Did you ever think about the childhood and student days of those who receive Nobel Prizes? Or who play in the Baltimore Symphony? Or conceived and followed through with the spectacular journey of Voyager II, wrote the books that won the National Book Award? Their talent sometimes make it hard to envision them as fifteen or sixteen years olds. And yet they were.

The public schools historically made only modest efforts to recognize and respond to these unusual students. Indeed, more than a few exceptionally able young people actually dropped out of school or were behavior problems, not because they were failures in the traditional sense, but because they were not challenged.

Let me share with you some good news. The growth of opportunity in Maryland for gifted and talented students has been dramatic in the past five years. For example, the Maryland State Department of Education has for a number of years provided gifted and talented summer programs. In 1976, 897 students in grades 7-12 participated in arts and science programs at three centers. By 1980, there were thirteen centers with 2,410 students in grades 5-12. The center programs ranged from economics to the arts to physical science and engineering to environmental technology as well as humanities and the liberal arts. The 2,410 students were selected from approximately 5,000 applicants. Tight budgets and inflation made it necessary to cutback to 2,300 students in twelve centers in 1981. We chose participants from over 7,000 applicants. Enriched as a result of their experiences, students will assume their place in the years to come as cultural, governmental, scientific and business leaders. And the cost to the people of Maryland is modest indeed — less than $400 per pupil on the average.

But, in a real sense, the best news is not the stimulation of student intellect and talent arising from the summer efforts. It is the outstanding growth in the quality and quantity of opportunity provided by local school systems during the regular school year, increasingly as part of the normal school program.

By the end of this school year gifted and talented inservice training programs funded and/or provided by the Maryland State Department of Education will have included approximately 2,300 elementary, middle/junior high school and high school teachers throughout the state. With this assistance and the outstanding commitment of local school systems the growth of programs has been little short of phenomenal. In 1975 only six school systems offered programs for the gifted and talented. Today all twenty-four do. In the 1975-76 school year approximately 5,000 students participated. In 1977-78 the number was 13,500. In 1979-80 it was nearly 25,000. Sixty percent of the schools in the state (784) made special provision to serve their gifted/talented students in 1979-80.

And the story is not one of sheer growth but it is one of quality and scope as well. Programs fall into five areas — general intellectual ability, specific academic talent, creative/productive thinking, visual and performing arts and leadership training. Improved identification of the highly able student, the assignment of supervisory staff and the commitment of resources has made programs richer and more productive.

All of these efforts reflect local school systems' continuing emphasis on excellence. The pay-off is for the students who one day will assume those positions of leadership, making this nation and this planet an even more civilized place for their children.

Social Security Tax Rates Will Rise January 1

Both Social Security tax rates and the maximum amount of earnings taxed will rise January 1 under provisions of the 1977 Social Security Amendments, Miss Valerie J. Loughran, District Manager of Cumberland Social Security Office, stated recently.

Under the 1977 Act, the maximum Social Security tax on wages will rise by $195.75 to $2,170.80 as a result of increases in the Social Security tax rate from 6.65 percent to 6.70 percent and in the maximum taxable earnings base from $29,700 to $32,400. Employers' contributions will rise by the same amount, Miss Loughran added.

An average worker earning $13,729 in 1981 and paying $912.98 in Social Security taxes will pay $1,008.02 in 1982 based on an estimated salary of $15,045. Low-income workers earning $6,968 in 1981 and paying $463.37 in Social Security taxes will pay $511.61 in 1982 based on an estimated income of $7,636. Employers' contributions will rise by same amount.

For self-employed persons, the 1982 tax rate will rise from 9.30 percent to 9.35 percent next year, resulting in a maximum possible Social Security tax of $3,029.40 on the new maximum taxable base of $32,400, a tax increase of $267.30 over this year.

A number of other changes will also become effective January 1 as a result of the automatic provisions of the Social Security Act. Among these changes are:

- The maximum amount of earnings that a beneficiary under age 65 may earn in a year without losing any Social Security benefits will increase from $4,080 in 1981 to $4,440 in 1982.

- The exempt amount for beneficiaries aged 65 to 72 will increase from $5,500 in 1981 to $6,000 in 1982. The increase for beneficiaries aged 65 to 72 does not result from the automatic provisions, but was provided for by the 1977 amendments.

Beneficiaries who are aged 72 or over (aged 70 or over beginning in 1983) may earn any amount without losing benefits, beginning with the month in which they are 72 (70 in 1983).

- The amount of earnings required for a quarter of coverage will increase to $340, up from $310 this year.

The 1982 increase in the maximum taxable earnings was determined under automatic adjustment provisions in the law. These provisions specify a formula which automatically keeps the earnings base up to date as wage levels increase.

Persons having questions regarding the above information, or Social Security in general, or wishing to file applications for Social Security Income, may telephone 724-0970. The Social Security Office is located at 316 Paca Street, Cumberland.

Real Estate
By DON CARSTENS
Deep Creek Realty

THE GAME OF THE NAME

Perhaps you may be a little confused with all the names and the titles given to people who sell real estate. Here's a breakdown on the differences.

A broker is a person who is licensed to deal in real estate for pay. He is sometimes called a real estate salesman or agent. Salesmen must also be licensed. The broker is usually the person who owns the business whereas the salesman or sales associate works for him. The term agent is a catchall phrase that is used for brokers and salesmen and also for REALTORS. Anyone who represents you in financial matters is your "agent".

Over 315,000 of this country's real estate professionals call themselves REALTORS. They are members of the National Association of Realtors and also of their local and state real estate boards. REALTORS are pledged to subscribe to a strict code of ethics established by the National Association. He is among the leading brokers of a community - but this is not to say that many non-REALTOR brokers are not as reputable.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone one of our offices:

ARMED SERVICES REVIEW

Norman S. Lewis Jr., son of Ms. Elsie Lewis, Swallow Falls, and Norman Lewis Sr., recently enlisted in the U.S. Army delayed entry program.

Lewis is a 1980 graduate of Southern High School. He will begin basic training at Ft. Knox, Kent., on Nov. 18. His first assignment will be with the First Infantry division at Fort Riley, Kan.

Ronald C. Shaffer, was recently promoted to a major in the U.S. Army.

Shaffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shaffer, Somerset, Pa., graduated from West Virginia University with a bachelor's degree in mathematics. He received his Army commission through the ROTC in 1969. He's presently completing graduate studies for his master's degree in business administration.

The major has had two overseas assignments in Germany. He's received the Army Commendation Medal with his second Oak Leaf Cluster. He is currently chief of the Procurement Office at Rock Island Arsenal, Rock Island, Ill.

Shaffer is married to the former Ruth Marie Dunbar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barney Dunbar, Oakland. They have two sons, Eric, 11 and David, 6.

Marine Cpt. Harold R. Harsh, son of Harold R. and Joanne C. Harsh of Shady Lane, Mountain Lake Park, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with Headquarters and Maintenance Squadron-26, Marine Corps Helicopter Air Station, New River, Jacksonville, N.C.

A 1979 graduate of Southern High School, he joined the Marine Corps in January 1979.

Navy Seaman Paul R. Dixon III, son of Barbara A. Dixon of Route 2, Swanton, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training on one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

He joined the Navy in July 1981.

Airman Thomas B. Butscher, Jr., son of Thomas B. Butscher of Oakland, and Pat L. Roach of Coeymans Hollow, N.Y., has been assigned to Keesler Air Force Base, Miss., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied sciences through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the communications-electronics systems field.

Butscher's wife, Pamela, is the daughter of Mrs. Dan Donahue of 157 Brandon Road, Baltimore.

He is a 1975 graduate of Ravena Coeymans Selkirk High School, N.Y.

Port visits are scheduled in several Mediterranean costal cities. The 32nd MAU is the force-in-readiness for the 6th Fleet, on call to protect combined air/ground forces ashore, if necessary.

A 1974 graduate of North East High School, Sines joined the Marine Corps in December 1980.

It's YOUR Money

By Randle A. Rodeheaver

MONEY WORDS: THEIR FASCINATING ORIGIN

Money: The Roman goddess, Juno, "The Warner" of the people, also became known as Moneta, from the Latin word "moneo," I warn. A temple erected in her honor in Rome became a mint and its coins were called "moneta," money in its cash form.

Dollar: In the early 1500's, a mint in Joachimsthal, in what is now Czechoslovakia, began to turn out coins from silver mined nearby. They were called Joachimsthaler, later shortened to Thaler, from which our dollar eventually got its name.

Dime: "Decima," the Latin word for tenth, became "disme" in Old French, then "dime" in modern French. It means tithe, the tenth part of one's earnings donated to the church for charitable purposes. We made the dime the tenth part of our dollar.

English pound: At present worth $1.80, it was originally a pound of silver, a unit of exchange. Silver currently sells for about $11.15 an ounce.

Bankrupt: The money changer in the old Italian cities did business on a "banca" or bench. When he could not pay his debts, his bench was destroyed in the market place. The Italian words for broken bench: "banca rotta."

Salary: Roman solders regularly received an allowance to buy salt, which was not as cheap as it is today. The allowance was called a "salarium," from "sal," the Latin word for salt. Today anyone on regular pay is said to receive a salary.

ENERGY TIP: When choosing fabrics for winter clothes, choose warm fabrics such as wool and cotton. Also, corduroy, fleece and other fabrics with piles are warm, as are fabrics with bonded linings. Man-made fibers tend to be colder, but when blended with natural fabrics are warmer.

THE WORKING WOMAN'S WARDROBE

A woman needs to strive to dress distinctively enough to gain respect and pleasantly enough to display efficient, creative energy. Planning your wardrobe is the first step towards dressing successfully in work. The following information will help you learn how to plan your wardrobe to fit you.

*Plan your wardrobe so it is varied enough to avoid boredom, yet practical enough so you don't have to worry about your clothing being soiled or damaged at work.

*It costs money to acquire a basic wardrobe but it costs less to maintain it than if you bought a lot of unrelated pieces.

*Simple outfits can be more easily accessorized.

*Separates are versatile but require more thought and planning during the building process. They are less expensive and move easily from season to season, year to year.

*To save money, mix one expensive quality item with some things of lesser quality. Always put the showpiece on top.

*Scarves are interesting and fun. Always tie them in a square knot and anchor them discreetly with a safety pin. Avoid chiffon scarves.

*Belts can help to finish an outfit by making a skirt and blouse become an ensemble.

An example of a basic wardrobe might be:

—Two jackets, one tweed and one velvet.

—Three skirts, a classic tailored one, one which is softly gathered, and one made of an abstract print.

—Two pair of pants, one in a tweed, another in a solid.

—Four blouses that color coordinate with the skirts, pants and jackets.

—Two additional tops, such as a soft-textured rabbit hair sweater and a synthetic suede vest.

—Three dresses, such as soft sweater dress, a dark colored small to medium print challis and a silk-like fabric with a soft bow or tucks.

FOOD NOTES

Turkey is now in plentiful supply, so it's a good, inexpensive meat to buy. When purchasing whole, ready-to-cook turkeys over 12 pounds, allow ½ to ¾ pound per serving. For smaller birds under 12 pounds, allow ¾ to 1 pound per serving.

Try this delicious recipe with your left-over turkey:

CHINESE-STYLE TURKEY AND VEGETABLES

2 cups thin strips cooked turkey
½ stick (¼ cup) butter
½ pound fresh mushrooms, thinly sliced
1 cup sliced celery, cut on an angle into ½ inch slices
About ¾ pound fresh spinach, washed and torn into large pieces
1 large onion, sliced
Soy sauce

Melt butter in wok pan or large skillet. Stir in mushrooms and celery and cook about 2 minutes. Push to side. Add spinach and onion. Stir to coat with butter. Cover and steam 2 minutes. Remove vegetables from pan to keep from overcooking. Add turkey, cover and cook 3 minutes. Return vegetables to wok or skillet, arranging attractively. Sprinkle with soy sauce and toss just before serving with lightly seasoned cooked rice.

*If fresh spinach is not available, use a 10-ounce package frozen leaf spinach, cooking and stirring only enough to heat through.

Legal Aid Bureau Notes November Outreach Schedule

The Western Maryland Office of the Legal Aid Bureau, Inc., will maintain an outreach schedule for persons in Garrett, Southern Allegany, and western Washington Counties in November, attorney Ann B. Wilson announced last week.

Staff members of Legal Aid will be available to discuss legal problems with persons at the following locations: Westernport, November 18, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, Odd Fellows Hall on Front Street; Oakland, November 13 and November 25, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Oakland Center of Garrett Community College; Hancock, November 20, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, Potomac Bend Medical Center on High Street; Grantsville, November 30, 10 a.m. to 12 noon, at the Health Center.

Legal Aid Bureau, Inc., is a federally-funded organization of lawyers and other professionals which provides legal assistance in civil matters to qualified persons. The Western Maryland office was opened in December, 1978, to cover the needs of low-income people in the three western counties of the state. Services are available free of charge to anyone whose income and property holdings are below certain federally-mandated levels.

The central office for the Legal Aid Bureau of Western Maryland is located at 110 Greene Street, Cumberland, Maryland 21502. The office can be reached from the Oakland area by dialing 334-8832.

Whenever possible, persons needing assistance should call to schedule an appointment for one of the outreach locations or for an appointment at the central office in Cumberland, Ms. Wilson said.

Holiday Park Schedule Noted

A reminder has been issued by the Maryland Forest and Park Services that all day use areas of state parks will be closed Thursday and Friday, November 26 and 27, 1981. The parks will be open for business as usual Saturday, November 28, 1981.

Campers interested in camping in state parks during the two day Thanksgiving holiday are advised to contact the park in advance to determine its campground schedule.

Attorney General's Docket

by Stephen H. Sachs
Attorney General of Maryland

Some surveys have shown that rich and poor consumers alike spend about the same amount a year on food — and all are trying to save money when they go to the grocery store.

According to an Economics, Statistics and Cooperative Service survey conducted back in 1979, the poorest consumers spent an average of $622 per person for groceries then, while wealthy consumers spent an average of $648 per person that year — only 4 percent more. (Remember, that's in 1979 dollars).

Of course, the money poorer consumers spend on food represents a considerably larger portion of their income — about 25 percent compared to 6.5 percent.

Over all, the average percentage of before-tax income spent by all consumers for food is 15 percent, the survey showed.

While that is less per person that consumers in many other countries spend, it is a substantial portion of a person's income, and a study by the Opinion Research Corporation indicates that unbranded, less-expensive "generic" products are attracting more and more consumers as price, not product name, is becoming an increasingly important consideration for food shoppers.

Nearly half of the people responding to the survey — 49 percent — said they were buying more generic goods than they did a few years ago, and inflation is bedevilling wealthier shoppers as much as it is the middle-income and poorer consumers. (Ironically, the Opinion Research study shows that affluent shoppers are the ones leading the trend toward "economy size" packages, coupon clipping and discount stores).

Here are some basic tips about food shopping you can follow to try to save money at the grocery store. One of the keys to buying food economically is to remember: convenience costs:

* The more a manufacturer spends to produce and package a food product, the more it will cost you to buy it. Buy basic foods, ones you can prepare or wrap for freezing at home, and you'll save money. Store-brand or generic foods generally are of comparable quality to the national brand-name items and they cost less. When you buy a sprightly packaged, national brand-name item, you're paying in part for the advertising that made its name a "household word," as well as for the fancy, convenient package. (The U.S. Department of Agriculture says packaging costs make up a third of your food bill).

* Keep an eye on the unit price of a product. The smaller packages, with a lower price, may actually cost more per ounce or pound than the larger more expensively tagged package of the same product. Also remember, however, that you don't want to buy more of a perishable product than you can use before it spoils. A large box is no bargain if you end up throwing out most of its contents.

* When you buy frozen foods, remember that the plain kind naturally are less expensive than the fancy styles with butter or cream sauces and other special ingredients. Not only are the plain frozen vegetables cheaper per pound, but when you buy a large bag of them, you only need to take out the amount you plan to use and can keep the rest in the freezer.

All of us, youngsters especially, are drawn to the brightest, most attractive packages. Remember that "it's what's inside that counts." In addition, always shop after you've eaten. You're tempting fate - and threatening your budget - if you go into a grocery store while you're hungry. Everything looks good and you'll buy much more than you need.

* Before you go shopping, make out a budget and know about how much you can spend. Stick to the budget. Also write up a shopping list and try to avoid impulse buying that can push you over your budget.

* Check newspapers ads to see what the weekly specials are, use coupons if they are for items you regularly buy and stock up on goods you ordinarily use if they are on sale.

No matter where you shop or what you buy, if you follow these rules you're bound to save money.

Specialist Says Energy Prices Will Continue To Rise During 1980s

Energy prices during the decade of the 1980s will continue to rise faster than the rate of inflation, both in Maryland and the U.S. and their impact will continue to be burdensome to low-income families, according to a specialist at the University of Maryland.

In fact, energy costs may be the most serious problem facing persons living at or below the poverty level, says Dr. Philip G. Favero, Extension specialist in community resource development.

Dr. Favero spoke on "Energy Outlook for the 80s" during a recent training workshop on the College Park campus for Extension agents from throughout the state.

He based his forecast on several assumptions of policymakers at the U.S. Department of Energy:

—No major cutoff of imported oil;

—No federal leasing policy constraints on the supply of energy;

—No delays in conversion to nuclear power — especially coal — due to new government regulations;

—U.S. economy and population will continue to grow at rates similar to the late 1970s;

—Price deregulation of natural gas will go ahead as currently scheduled by law.

Using these assumptions, retail gasoline prices are expected to average $1.58 per gallon by 1990, not counting any price rise due to inflation. This would be more than double the average price in 1975.

Prices for natural gas, fuel oil and bottled gas in 1990 are also expected to be more than double the average levels of 1975. Prices for electricity during the same 15-year period are expected to increase by about one-third.

By the end of the 1980s, the average U.S. household will be spending about 11 percent of its disposable income for energy costs, Dr. Favero noted. However, families and individuals living at or below the poverty level will be spending nearly one-third of their incomes for heating, transportation and other energy costs.

For the 1981 fiscal year, Congress appropriated $1.85 billion for low-income energy assistance and another $182 million for the low-income weatherization program. But federal assistance in these areas for the 1982 fiscal year, which began on Oct. 1, is still very much uncertain.

Dr. Favero admitted that comparatively stable gasoline prices during recent months may have lulled Maryland residents — and Americans in general — into a false sense of security about the energy situation.

He emphasized that our national vulnerability to Mid-East oil cutoffs will extend into the next decade, even though U.S. imports are being reduced. About 17 percent of our gross energy consumption is now imported, Dr. Favero noted. By 1990, this figure may be down to 10 or 15 percent.

Since Maryland is one of 38 states that are net importers of energy, it is dependent on the national and international energy market. This creates an environment that will be influenced to a large extent by policies of President Reagan's administration in Washington, D.C. These policies include:

—Greater reliance on the private sector of our economy;

—An increase in the nation's strategic oil reserves;

—Endorsement of nuclear power development.

A buildup of strategic oil reserves will help to cushion the shock of a possible cutoff in Mid-East oil imports, Dr. Favero pointed out.

He cites a U.S. Department of Energy forecast which shows energy production from nuclear power nearly tripling during the decade of the 1980s. However, it would still be less than 10 percent of the total U.S. energy output.

Energy production from coal, meanwhile, is expected to nearly double. By 1990 it would comprise about one-third of the domestic energy production.

Energy from geothermal, hydorelectric and solar sources is expected to increase by about one-sixth. But energy output from petroleum and natural gas liquids is expected to decrease slightly; natural gas production will be down nearly 10 percent, he concluded.

BEEF AWARDED — The 4-H County Council recently held a drawing to award the two halves of beef purchased by the First National Bank of Oakland at the Garrett County Fair and then donated to the council. The bank purchased the steer from Janet Knepp of Red House. The winners of the halves were Harvey Shomo, Johnstown, Pa., and Bob Dietle, Grantsville. The raffle generated a total revenue of $1,893, of which $1,204 will be used for countywide 4-H programs and $373 will be allocated to individual 4-H clubs. In the photo, left to right, are Dessie Bowman, who accepted on behalf of Harvey Shomo; Helen Bittinger, assistant vice president and personnel director at the First National Bank; Bob Dietle, and Robin Brant, who sold the most raffle tickets. Not pictured are Annette Bowman, Brent and Christy Fratz, who sold the winning tickets, and Earl Clark, senior vice president of the FNB, who drew the winning tickets.

Homemaker Career Counselor To Be In Grantsville

The Homemaker Career Opportunities Program, sponsored by Garrett Community College, will conduct a free career skills workshop entitled "Job Hunt Strategies" on Wednesday, November 18, at the Oakland Center of GCC to teach participants some skills to use in looking for and securing employment such as self-evaluation, record assembly, checking job sources, following up on job leads, sizing up the employer and getting ready for the interview. This information may prove helpful to individuals who are seeking employment in a difficult job market and may mean the difference between becoming employed or remaining unemployed, according to Barbara Frey, program director.

The public is invited to attend the workshop which will be held in Room 306 of GCC-Oakland Center from 10 a.m. until noon. Pre-registration is advised due to limited space. Persons may call Barbara Frey at 334-9184 for more information and to register for this workshop.

"Trapezoid" First Offering Of Local Concert Series

The musical group "Trapezoid" will perform at Garrett Community College on Sunday afternoon, November 22, at 2:30 p.m. The performance will be the first program of the Highlands Concert Series for the 1981-82 season.

"Trapezoid," based in the mountains of West Virginia, is a group that combines a unique vocal blend with such instruments as the hammered dulcimer, guitar, fiddle, mandola, mandolin, bass, cello, and bowed psaltery in a musical program the ranges from early ballads and folk songs to country bluegrass, swing, and Appalachian clog dancing.

The group has performed at many major folk festivals in the United States and Canada, at the Kennedy Center, the Smithsonian Instutution, the Merriwether Post Pavilion, and at numerous clubs and colleges. It has also appeared on a number of television and radio broadcasts, including the Emmy Award winning Julie Andrews CBS-TV special, "Invitation to the Dance."

"Trapezoid" has been described by the Washington Post as "blessed with expressive arrangements and a collective sense of wonder," and by the New York Times as "a delightful musical melange that covers much of this country's musical origins."

The "Trapezoid" concert is being sponsored by Garrett Community College and the Garrett County Arts Council. Tickets for the performance are available at Englander's Pharmacy, the GCC Oakland Center, and at the College Business Office. Tickets will also be sold at the door, on a first-come basis. Special group rate tickets are available in advance. Persons interested should call Joan Crawford at 387-6666.

County Students Will Participate In Read-Along

Elementary students in Garrett County schools will join together with other elementary youngsters throughout Maryland in a Read-Along on Friday, November 20. The Read-Along will be led by Governor Harry Hughes, beginning at 9:30 a.m. and extending to 9:45 a.m.

The Governor, as well as students, will use this fifteen-minute block of time to participate in a sustained silent reading activity to help demonstrate the support across the state of Maryland for encouraging students to read for pleasure.

In addition to encouraging reading, local school officials will be encouraging parents, as well as members of the general public, to visit local schools during the week of November 16 to 20 to participate in American Education Week. That week is intended to provide an opportunity for interested patrons to take part in the day-to-day learning activities of local youngsters.

The week will also provide time for parents to follow up on parent conferences which are being planned across the county for Friday, November 13. Because of parent conferences, all schools will be closed in Garrett County on Friday, November 13.

GOH Supports Center's Client Salary Fund

The Garrett Organization for the Handicapped (GOH) at its Thursday meeting pledged supplementary funds, up to $500, for the newly-formed client salary fund at the Appalachian Center in Oakland.

The fund is being set up to pay clients to do work around the center, not to supplement regular salaries with the businesses operated through the center. No money was previously budgeted for this salary fund, and no money is available to pay certain clients, therefore the center has sought contributions.

In other business, it was announced that Garrett County will participate in the first Maryland State Winter Special Olympics, to be held at the Wisp Ski Area, McHenry, January 10 through 13. A special committee has been formed to work locally with the Special Olympics, including members of the Deep Creek Lions club and the American Legion.

Thursday's meeting was conducted by Dorothy Leuba, president. The group reviewed its recent fundraising activities, the annual Road Rally and Autumn Glory tootsie roll and balloon sales, at its Thursday meeting. A total of 49 cars participated in the rally, and the tootsie roll sales was in cooperation with the Knights of Columbus. The balloons, which were sold for the first time this year, displayed the 1981 International Year of Disabled Persons (IYDP) logo.

The organization set the date for its annual Christmas Party for handicapped adults. The party will be held Sunday, December 20, at the Child Development Center in Oakland.

The group will meet again on Thursday, December 3, at 7 p.m. at the Appalachian Center.

"A BUSHEL OF APPLE IDEAS" was the title of the workshop which was presented on October 30 and November 4, by the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program aides of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. Opal Fazenbaker, EFNEP aide, is shown here demonstrating one of the apple recipes presented. Dessie Bowman and Reah Phillips, EFNEP aides, assisted in presenting the workshop. In the EFNEP, aides visit families which meet program guidelines, and teach nutrition. For further information on this program persons may call 334-2145.

Zelman To Speak At Meeting Of Diabetes Group

The next meeting of the Garrett County Diabetes Association will be held Monday, November 16, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Paul's United Methodist Church in Oakland.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Jared Zelman, who will speak about skin problems of diabetics. Anyone attending the meeting will receive a free medical bracelet or necklace. Free blood sugar testing will also be offered at the meeting.

Any interested persons are welcome to attend and learn more about diabetes.

Nearly 150 Attend Annual Dairymen's Meeting October 29

The Garrett County Holstein Association and the Garrett County Dairy Herd Improvement Association held their annual meeting October 29 at the Bittinger Community Building. Nearly 150 dairymen, their families and guests took part in the activities of the evening. Dan Tice of Grantsville was master of ceremonies for the event.

The D.H.I. recognized the following people: Paul Yoder, Carl Bender, Russell Bowser, Harry Hummel, Leslie Guard, Maust Farms, Fred Teter, Joseph Kavanagh, David W. Yoder and John E. Yoder. They were each presented a certificate of merit for showing 10 or more pounds increase in fat production (Herd butterfat average must exceed or equal Maryland breed average).

The top herds in the county for milk production are Philip Beachy's (41 Holsteins) which averaged 18,810 lbs. of milk and 664 lbs. fat and Carl Bender's (63 cows) which averaged 17,903 lbs. milk and 707 lbs. fat. Oren Bender had the highest producing Holstein cow based on a 305-day record as a three-year-old with 29,330 lbs. milk.

Garrett County average for the year 15,139 lbs. milk and 562 lbs. fat, which is above the state and national averages.

The D.H.I. Association elected two new directors: Darwin Bender, Accident, and Dorsey Guard, Friendsville. Roman Yoder, Grantsville, is the supervisor for the association.

The Holstein Club recognized the youth of the county by presenting gifts to those who turned in their activity report. Joyce Bishoff, Alice Bender and Lorraine Mason presented the awards. Listed are the first and second place winners:

Junior division — Karen Beitzel, Brian Bender; Intermediate division — Andy Mason, Sheila Bender; Senior division — Robert Collier, Sherry Beitzel and Nancy Collier.

Lifetime Production Certificates of 100,000 lbs. and 50,000 lbs. milk production with the nominating being done by the owner before October were given out by Bentz Rhoads, H.F.E.A. consultant, and Ms. Jane King, States Holstein treasurer. Those receiving certificates were: Jonas M. Yoder, Carl Bender, Edgar Yoder, Oren Bender, Philip Beachy, Claude Wagner, Ernest Ganoe, Kenneth Yoder and Clayton Winters.

Carl Bender reported on the Holstein Sale held in September. He commented on the good quality of cattle of past sales, and mentioned the fact that two have since scored excellent. The sale averaged $2,188.00 on 41 head.

Oren Bender, State Director, reported on the activities of the State Holstein Association. Bender was one of the judges that selected the top Junior and All-Maryland Holsteins this year.

Charles and Lorraine Mason gave a club activity report for the year. Mrs. Mason accepted the position as reporter for the club. She has been reporting the news articles for the past two years.

The newly elected directors of the Garrett County Holstein Association are: Joe Kavanagh, Oakland; Wayne Schrock, Grantsville; and Robert Bender, McHenry. Charles Mason was elected president and Dan Tice, vice president. Wayne Coller has been retained by the association as treasurer and Nancy Coller is secretary.

Guests included Karl Berger, Delmarva Farmer newspaper; Mr. and Mrs. John Morris, State Holstein secretary; Miss Jane King, State treasurer; Gene Long, director of D.H.I.C.; Bentz Rhoads, H.F.A.A. consultant; Mr. and Mrs. David Stemple, Milk Market, Inc.; Beeson Snyder, former retired F.H.A. Chief for Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

At the conclusion of the meeting a drawing was held for a quilt with a picture of a Holstein cow on it. Dale Rodeheaver of the Garrett National Bank was there to present the quilt which the bank had donated to the club. The proceeds will go into the Jesse Swartzentruber fund. Oran Bender and Robert Custer, promoters of the project, assisted with the drawing. Mrs. Ralph Burnett, Swallow Falls, was the winner.

Farming in Maryland

Maryland farmers received $902,758,000 from their 1980 farm marketings, up from the $898,982,000 received in 1979.

The 1980 cash receipts included $614,612,000 from livestock marketings, $283,271,000 from crop marketings and various net amounts from Commodity Credit Corporation loans, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's income and balance sheet statistics for 1980.

William B. Crum, Chairperson of the Maryland State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said that federal payments to Maryland farmers last year amounted to $3,514,000, compared with $2,127,000 in 1979.

The USDA report showed that for the U.S. the open market sales component was higher in 1979 than total cash receipts as CCC loans were negative. Open market sales in 1980 were lower than total cash receipts as CCC loans were positive. While most crop receipts increased, cattle receipts declined, hogs remained about the same, poultry was up slightly, and dairy products rose by 13 percent.

Net farm income declined from $32.7 billion in 1979 to $19.9 billion in 1980, according to the national report. Returns to operators also declined about 50 percent and cash income from farming dropped from $38.4 billion to $32.6 billion.

Total farm assets, including farm households, passed $1 trillion for the first time as the value of farm real estate increased from $756 billion on January 1, 1980 to $829 billion on January 1, 1981. The farm debt went from $158 billion to $175 billion, according to the report.

Farmers Told To Expect Relief From Tax Act

Most farmers can expect substantial tax relief as a result of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981, says Dr. George A. Stevens, an Extension specialist in estate planning and professor of agricultural and resource economics at the University of Maryland.

"However, most of these changes do not take effect until the 1982 tax year. What you can do to reduce your tax liability in 1981 is very limited," Dr. Stevens declared in a presentation November 4 during the annual Agricultural Leaders Forum on the College Park campus.

One major tax law change affecting the farm business, Dr. Stevens pointed out, is a requirement for using the new Accelerated Cost Recovery System for depreciable property placed in service after 1980.

Major changes have occurred to ease the burden of federal estate and gift taxes, Dr. Stevens noted. These include:

—Increasing the unified credit against estate and gift taxes from the present $47,000 to $192,000 by 1987. This will allow a taxable estate or gift of $600,000 to pass tax-free, starting in 1987.

—Reducing the maximum transfer rate on estates and gifts from 70 percent to 50 percent by 1985.

—Allowing an unlimited marital tax deduction after 1981 for estate tranfers and gifts.

—Increasing the maximum deduction for special use valuation on estates from $500,000 to $750,000 by 1983. Some of these changes are retroactive to 1976.

—Increasing from $3,000 to $10,000 the amount of annual tax-free gift which a donor can make each year, starting in 1982.

Although many of the above changes are substantial, Dr. Stevens cautions, these changes have not removed the need for having a sound estate plan. Families with considerable assets — especially land holdings, which seem to appreciate in value every year — might still be faced with staggering transfer taxes if there is no informed long-range planning.

Polled Hereford Association Holds Livestock Sale

The first sale of the Mason-Dixon Polled Hereford Association was held on Saturday, October 24, at the Friends Stockyard in Accident. Frank Darcey, Spring Bottom Farm, Fairfield, Pa. purchased the top selling female, SSS Miss Jogger 9106, with a heifer calf by Hurrah for $2,100. The largest volume buyer was Suzzane Schmidt of S and J Ranch of Monkton, who purchased seven females. The "Union and Friendship Farm" of James and Tom Watson, Westernport, purchased three lots, as did the "Fly-back" farm of Everett and Tom DeBerry of Mt. Lake Park.

Thirty-six female lots sold for an average of $596.78, five bull lots an average of $664.00 and eight steer lots for an average of $328.12.

According to the president Dr. William H. Buser, the Board of Directors is holding its next regular meeting on Thursday, November 12, at 7:30 p.m. at the Garrett Community College. On the agaenda will be an evaluation discussion of the sale, with finalization of the Mason-Dixon Association activities for the next year. All board members are urged to attend and sale consignors, members of the association and individuals interested in affiliating with the group are encouraged to attend this meeting, according to Buser.

Corn Harvest Nearly Over

Fields dried enough last week to permit farmers to wrap-up most of their corn harvest, according to the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service. About five days were suitable for field work during the week ending November 9, enough days for Maryland's farmers to pass the 95 percent corn harvested mark. The northern areas of the state are about the only areas left with standing corn. Corn harvest was finished at about the same time last year.

Soybean harvest has also progressed well, the Service reports. Maryland's 55 percent harvested increased 10 points from last week, but remained behind the 1980 average of 70 percent.

Small grain seeding seem to be lagging with the favorable weather while farmers pay more attention to harvesting. Wheat is essentially the only crop remaining to be finished. In Maryland it now stands at 90 percent completed.

The wide spread rains continue to improve soil moisture supplies and generate excellent growth of the fall planted grains. Topsoil moisture is now adequate all across Maryland except for one or two isolated spots. Subsoil moisture continued to improve, but remained short across southern Maryland and the southern half of the eastern shore. All other areas were adequate.

Researcher Says Agriculture Facing Serious Challenges

Adopting existing technology, accepting new technology and coping with rising energy costs are the three major challenges facing America's farm industry for the 1980's according to the director of research at the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station (MAES), University of Maryland.

In a speech delivered Nov. 4 at the 16th annual Maryland Agricultural Leaders Forum in College Park, Dr. W. Lamar Harris said agricultural industry leaders who have not taken advantage of changing technologies and those who fail to grasp new ones on the horizon may find over time their competitive positions adversely affected.

"Although, in general, society benefits from the introduction of new technology, the transition that takes place following the introduction of new technology can be exceedingly painful, and unquestionably this is one of the challenges agriculture will face during the 1980's," Harris said.

Those who have adopted the technological changes of the last 25 years and those who adopt technology on the horizon, such as microcomputers, will displace their less competitive counterparts, he said.

In addition, Harris said, rising energy costs will continue to drive a wedge between depressed farm prices and increasing consumer prices.

Marketing, that area including "everything that happens between the farm gate and the final consumer," is where the greatest energy challenges will take place in the coming years, according to Harris.

"Rising energy prices in the marketing sector will both depress farm prices and raise consumer prices," he said.

In addressing state agricultural leaders, Harris also cited such challenges to the farm industry as:

*The need for a "far more educated, more sophisticated labor force in our farming operations" to handle increasingly complex technology on the farm;

*The need to reassess crop production schemes now that agricultural research is "beginning to see some progress in the area of genetic engineering" of food crops;

*The need to evaluate new technology that benefits the farmer and the consumer through increased efficiency in marketing.

Dennett Road Parent Advisory Council Meets

The Dennett Road School's Parent Advisory Council met Thursday, November 5, in the Title I Resource Room with Ann Beeman, P.A.C. co-ch., presiding.

A presentation was made by Barbara Flinn, Resource Teacher, on how results of the California Achievement Test are used as a basis for instruction in a new program being used at Dennett Road School this year. The test scores are used to show in which skill areas a child shows mastery, partial mastery, and non-mastery; how children who need the same skills are grouped together for instruction; how the classroom teacher, Joanne Rebele, with suggestions by Mrs. Flinn, selects suitable games and manipulatives; how instruction is then provided by the classroom aide using these specially prepared games and materials available from the Title I Room; and how students after such instruction are then rechecked, or tested, to determine mastery before going on to a new needed area.

Ginny Thayer, fourth grade class aide, showed how she uses the games provided in the classroom to reinforce the needed skills. She also showed how these materials are correlated to the workbook and text used by the child in the class.

Robert Goad, parent member of the council, asked parents to write legislators, urging them to seek to maintain the present level of funding for E.S.E.A. Title I, to keep the Parent Advisory Council, to keep Title I as a separate program and not be included in a block grant. Goad explained the importance of writing these letters, how effective they can be, the urgency for writing, and how the cut back in funding will hurt the children. Time and materials were provided for parents to write letters.

Refreshments were provided by Ann Beeman, Debra Martin, Shirley Tepper and Barbara Flinn.

Parents have selected "Creating a Desire to Read" as the program for their next PAC Meeting to be held January 7, 1982, at 9:30 a.m., in the Title I Room. All parents are welcome.

College Students Teach Youngsters Art Of Camping

Fifth graders from Accident Elementary School spent last weekend at Camp Hickory as part of a teaching-learning experience conducted by an Outdoor Education class of Garrett Community College.

The weekend was planned by college students in Ann Wellham's Introduction to Outdoor Education class as a means of applying their instructional skills from a variety of disciplines in a camping environment. All aspects of outdoor education, from camping skills and orienteering to creative dramatics and crafts, were covered during the weekend. Each college student had a particular type of activity to instruct and present to the group.

Patty Harsh and Lisa Stark taught crafts, while Jane Roberts taught camping skills, tent-pitching, and fire-building. Paula Briggs presented orienteering and directed the campfire story-telling. Safety in the out-of-doors was taught by Sue Mould. Laurie Plummer taught nature identification and led a scavenger hunt, and Clarence Allen organized and directed the nature band.

According to Ms. Wellham, the program was planned to include as many different disciplines as possible. Each period of instruction lasted approximately one-half hour.

On Sunday morning before leaving for home, all the campers and "teachers" met to summarize the learning activities of the weekend.

To A POET AND A PATRIOT, LINDSEY AND LINCOLN

Vachel Lindsey wrote of Honest Abe,
Of the heartaches war had caused this man of honest heart.

He wrote of bitterness, of the war lords grievous mistakes—
The hideous nightmare of tearing souls apart.

Could he have lived to write the epitaph of war since—Lincoln's day.

It's peace so superficial, I wonder what He'd say
Will he ever sleep upon his hill again, or will white crosses ever grow o'er all the kingdoms of sea and land.

Won't treachery be maimed, or peace restored, that we may walk nation with nation, hand in hand.
That the soul of a poet, the soul of a Patriot, may rest in peace upon his Hill
Let the murmer of war forever be still.

Cher to Broadway; Rolling Stones clan

By Cindy Adams

NEW YORK — Cher has been sitting in on some acting classes, possibly for her new Broadway comedy that will be directed by Robert Altman... Between managers, technicians, staffers, aides, gofers, etc., the Rolling Stones drag 103 people along on their road tours. Next to them, Muhammad Ali's company looks like a lone-wolf operation... Diana Ross, who maintains a Fifth Avenue hotel apartment, also has two houses in Connecticut. She just sold one to buy another, which has 20 rooms... Virginia Graham lost 25 pounds. She also has a new hairdo and new makeup. She looks smashing... David Niven's life, which reads like a novel, gave him the idea to write one. His first novel, "Go Slowly, Come Back Quickly," is a classy love story. Published by Doubleday, it'll be out almost immediately.

Says Shelley Winters: "Diet freaks act like there's something obscene about food. Well, I'm not ashamed to admit I love it. How could anyone turn down chocolate ice cream?"

Charlton Heston

David Niven

Charlton Heston stars and directs a 6-million-dollar survival story written by his son, Fraser. It's called "Mother Lode" and it is being filmed in Canada... Joe Levine, pushing his new movie, "Tattoo," has a wash'n'wear rose decal on his left forearm... England's Poseidon Films is looking to film the biography of Russia's ballerina Anna Pavlova, starring some unknown twinkletoes. Filming will be in Paris, New York and Moscow and the budget is $28 million, which is one large load of rubles.

TV PEOPLE

Carl Reiner shifts from comedy to drama

Carl Reiner is one of television's top comedy entertainers, with 11 Emmy awards in comedy acting, writing and producing to back up his reputation.

So Reiner knows that viewers are sometimes surprised when they hear that he is to act a completely serious role — as he does in "Skokie," to air Tuesday, Nov. 17 on CBS.

"I understand that reaction," Reiner says, "especially after my long association with comedy. But what most people don't know is that as a young man I really wanted to be a serious actor. I did two years of summer theater, just acting in plays, and then I toured in Shakespeare. Comedy didn't come to me until World War II.

"I was in the Army, but you couldn't act in the Army. You couldn't get a bunch of actors together and put on a play. So, out of a need to perform, I developed a stand-up comedy routine.

"After the Army, I was cast in Broadway revues. Sketch comedy became my field. That led to my going with Sid Caesar in 'Your Show of Shows' and doing sketches on television for nine years."

Reiner's next credits included "The Dick Van Dyke Show," "The New Dick Van Dyke Show," and the "2,000-Year-Old Man" record albums with Mel Brooks. He also directed such comedy films as "Oh, God," with George Burns, and "The Jerk," with Steve Martin.

"Now," Reiner says, "when I act a serious role, as I do occasionally, some people are surprised. But I personally have no problems at all. I just remember going back to my beginnings, to the days of summer stock and Shakespeare."

Reiner's co-star in the film is Danny Kaye (who is making his television drama debut in the special). Between scenes, the two veteran actors filled the time by swapping hilarious stories about growing up in New York City. Kaye was born in Brooklyn; Reiner, in the Bronx.

Says Reiner: "One of the dividends of doing this film is finally getting to work with Danny Kaye. He is the one that we all looked up to when we were young. I'm probably only nine or 10 years younger than Danny, but he was the old man of comedy. I had his records, and I attempted to learn those remarkable, unique patter songs he sang. I never could copy them, because I don't have a good enough ear musically. But Danny Kaye has maybe the best musical ear ever gifted to man."

"Skokie" tells the story of the citizens of Skokie, Ill., who became embroiled in a bitter controversy when neo-Nazis announced their intention to demonstrate in the Chicago suburb four years ago.

"Let me tell you about this script. This is a script that in two seconds I knew I had to be in it. The minute I read it, I knew that this was a very important piece of work. It's necessary to have it produced and put on television.

"People need to be aware of this subject matter. We're talking here about the resurgence of racism in the world, and in our country. This is not an issue to be ignored, and 'Skokie' deals with it powerfully and dramatically. Oh yeah. I was proud to be offered the job."

TV TATTLE

Seberg's life

A look at the life of Jean Seberg is presented by correspondent Mike Wallace in the first of a new CBS special series of biographical inquiries, "The Mike Wallace Profiles," premiering Tuesday, Nov. 17 on CBS.

"The story of Jean Seberg is a Cinderella story gone sour," reports Wallace as he unravels the life of the all-American girl who became an international personality at age 18, the subject of an FBI probe at 30 and a suicide at the age of 40.

The Jean Seberg profile includes an exclusive interview with Seberg's parents, who have never talked publicly about their daughter until now; her original screen test for "Saint Joan"; her 1958 interview with Mike Wallace; appearances on "The Ed Sullivan Show" and "Person to Person"; and interviews with Otto Preminger, former Black Panther chief Bobby Seale and her first husband Francois Moreuil.

Football movie

Nick Nolte and Mac Davis star as close friends on a professional football team in "North Dallas Forty" a behind-the-scenes look at the operations of a major league sports franchise, to air Nov. 15 on NBC.

Nolte stars as Phillip Elliott, in this 1979 Paramount Pictures release, a veteran wide receiver for the North Dallas Bulls who is no longer a regular starter. He has begun to take a reflective attitude about his career, as he considers the punishment his body takes week after week, season after season.

Dracula in the city

Another feature film comes to the TV screen this week: "Love at First Bite," a 1978 comedy starring George Hamilton, Susan Saint James and Richard Benjamin, will be rebroadcast Saturday, Nov. 21 on CBS.

In the film, Dracula falls in love with a New York model and, at the same time, becomes an instant celebrity in the city's nightlife circuit as he woos the high-fashion Cindy in elegant candlelit restaurants and flashy, frenetic discos.

Dr. Carl Sagan

Space travel

How can we travel through the universe? The possibilities of interstellar space flight and the question of time travel are explored in "Travels in Space and Time," the eighth episode of "Cosmos," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, Nov. 17 on PBS. (Local times may vary; check listings.)

"Cosmos" host Dr. Carl Sagan, the Cornell University professor and Pulitzer Prize-winning author, shows that although our lives span only a single cosmic instant, they offer the chance to connect with the entire universe — past, present and future.

Dr. Sagan, in this episode of "Cosmos," explains that each culture has imposed its order on the heavens by grouping the stars into constellations, a kind of "cosmic Rorschach test." Using a computer-animation model of the Big Dipper, Dr. Sagan takes the audience on a tour that circles around and behind the seven stars in the dipper, showing how the view of the constellation would change if we could embark on such an interstellar journey.

THURSDAY

Host Dick Clark (r.) is joined by Rock Hudson on the second bloopers special, "More TV Censored Bloopers," to air Thursday, Nov. 13 on NBC.

(Stations reserve the right to make last-minute changes.)

LOVES BABS — Where can I send a letter to Barbra Streisand? I am a big fan and have every one of her albums. — Mary Jo Collins, Petersburg, Ky.

Write her in care of First Artist Productions, Burbank, CA 91505.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? — I would like to know what happened to the star of "Sugarfoot," Gil Favor of "Rawhide" and the guys that played Reese, Joe, Erik and Chad on "Laredo." — Curious in Connecticut

Will Hutchins, who played Sugarfoot, has not been too active lately and neither has Neville Brand, who was Reese in "Laredo." Joe was played by William Smith, who still acts. He was Falconetti in the original "Rich Man, Poor Man." Robert Wolders, who played Erik, is the widower of actress Merle Oberon who died not too long ago. Peter Brown, who played Chad, was a regular on "Days of Our Lives" for several years. You didn't ask about Capt. Parmalee, but he was played by Phil Carey who now plays Asa Buchanan on the popular soap "One Life to Live." As for Eric Fleming, who played Gil Favor in "Rawhide," he was drowned while filming a movie not too long after the series ceased production.

Sandra Dee

FIDDLE DEE DEE — Please settle a dispute my friends and I have had for several years. Was Sandra Dee in the film "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World"? — Ann Cotte, Salt Lake City, Utah Dispute settled: She was not in the film.

Will there be a new superstar duo on 'GH'?

By Nancy M. Reichardt

NEW YORK — Robin Eisenman (Stacey Rawlings on "General Hospital") is rapidly gaining fans in the soap opera world, but the lovely lady doesn't always plan to be an actress.

"I'm one of the few members of my family who isn't a doctor," she says. "I intend to have a career in show business, and then when I'm reaching 40, I'm going to quit acting and become a veterinarian. I want to have both careers, and there's no reason why I can't. I just can't do both at the same time and do them well, and that's very important to me, doing anything well."

Meanwhile, Robin's new love interest on "GH" is the very popular Rick Springfield (Dr. Noah Drake). It's just possible that this duo could someday replace Luke and Laura in the popularity polls.

The founding members of the Llanview Yacht Club, Robert Woods, Steve Fletcher and Michael Storm (Bo Buchanan, Brad Vernon and Larry Wolek, all of "One Life to Live"), have voted to put their crafts into drydock for the winter. But the trio has come up with a winter activity to keep them busy.

They've formed the Llanview Ski Patrol, promising to save any and all damsels in distress on any slope in the Northeastern United States. Hunter Mountain, N.Y., watch out!

Jessica Zutterman is the beautiful little girl who is currently portraying Alan Michael Spaulding on "Guiding Light." Yes, that's right, little Alan is really a little girl.

READERS WRITE IN:

I would like to know if Colleen Zenk and Anthony Herrera (Barbara and James Stenbeck on "As the World Turns") are married in real life as well as on the soap? W.H.S., Spokane, Wash.

No, Colleen and Anthony aren't married in real life. Colleen has kept steady company with actor-singer Michael Crouch for some time, and Anthony has been seen squiring several lovely ladies about town.

Can you tell me the name of the actor who plays Capt. Ramsey on "General Hospital?" My father knew him as a little boy and I would like to write to him. D., Lewiston, Maine

Bob Hastings is the name of the actor who portrays Joe Kelly's boss. You can write to him in care of "GH" at ABC-TV, Prospect at Talmadge, Hollywood, CA 90027.

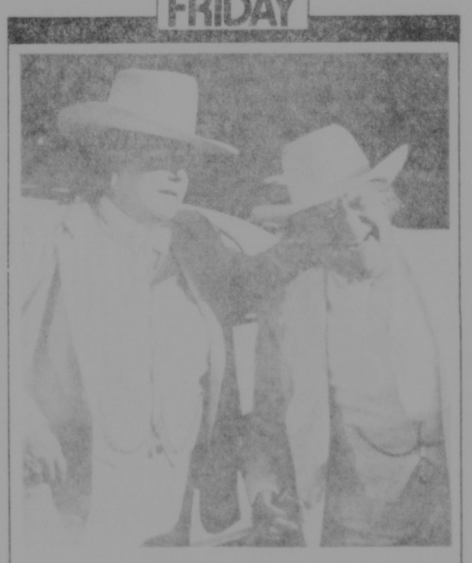
MEAN JOE GREENE, defensive tackle of the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Henry Thomas, 9, star in the one-hour drama "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," based on the award-winning cola commercial in which Greene appeared with another young boy, Tommy Okun. The drama will air Sunday, Nov. 15 on NBC.

FRIDAY



Peggy Rea plays Lulu and Sorrell Booke plays Boss Hogg on "The Dukes of Hazzard," to air Friday, Nov. 13 on CBS.

The trials and joys of television chefs

By Ruth Thompson

Until Julia Child made cooking-on-camera wildly popular with the first of her PBS series, "The French Chef," the "food shows" were an all but invisible genre.

Was that because producers were afraid that women would resent cooking shows, as limiting their options to the role of "just a homemaker?"

If so, the great Julia proved them wrong. So do enrollments at gourmet cooking classes in metropolitan areas, which are equally popular with men, says chef-restaurateur Narsai David.

Many television chefs don't have the budgets of a Julia Child. Regis Philbin, who premieres in the mid-morning series "Day to Day" on NBC Nov. 30, was asked what he might now include in this new show that he couldn't have done with the small budget of his old show — a strictly local edition in Los Angeles. Said Philbin, "I'd like to invite chefs from favorite restaurants around the country, New Orleans for one, to come on the show and cook a specialty of the region."

When Bing Crosby's wife, Kathy, was hosting an interview show in San Francisco, a similar thought occurred to her and she didn't have to strain the program's budget, either. Chef Narsai David, who only had to commute 20 minutes from his restaurant, Narsai's, in nearby Berkeley, could appear on her show.

Kathy's program turned into the showcase that got Narsai hired as the resident chef for PBS' "Over Easy," which is produced by KQED in San Francisco.

On "Over Easy," he specializes in quick, nutritious meals, often stir-fry techniques, styled to whet the interest of older Americans and motivate them toward the range. He scales the quantities for one or two portions.

Narsai says, with appreciation and affection, that what he passes along on "Over Easy" is the kind of food that made other neighborhood kids want to be invited to his house in his childhood, "because my mother didn't just boil vegetables. She made the kids taste food with onions and garlic and herbs from the garden."

The one problem with "Over Easy," says Narsai, is to get the demonstration tightly packed into the four minutes allotted as well as include some banter with the hosts (currently Mary Martin and Jim Hartz) or guests.

His first television food opuses went on for 20 minutes. But they were more complex recipes, usually specialties from his restaurant, which is basically French haute cuisine.

In her current PBS series, "More Company with Julia Child," the lady who triggered the food renaissance on television still has the luxury of a half-hour format.

But she, too, has learned to pare her techniques to a scant few minutes for the mini-segments she also does on ABC's "Good Morning America." Like Narsai, she doesn't limit herself to a monologue format, but may invite a guest to share the preparation and talk. A recent notable visitor was James Beard, the 78-year-old dean of America's top echelon of food writers and cooking teachers.

IN FOCUS

Football star in show based on TV commercial

When a TV commercial becomes the springboard for a television drama, that's unique.

The Coca-Cola commercial featuring Mean Joe Greene, defensive tackle of the Pittsburgh Steelers, and a young boy, Tommy Okun, is just such a commercial.

In it, Greene is seen limping off the field into the football tunnel and the admiring youngster offers him his Coke. Greene first refuses the drink, then accepts it and downs it in one swallow. He turns to leave, then suddenly changes his mind.

"Hey, kid," he says, throwing the boy his battered football jersey. "Catch."

"Gee, thanks, Mean Joe," says the starry-eyed youngster.

The commercial received numerous awards, including two Clios, the "Oscar" of the advertising industry (best 60-second TV commercial in soft drink category and best male performance, shared by Greene and Okun). It also was voted the most popular of the year by Video Storyboard Tests, an ad industry evaluator, amassing more votes than any other ad had received in three years (the poll involves 16,000 people). It also received the Brotherhood Award from the New York Council of Churches.

McCann-Erickson Advertising of New York was the firm responsible for the commercial.

Mean Joe Greene

Executive producer George Wallach thought the commercial could become a springboard for a TV drama. Titled "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," it will be presented as a Project Peacock special Sunday, Nov. 15 on NBC.

The story begins with a recreation of the Coke commercial scene, with Mean Joe Greene, after being injured during a game, limping off the field.

A sports commentator witnesses the exchange between the athlete and the little boy and maintains that it was symbolic, meaning that Greene is through with football. When the little boy hears this, he is determined to return the jersey to his football hero so that he can get his power back and go on playing.

Learning that the team is off to Dallas, Nick heads for the airport, manages to get on the plane and finds himself trapped aboard on take-off.

After realizing why the boy is there, Joe offers to look after him on arrival in Dallas. While there, Nick learns values from Joe that his parents have been trying to teach him all along. In turn, Joe learns something about the spirit of football that he has forgotten, helping him to come out of a period of doubt and uncertainty. Nick's enthusiasm is contagious, affecting not only Joe but the other members of the team.

Greene portrays himself in the drama and Henry Thomas, who was 9 years old at the time of filming, plays the boy portrayed by Tommy Okun in the commercial.

The one-hour Project Peacock show was written by I.C. Rapaport and directed by Lou Antonio. The program is a Jenner-Wallach production in association with Comworld Productions. The executive producer is George Wallach; the supervising producer, Philip Barry; the producer, Joe Boston.

Prairie dogs live in "towns" made up of burrows a few yards apart. Some members of the community act as sentries and give warning when danger is near.

Ag Professor Says Farm Bill Cuts Are Not Alarming

A proposed billion-dollar cut in federal aid during the next four years may have little or no ill-effect on the well-being of U.S. farmers, according to Dr. Bruce L. Gardner, professor of agricultural and resource economics at the University of Maryland.

Gardner indicates this situation is not a sudden development with the advent of "Reaganomics," but is actually the continuation of a trend that started in the 1960s. Dr. Gardner was one of six morning session speakers during the annual Agricultural Leaders Forum held November 4 on the College Park campus.

The University of Maryland economist reminded his ag forum audience that U.S. farmers producing commodities which have never relied on government farm-program protection seem to have done as well economically as producers of highly protected commodities.

Thus, the fact that federal support for U.S. agriculture may soon drop to its lowest level since before the Great Depression of the 1930s should not be viewed with undue alarm.

Why is this so?, the Maryland economist asked. There are two major reasons:

Major benefits of governmental intervention have been capitalized long ago into the value of assets such as quota rights, marketing allotments or higher prices for land on which price-supported commodities are produced; and federal farm programs tended to acquire a heavy layer of complex regulations and requirements which blunted and confused production incentives that would have existed in a free marketplace.

As an example, Gardner declared that acreage limitations and high support prices for peanuts encouraged intensive cultivation to achieve ever higher yields. This led to production intensity which would not have been economically rational under open-market conditions. Similarly, the federal government's disaster payment programs have encouraged expansion of grain production into areas where normally it would not be profitable to produce grain.

In addition, some of the apparent benefits of government farm programs have not been what they seem to be. As an example, Dr. Gardner cited the wheat deficiency benefits program of 1977 and 1978.

Under that program, the government paid out more than a billion dollars in part to reward farmers for keeping 20 percent of their wheat acreage idle. But the net gain to farmers was probably less than half of that amount due to deadweight loss.

Deadweight loss, he explained, included such things as lost revenues from the idle land and government costs of administering the program.

Hay And Straw Directory Now Being Compiled

The Winter 81-82 edition of the popular "Maryland Hay & Straw Directory" which has been produced by the Maryland Department of Agriculture's Division of Agricultural Development and Marketing for the past four years, is now being compiled.

Farmers who have hay and/or straw for sale and would like a free listing in the directory should communicate with MDA by sending in the following information: type and quantity of material for sale, complete address of farm and telephone number. Prices are not listed.

Information may be sent to: "Hay & Straw Directory," Maryland Department of Agriculture, Parole Plaza Office Building, Annapolis, Maryland, 21401.

Farm Prices Down For Third Month

Farm prices continued downward during October, for the third straight month, according to the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service. The all farm products index fell two points (one percent) below mid-September and 24 points (10 percent) below October 1980. Producers received higher prices for a few commodities, but decreases in prices for milk cows, corn, oats, hogs, beef cattle and eggs offset the increases.

The livestock and livestock products index dropped four points (two percent) below the previous month and 20 points (eight percent) below a year earlier. Dairy products rose six points (three percent) above last month while the meat animals and the chickens and eggs indexes declined three points (three percent) and 13 points (six percent) respectively. The all crops index, at 232 percent of its 1967 base, increased three points (one percent) above last month, but 32 points (12 percent) below last year. Prices were higher for all grains except corn and oats, compared with mid-September.

Maryland farmers paid less for feed in October than a month ago, only cottonseed meal and 32% protein mixed were unchanged. Compared with a year ago, prices paid for cottonseed meal were unchanged but averaged lower for all other feeds.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett County: The Respondents, Gladys Skipper, Janet Skipper and Ross Skipper, and any unknown heirs, devisees or personal representatives of Gladys Skipper, Janet Skipper and Ross Skipper, are hereby notified that Complainant, Iris Violet Skipper, has filed an action to quiet title to real estate situate in Election District No. 14 of Garrett County, said real estate having been purchased by Complainant and her late husband, James Leo Skipper, from the heirs of Romanus M. From our big selection of fine used automobiles, we have listed three exceptionally good ones.

1976 Chevrolet Monza 2-Door Hatchback. An outstanding example of a sporty car that's inexpensive to operate. Four cylinder engine, automatic transmission, air conditioning, and lower than average mileage. This one has the deluxe seats and a beautiful dark red exterior and is priced way below book price.

1978 Mercury Zephyr 4-Door Sedan. An excellent value in a basic automobile. This particular car has low mileage, automatic transmission, excellent body and mechanical parts, and is economical to buy and operate. And, we've priced it way below book value. If you want a good, plain car at a real bargain price, try this one.

CAC Receives HUD Funds For Upgrading Homes In Crellin Area

The Garrett County Community Action Committee, Inc., announced this week it has received approval for HUD funds totaling $260,000 for the upgrading of at least 20 sub-standard homes in the Crellin/Hutton area.

The program is aimed at owner-occupied homes belonging to the elderly and low-income families in this area, according to the CAC. Qualified homeowners will be provided with funds to upgrade their property to a safe and healthy living environment that is properly connected to all necessary utilities. The program involves no financial obligation on the part of the homeowner, the CAC said.

Examples of rehabilitation measures to be undertaken include: major roof repair, septic system installation, water supply installation, chimney (flue) repair, indoor bathroom installation, hazard elimination, correction of faulty electric/plumbing and weatherization measure to promote energy conservation.

All work will be done by approved licensed building contractors under the supervision of the homeowner and the Rehabilitation Coordinator.

The selection of homes for possible rehabilitation will begin with the surveying of the Crellin/Hutton area by CAC Outreach Workers who will attempt to locate and inform all area residents of the details involved in the Rehabilitation Program as well as other assistance programs that are available through this Agency. Applications to determine eligible families will be distributed and assistance in filling out the questionnaire will be offered.

A Project Advisory Committee consisting of interested local residents and representatives from local civic and government agencies will screen all applications that qualify for rehabilitation funds to insure all funds are directed to the elderly and low-income homeowners in the Crellin area.

Bob Rodeheaver, director of Housing Services, and Mel Silber, Housing Rehabilitation coordinator, will conduct public meetings at the Crellin Community Center on Wednesday, November 18, at 7:30 p.m., and Monday, November 23, at 12:30 p.m. Information and applications will also be available at the local CAC office located on Liberty Street in Oakland.

TOTALLY NEW. QUALITY BUILT. Chevrolet announces a new dimension in trucks. The S-10 is longer than the import pickups, but smaller than a full-size pickup. Not too big, not too small. With more head room than any import pickup offers. It's American-designed and American-built using modern technology. Solid quality you can see, hear and feel. You can choose either a standard 4-cylinder engine or an optional V6—a choice no import offers you. And higher mileage ratings than any of the best-selling import trucks. S-10: new size, high mileage. A Chevy you should test drive soon. There's never been a truck like it before.

Use estimated MPG for comparisons. Your mileage may differ depending on speed, distance, weather. Mileage will be less in heavy city traffic. Actual highway mileage lower.

Discharge Parameters May Interrupt Attempts Toward Sewage Treatment

by Kathy Bailey

As the town of Oakland reaches toward a solution to its sewage problem (raw sewage being discharged into waterways), steps may be halted due to anticipated stringent standards by the State Health Department on discharge parameters for sewage treatment plants emptying into the Little and big Youghiogheny rivers.

Earl Quance, Administrator of the State Health Department's Construction Grants and Permits Program, will set the discharge parameters (as part of sewerage system grants review) for the Little and big Youghiogheny by the end of this month after reviewing data collected by his staff. Quance and Ed. Perry, Western Counties Administrator of the Grants Project Management Program, were invited to Garrett County Friday by Edgar Harman of Environmental Health to meet with local officials and discuss rumors that advanced wastewater treatment may be required for Oakland, Mt. Lake Park, Deer Park and possibly other areas of Garrett County.

At the present time Oakland's Sewer System Evaluation Survey (SSES) is nearing completion and Morgan France of Franklin Associates (the town's engineer) has been authorized by the town to take steps toward application for funding for design and construction of a sewage treatment facility. France is also examining the possibility of the town using an existing treatment facility, such as Sterling Processing's lagoon treatment plant, in place of constructing a new facility.

Both alternatives, however, will have to be re-evaluated in the event of more stringent effluent parameters in the Oakland and Mt. Lake Park area. In addition, the Trout Run sewage treatment facility, which is expected to undergo rehabilitation, would have to be re-evaluated if tertiary (advanced) treatment is called for by the state. According to Wendell Beitzel, Sanitary District administrator, rehabilitation of Trout Run for advanced wastewater treatment would be tougher to obtain and much more costly.

According to France and Gilman H. Sylvester, owner of the now inoperative Sterling

TAR SHED BURNS — A shed containing two large tanks of tar at the Garrett County Roads Department garage caught fire last Friday morning when workmen were attempting to warm up a valve on one of the tanks. Oakland and Deer Park firefighters were summoned by Garrett Central Alarm at 8:15 a.m., and found the interior of the structure on fire upon their arrival. The blaze was brought under control in about ten minutes, however the wooden beams and the tin roof of the shed sustained considerable damage. Fire personnel remained on the scene for about 45 minutes.

Charlotte Griffith Named Director Of Appalachian Center, Workshop

Charlotte J. (Sabino) Griffith, 35, of Mt. Lake Park, has been named director of the Appalachian Center and Workshop in Oakland, filling the position left vacant through the resignation of David J. Koontz. The announcement of Ms. Griffith's hiring was made last week following a meeting of the center's Board of Directors and Parent Advisory Group.

Ms. Griffith has been serving as acting director of the center since Koontz's resignation in July. Her duties include managing the day program and workshop for handicapped adults, overseeing the three businesses operating from the center which employ some of the center's 42 clients, supervising employees and clients, administering budgets related to transportation, day program and vocational training, and developing community and financial support.

Ms. Griffith states that her immediate goals at the center will be in the areas of a more

Board Approves Bond Issuance

The Garrett County Board of Commissioners signed an administrative resolution Tuesday for the issuance and sale of industrial development revenue bonds for a Grantsville industry.

Flushing Shirt Manufacturing, formerly called New Flushing, Inc., requested the county issue and sell the industrial development bonds not to exceed $2.5 million.

Edward Olesky, president of the firm, told the commissioners yesterday that the First National Bank of Cincinnati had agreed to purchase the bonds.

Before signing the resolution, which is the first in a series of documents to be signed before actual issuance of the bonds, the commissioners discussed the relationship between the shirt company and the Grantsville volunteer fire department which owns the building leased by the company.

Jim Braskey of Derrick and Braskey in Grantsville, attorney for the volunteer fire department, and Olesky informed the commissioners the firm and the department have reached a sales agreement for the building. The firm, which in past weeks indicated it would continue to lease the building from the fire department, will purchase the building and lease a portion of the building back to the department for one dollar a year for 25 years.

The department has requested a tax exemption for the 10,860 square feet in the building used as headquarters by the department.

H. Gregg Skidmore of Carnegie, Gilchrist, Getty & Leasure, Cumberland, who has handled the bond proceedings for Flushing, reminded the Commissioners that by issuing the bonds, the county would not be liable for any costs incurred. Flushing will back up the loan with its own assets.

Nancy Nemith, Business Manager for C&P Telephone Company, recently presented two checks to Charles O. Morris, vice chairman of the board of governors of Garrett County Memorial Hospital. One check for $500 will be used toward the purchase of a new set of operating room instruments. The second check is for $1,250 to the Project G building fund. The telephone company has pledged an additional $1,250 to the building fund next year.

Good Delays Statement On B&L Layoffs

Some layoffs have occurred and others are expected at the Bausch and Lomb lens facility in Mt. Lake Park, according to Foster Good, plant manager. However, Good stated yesterday that he was not at liberty at this time to discuss the magnitude nor the details of the layoff. He stated that the issue will, however, be clarified within "a week or so."

Rumors that the entire plant is about to close down are "absolutely untrue," Good stated.

GCMH Officer Named Member Of MHA Committee

Benjamin Rosenthal, of Oakland, vice president for fiscal services at Garrett County Memorial Hospital, has been appointed to the Maryland Hospital Association's Health Care Finance Committee.

Rosenthal, 31, was named to the seat on the 13-member policy-making panel at last month's meeting of the Association's Executive Council in Baltimore. The Maryland Hospital Association is a non-profit, nongovernment organization whose membership is comprised of the state's 63 community acute care and special hospitals. The hospital chief executive officers and financial leaders on its health care finance committee monitor issues such as Medicare, Medicaid, third-party reimbursement, and state and federal regulatory agencies which affect the fiscal well-being of hospitals. It is one of nine permanent association committees.

Rosenthal has been the chief financial officer at Garrett County Memorial since 1977. Prior to that, he was accounting manager at Baltimore's Union Memorial Hospital. He earned his accounting degree at Benjamin Franklin University in 1972 and is currently studying for his master's degree in business administration at Frost-

Potomac Edison Files For 17% Rate Increase

Saying the only way to assure a reliable supply of electricity in the future is higher electric rates now, Potomac Edison filed Monday with the Maryland Public Service Commission for 17% increase in the price of electricity in western Maryland.

PE president E.B. Kaelin said in a news conference in Hagerstown "we can no longer persuade investors to put their money into Potomac Edison and receive returns lower than they can get by investing elsewhere with less risk. The 9.74 percent now allowed by the PSC is no longer realistic." Kaelin said PE will spend more than $190 million for construction in the next three years.

"Although our rate of growth has declined since the boom years of the 1960s, demand for electricity continues to increase and we must have the capacity to meet that demand," he said. "About half of our construction funds must come from additional money to be raised from investors."

Kaelin said the rate filing, which seeks an additional $35 million in annual revenue from Maryland is designed to meet inflation-caused increases in operating and capital costs, including the cost of attracting investor capital.

With the proposed rate hike, the total bill for a residential customer using 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month would increase $5.89. A residential customer using 2000 kwh a month would see a $20.95 increase in total bill.

Kaelin said that the PE rates charged to western Maryland residential customers are now the lowest in the state and will probably continue to be the lowest. "Both Baltimore Gas and Electric and PEPCO have filed for higher rates in Maryland. If all the requests were approved as filed, our rates would still be the lowest, he continued.

"Our goal is to continue to have the lowest rates in Maryland and to try to keep increases below the rate of inflation," he said.

Rates based on this filing are expected to go into effect in June of 1982.

Turkey To Grace Tables Of 228 County Employees

The Garrett County commissioners seemed to have caught a bit of the holiday spirit last week when they decided to give each of the 228 county employees a turkey for the Christmas season this year.

A turkey for each employee used to be the regular policy of the commissioners, but that ended last year as the commissioners attempted to whittle away unnecessary expenses. The turkeys would have to go, they decided.

This year, as the Christmas holidays quickly approached, the commissioners were asked to again give employees a turkey.

Ken Metheny, interim administrator of the county roads department, brought up the subject and told the commissioners that the missing gift was the major sore spot among employees at the roads department. "I have heard more complaints about not getting those turkeys last year, than anything else," he said.

Metheny proposed to sell scrap metal and other junk that has accumulated over the years at the county garages to raise money to pay for the turkeys. He estimated the sale would raise enough money to buy an eight dollar turkey for each employee.

The commissioners, apparently not wishing to be thought to be scrooges and wishing to boost morale, agreed to Metheny's proposal.

The prospect of a sale of 228 turkeys will probably thrill any

Board Considers Coal Conversion At County Schools

The Garrett County Board of Education, in an effort to reduce rising heating costs, is considering converting the heating systems of three county schools to coal.

At its meeting Thursday, the Board met with Senator Edward Mason, coal company representatives, a technical consultant and a representative of the Allegany County school system to discuss the feasibility of conversion to coal and to solicit help in preventing possible problems with governmental agencies.

The Board is considering the conversion now because it was recently awarded a grant for energy conservation measures at Northern High School, one of the three schools under consideration, which may include funds for converting to coal.

The money, originally allocated for replacement of the two 36-year-old oil burners at the school, may be approved for use in reconstructing the burners or replacing them with new coal boilers. James Lupis, assistant supervisor of administrative services, told the Board that the two oil burners were originally coal boilers but were converted to oil in 1972 as were the boilers at Southern High School.

Besides Northern, the Board is considering converting the heating systems at Southern High School and Southern Middle School.

Lupis informed the Board that another option was recently proposed by Columbia Gas of Maryland, Inc. to convert to natural gas. The company is considering financing the conversion because no federal or state monies exist for gas conversion. The company is interested in six county schools

Glendale Bridge To Open Today

The Glendale Bridge is scheduled to open to the public today after five weeks of structural repairs, Ken Metheny, interim county roads department administrator announced yesterday.

The bridge has been closed to traffic since the week of October 11 when Whiting-Turner Contracting Co., Baltimore began structural repair work. The firm was contracted by the county for $48,000 to replace supportive bearings and to repair concrete on the piers and abutments.

Metheny stated final inspection would be performed today by Duffey, Montgomery and Associates of Baltimore, the firm which drew up engineering plans for the repair work and which would have the final approval in opening the bridge.

The bridge will have a weight limit of 12 tons as a result of the repairs.

Metheny said the bridge should remain safe for traffic indefinitely with proper maintenance.

Several week ago, Metheny told the county commissioners that no bridge maintenance program existed in the county. He said yesterday he and his staff are now establishing a program to maintain all county bridges.

Garrett Promotion Council Seeks Dismissal Of Claims In Lawsuit

Attorneys for the Deep Creek Lake-Garrett County Promotion Council, its executive director and the Board of Garrett County Commissioners have made a motion to drop all claims in a $4.35 million court suit brought against their clients last month.

In separate motions, the attorneys argue that claims made against their clients by Deep Creek Lake property owners in the eight-count suit should be dismissed because the defendants, who are governmental agents, should be considered immune from such legal action.

In the suit, Ronald and Patricia Reinerth, Bethel Park, Pa., and Walter and Rose Marie Troxell, Library, Pa. seek over $1 million in compensatory and $3.35 million in punitive damages for interference in contractural relations and denial of civil rights. The suit was filed in the Garrett County Circuit Court by Oakland attorney Robert E. Watson.

The two couples filed the complaint because they felt the Promotion Council through its executive director Cynthia (Hanks) Kutchman, discriminated against them when it allegedly refused them membership in the Council and denied them advertising space in the Promotion Council's Vacation Guide without providing them a reason or an opportunity for redress. Because the Council is partially funded by the county, the county commissioners were drawn into the suit.

Attorneys filed a demurrer for Ms. Kutchman which says that the three claims against her should be dropped because in her dealings with the couples she never acted on her own, but as executive director for the Council and as a public official. The attorneys make a plea for the dismissal of claims against Ms. Kutchman because of her governmental immunity.

Attorneys also argue, in separate motions, that claims can neither be brought against the commissioners nor the Promotion Council because of sovereign immunity.

Two additional motions raising preliminary objections were filed by attorneys: in one, they request that any judgment against the defendants, which are non-profit governmental agencies, be limited to their available liability insurance and, in the other, they note that the defendants' insurance does not cover punitive damages. The plaintiffs seek $1 million in compensatory and $3.35 million in punitive damages.

Ralph Burnett of the Burnett, Elswert, Crawford, and James law firm of Oakland, which is representing the Promotion Council, noted that the motions filed are preliminary answers to the charges made by the plaintiffs. Should the court not agree that the three parties are immune from the legal action, the attorneys will file answers to

by Kathy Bailey

The arrest and shoplifting charge of a 73-year-old Friendsville man, which appears to have been nothing more than a misunderstanding, may have led to his taking his life last Thursday.

Theodore Uphold was arrested November 6 at Browning's Supermarket and charged with shoplifting. His grand-daughter, Karen F. Spiker of Oakland, stated that, in her opinion, Mr. Uphold "could not stand the humiliation of seeing his name besmirched with such an outlandish charge." He shot and killed himself last Thursday, the day after his arrest was included in the weekly arrest records in The Republican.

Mrs. Spiker related the details of the incident as Uphold explained it to the family. She said that, during his weekly shopping "a can or two of Skoal was selected and placed in the shopping cart. Due to the small size of these cans, they kept falling through the grocery cart until it became a nuisance to keep picking them up. He then placed them in his shirt pocket pending check-out at the register. During the check-out process he forgot about the Skoal cans in his shirt and walked through the automatic doors with his purchases in a cart. While in the glass enclosure he remembered the Skoal, but he had to continue out the other automatic door and get his cart turned around to re-enter the store. He was attempting to do just that when he was chased down by a young employee and told that he had not paid for the Skoal. He knew that and said he was just going back in to pay for them. 'Oh, no, you must see the manager,' he was told. Well, it resulted in his arrest, incarceration for a short period, fingerprinting, and generally being criminalized."

Mrs. Spiker added that, "In relaying the events of that afternoon to family, tears clouded his eyes because he just couldn't understand why no one would believe him or even think he would have ever tried to take something that

Quick Action By Owners Saves Barn From Fire

Quick action by the owners of a barn, estimated in value at $150,000, resulted in only minor damage after fire was discovered inside the structure on Saturday just before 12:30 p.m.

Robert Shimer, fire investigator for Garrett and Allegany counties, stated that small children had been playing with matches in the barn, which is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Gary Broadwater and located off the Accident-Friendsville Road, approximately two miles from Accident. At 12:36 p.m. Garrett Central Alarm dispatched firefighters from Accident and placed Friendsville and Grantsville units on standby.

Mrs. Broadwater noticed smoke coming from the barn and attempted to extinguish the fire with buckets of water. She later obtained a fire extinguisher from her home, about 100 feet away from the barn. The structure contained a large amount of hay, farming equipment and a milking room attached to one end. The cattle were out in the field at the time of the fire.

The Broadwaters were able to contain the fire to a small area, according to Shimer, until the Accident Fire Department arrived at the scene.

Fire personnel remained on the scene for about two hours.

Health, Education Officials Review Procedures On Dealing With Lice

The Garrett County Health Department and the Garrett County Board of Education reiterated the policies and procedures today for dealing with the outbreak of lice in the schools.

All students suspected of having lice will be sent home from school with a letter and instructions explaining the type of treatment necessary for the child and the family. Children or adults with medical problems should consult their physician before purchasing over-the-counter medication to treat head lice, according to health department officials.

In addition to shampooing the hair, all bedding, linens, and personal clothing should be washed in hot water and dried at a high temperature for 20 minutes. Parents also should use a fine-tooth comb dipped in vinegar to help comb the dead nits from the hair after using the medicated shampoo. If the dead nits are not removed, this causes great confusion when it is time to check the child for recurrence of the infestation. Students will not be admitted to school without proof of treatment, such as a note from their doctor, the health department, or the label or box top from the shampoo, according to the Board of Education.

All other children in the classroom will be screened for lice after a case is identified. Children identified with lice or nits will be rescreened 7-10 days after treatment to ensure successful eradication of lice. If treatment has not been adequate, parents will again be notified, the Board said.

Parents are cautioned against unnecessarily repeating the shampoo, as side effects may occur. Shampooing with the medication does not prevent the infestation of lice, health officials stated.

Lice can be eliminated easily with a medicated shampoo, thorough washing of bedding and clothing, and removing nits from the hair.

Any parents needing additional information may call the Garrett County Health Department at 334-8111 or 895-5050 for Grantsville residents.

About three billion copies of the Bible have been sold or distributed throughout the world.

Maryland Epilepsy Association Issues Seizure Information

November is Epilepsy Awareness Month, and the Epilepsy Association of Maryland poses a question most vital to persons with the disorder, as well as the general public. In a recent news release, EAM asks, "Do you know what to do if you come upon someone having an epileptic seizure?"

Unfortunately, according to the association, most people don't know the correct response and for the more than 40,000 Marylanders with epilepsy, and over two million Americans, this lack of first-aid knowledge on the part of the public could be harmful. Even though modern medication can control seizures for many persons with epilepsy, a seizure is not an uncommon occurrence.

During November, National Epilepsy Awareness Month, the Epilepsy Association of Maryland is urging the Maryland community to obtain the facts and learn these easy first-aid procedures.

A basic rule to remember is to never force any object between the teeth of a person having a convulsive seizure.

"Many people think it's necessary to force something between the teeth to prevent the person from swallowing the tongue," explains Deloris Ford, EAMs Director of In-Service Training and Advocacy, but this is impossible because the tongue is attached to the bottom of the mouth. In fact, all you'd succeed in doing is chipping a few teeth and choking the person having the seizure."

There are some helpful steps a person can take to aid someone having this type of seizure. They are as follows:

Stay calm and do not try to restrain movements.

Move sharp objects out of the way. Try to move the person only if there is a dangerous object nearby that cannot be moved.

Turn the person on the side and place a soft, flat object, such as a folded jacked, under the head.

Do not splash water or otherwise try to revive the persons. Let the seizure run its course.

When the person regains consciousness, help him or her become reoriented to the surroundings. Let the person rest a few minutes and then, if needed, call a taxi or a relative to help him home.

Summon emergency medical help only if the seizure lasts longer than a few minutes or if another seizure starts immediately after the first one.

For more information on first aid for seizures, epilepsy and the Epilepsy Association of Maryland, call 243-4811 or toll free at 800-492-2523.

Rougher Sledding . . .

Federal budget director, David A. Stockman, recently made what is almost an unforgivable error, by publicly expressing doubt in President Reagan's economic plan, which was created largely through the efforts of Stockman himself. For some reason, which is confusing to us, the president has given Stockman another chance, however, and has asked him to stay on with the Reagan team.

Stockman made the error most likely because of his inexperience as a public figure. He was thrust into the limelight so quickly, and at such a relatively young age, that he forgot for a moment to think before speaking. His criticism of the Reagan program should never have been communicated, even in the privacy of his own home, let alone in a magazine interview, for there always seems to be a reporter lurking about, just waiting to pounce on controversial statements.

Whether Reagan's decision to keep Stockman around is a mistake remains to be seen. Stockman is no doubt brilliant in his field and probably is an asset to the president. However, when it comes time for Stockman and Reagan to convince Congress to approve further budget cuts, the sledding is going to be rougher than ever.

Tsk, Tsk . . .

According to an Associated Press item published recently, Howard County Police released false information to news reporters concerning a drug raid conducted there last month. The police chief said it was necessary to do so to protect undercover officers. What a crock!

This leader of law enforcement, upholder of right and wrong, just attempted to set back all straight-shooting cops who fulfill their absolute obligation to help the media inform the public by several thousand years.

Who's kidding whom? As a reporter who deals with total professionalism in the form of the Maryland State Police, I vehemently disagree with this hokey excuse. Lying to the press serves no purpose except to insult the intelligence of the reader, as well as those of us who bust our cans to present complete, accurate facts to the reader for his ultimate thought-processing decision.

The chief, Paul Rappaport, said giving phony information is sometimes a necessary part of police work. My father's moustache. Lying serves no necessary part of anything, most of all, upholding the fundamental responsibility of the First Amendment. Delaying information because of a pending investigation is one thing. Deliberate misconception is quite another.

Thank you Col. Thomas Smith, Maryland State Police superintendent, for disagreeing with this junior deputy on the basis of an acceptable press relationship. Baltimore County Police Commissioner Frank Battaglia deserves commendation as well, for declaring no toleration of fabricating information by his men.

Thank goodness some men still ride tall in the saddle.

Dear Editor:

We really can't understand how anyone could take someone else's pet, especially one loved so dearly by a family of six.

When Gretchen, our Irish Setter, was bought two years ago as a Christmas gift, none of us realized just how important she would become to us all. We're very positive that nobody could love her more than our family and we miss her so much.

Gretchen was bought to replace another that was killed a short time earlier. For awhile we had a dog that not only mended the heart of our youngest son, but also grew to be loved as much by the rest of the family.

Please, whoever has taken our Gretchen, return her to us soon. No questions asked.

Dear Editor:

I've read with interest recent letters concerning the Southern Garrett Band. I wish to express my thoughts on the band program.

Few activities are available in our community for teenagers. Quite naturally, young people will find something to occupy themselves, and all too frequently we as parents find fault with their choices. It's far easier to find fault than seek solutions. Some activities build character, discipline, confidence, the ability to get along in groups, and a competitive spirit. The band is such an activity. Under the instruction of Richard Clever, Robert and Diane Thomas, and Band Boosters, band students are gaining experiences in character and leadership that others will not gain until later in life.

I accompanied the band to Florida in 1980, to Tennessee earlier this month as a chaperone. The students are dedicated, hard-working and trustworthy. We should be proud to have our community represented by such enthusiastic young people. We send them to national competitions to compete against our nation's finest and best equipped bands. The band does not embarrass themselves, their instructors, or their community—they perform! They are rated among the finest bands in the country.

It should be noted that many of the competing bands are sponsored by large companies, thus freeing those band members from time consuming fund raising activities, and allowing more practice time. Our band, by contrast, is not well equipped and must not only raise funds but practice and perform, along with all related activities. This fact alone makes it amazing that we can compete with those advantaged bands.

Let's get behind our band and build on a wholesome activity instead of being critical. Let's participate from inside instead of standing outside and finding fault.

Sincerely,
Nancy J. Spiker

Processing chicken plant, use of Sterling's treatment facilities by Oakland has been found "practical, cost-effective and environmentally sound." France stated that Franklin Associates is satisfied that Sterling's plant could do the job up to current effluent standards (secondary treatment or 90 percent waste removal), but not beyond. Plans in using the Sterling plant under current standards involved the cost-effectiveness of piping effluent to the big Yough, at a cost of about $80,000, thereby avoiding advanced wastewater treatment by avoiding discharge into the Little Yough (which now has more stringent standards). There is talk at the state level, however, that the big Yough could also face stricter parameters, thus making advanced treatment mandatory.

The alternative construction of a new plant for Oakland is estimated at a cost of $3 million, but would cost an additional $3 to $6 million to meet standards above currently required secondary treatment. (The estimated cost of the proposed use of Sterling's plant has not yet been determined, as a study examining all aspects of that use has not been completed.) France said the problem is that tertiary treatment is generally three times as costly as secondary.

In a recent interview, Harman stated that it is basically a fish situation, as all waters in Garrett County are classified by the Department of Natural Resources as natural trout waters, with the exception of a portion of the Casselman River. The discharge parameters are established by State Health for municipalities seeking funding assistance for sewage treatment facilities. (All steps toward obtaining sewage treatment are reviewed by that department.)

The current discharge parameters for the big Yough are 30 parts per million for suspended solids and biological oxygen demand (30/30), which means plants discharging into that waterway must obtain 85 to 90 percent waste removal through secondary treatment. Current standards for the Little Yough are 20/20. Quance's staff has reportedly recommended more stringent standards, and anything under 30/30 for the big Yough would require some level of advanced treatment. In a recent interview, France compared the situation to cleaning up spilled salt, saying "you can get the bulk (secondary treatment), but it's a lot harder to get the small individual grains left behind," which accounts for the increased cost.

France argues that, at the confluence, no laboratory test could determine that effluent had ever gone into the waters if all plants in the upper Yough area are operating at a secondary treatment level (including Oakland). The additional cost for tertiary treatment is primarily in operation and maintenance, as advanced wastewater plants require round-the-clock engineer manpower, the use of additional chemicals and mechanical equipment which, he said, could have mechanical failures. France noted that Sterling's plant is natural, and the only mechanical equipment is air blowers in the lagoons. The system was in use 16 years and has a "good track record," he added.

At Friday's meeting, attended by locals Harman, Beitzel, France, Sylvester and Col. Haig Jackson, Quance stated that his staff took two sets of stream samples, and he has not yet received the results of the second set, taken this fall. He said he needs both to make a determination regarding discharge parameters, and that determination should be made by Thanksgiving.

Quance noted that the department is particularly looking at the upper portion of the Youghtogheny, because, due to the terrain, it has very little fall and little natural aeration (it is a fairly long and flat course). He said, "We're talking about 20/20, a little better than secondary, but very stringent." Quance noted that other streams in the state are also facing more stringent classifications and discharge parameters.

Sylvester noted that Oakland needs the parameters before it can determine how to address the sewage problem, and he pointed out that the town now has an opportunity to get 90 percent of the job done, after some 20 years of planning but accomplishing nothing.

It was pointed out at the meeting that Quance's staff has been taking water samples with Oakland's raw sewage going into the Yough. Quance assured the local officials that he would factor that data into the mathematical procedure used to determine discharge parameters. The locals then proposed a current designation of secondary treatment, and for the state to come back five years from now and re-evaluate the waters.

Quance replied that he has certain rules to follow and "quite a few forces" looking over his shoulder. He said he wants to first look over the figures collected by his staff and complete an efficient evaluation. He noted that the parameters are a question of water quality itself. Quance said that even after the parameters are established, projects to be pursued will depend on the availability of federal funds, and some of them "could just sit."

Perry noted that, until the Upper Youghiogheny Area Sewerage Facilities Plan is approved, Oakland is unauthorized to plan for its plant to be located at any particular site. (Oakland has not yet made any final determination as to a method of treatment, but has explored several alternatives.) Perry said the department is looking at 60 to 90 days for approval of that plan, at which time Oakland may submit an amendment with its plans for sewage treatment, and then apply for design and construction funds. All agreed that the discharge parameters must first be established, followed by completion of Oakland's SSES and approval of the facilities plan in order to progress toward sewage treatment.

France noted that part of the Oakland project will be to design a collector system for some 34 outfalls (discharge points) by Oakland into the Little Yough. He added that other factors, in addition to effluent and the sluggish nature of the water flow, could affect the class III trout propagation waters, including agricultural runoff.

Quance said he "can almost guarantee we will not get 30/30 on Trout Run." The Trout Run facility was expected to be upgraded to provide secondary treatment in handling additional flows.

It was also noted that rehabilitation and replacing of sewer lines in Mt. Lake Park is being pursued by the town. Beitzel said the Garrett County Sanitary Commission has submitted a grant application for upgrading of Trout Run, but that the application is being held until discharge parameters are established. If the standards are more stringent than 30/30, the commission will be faced with some form of advanced wastewater treatment.

The local officials present expressed a desire "to get things moving," and Harman noted there have been sewer moratoriums in area communities for so long which have hindered area growth. France cited anticipated discharge parameters as a potential "stumbling block" in the area's attempts to provide sewage treatment and clean up the river.

Pocketful Of Trouble

by Harry Fox

Today in the state of Maryland, if you are caught and convicted of carrying a handgun without a permit, it can cost you $250 and a possible stay of 30 days in jail.

That's today. If Gov. Harry Hughes has his way, that same handgun violation a year from now will draw a mandatory one-year prison sentence. That's one year in jail. No exceptions, no excuses or compromises permitted.

This is a side of the "new" Gov. Hughes that his press secretary, Lou Panos, likes to talk about. According to Panos, the Governor is ready with several more dramatic proposals to submit to the General Assembly in 1982. He indicated that, while the staff is still debating the fine points, Hughes favors the model Massachusetts law that has dramatically reduced handgun-related crime in that state.

It takes guts to make that announcement in the weeks before deer season in Maryland, at a time when public opinion on the question of firearms control can easily be aroused. Panos stated that Hughes' staff would like to draft some exceptions to the proposed law for hunters, sportsmen, and high-crime area residents. And as for public sympathies, Panos believes that time and luck has begun to run out for the handgun lobbies. "This is not a knee-jerk reaction that will get the NRA (National Rifle Association) down on your a–," said Panos. "The target of this proposal is the street criminal." Public awareness has created a favorable climate for enactment, he indicated.

No one should be deceived about the complex arguments for and against gun registration. It is an issue that divides many steadfast friends and, as always, makes strange bedfellows.

But a handgun is little more than a pocketful of trouble. The greatest thing Marylanders concerned about real law and order can do is to get behind the Hughes proposal. Those of us who have owned handguns only to have them stolen can do our part. Those citizens really anxious to support efforts against crime can help. That is what the people who really need handguns, the police, have been saying. They have enough to do without weekend Wyatt Earps taking the law into their own hands.

There is enough violence and injustice in the world today. Our children do not need the questionable protection afforded by handguns stuffed in every pocket.

They are personal protection, a constitutional right, say the gun lobbyists. Yet my rights end where another's begin. The Hughes proposal actually places public need on a par with personal protection. In the long run, both benefit.

OAKLAND

Mrs. John Castilow, Liberty Street, returned to her home on Monday from Pemborke Pines, Fla., where she had been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kahn, for several weeks.

Every time I take off, I think, "Bonds helped get this airline off the ground."

Where the flying fishermen play

The water poured the coffee and we both sat there watching the hot, black liquid fill the cup. Finally, Joyce looked up at me. "For a guy celebrating a nice pay raise, you sure don't seem to be overflowing with joy."

I laughed and shook my head. "Hey, I'm happy about the raise. Lord knows we can use the extra dough."

After fifteen years of marriage, I knew Joyce was not someone to be put off when she sensed something wrong. "So why the trapped look in your eye? Is it the work?"

"Well, it's all right. I feel secure. And I sure studied for it." She just kept looking at me, waiting. So I finally spit it out. "However, I don't get a great deal of satisfaction from it. I guess I really don't enjoy it. And yet, the more I make, the longer I do it, the harder it will be to ever get out."

She nodded, not surprised at all. "Then why not do something you enjoy?"

I shrugged and looked out the window. A small plane was banking into what looked like a final airport approach. I kept watching him as I spoke. "Looking back—I guess I should have joined an airline when I got out of the Air Force. There's nothing I like better than flying—except, well, maybe fishing."

"So start a charter line for fishermen. You know, those rich ones, who can afford to seek out remote fishing spots. You could do that."

The idea appealed to me a lot. "Yeah, what a dream. But you need some hard cash to get that going."

She grabbed my hand. "Listen, we've both been buying United States Savings Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan since we started working. How much do we have?"

I had the feeling she knew.

I had forgotten our cache of Bonds, but they'd been growing for a long time. "I'm not sure . . . but a lot," I answered.

"We've got enough to start. Enough for a down payment. I always thought I married an adventurous man. Now prove it."

Well, that was two years ago. Now I'm doing what I want to do. Just flew a bunch of businessmen up near the Canadian border for some of the best fishing in the country. And Joyce is happy running the business end. Instead of being a secretary, she's hiring one.

But, you know, we both still buy Bonds on a regular schedule, 'cause we know that's the easy way to save for those dreams. Every time I take off, I think, "Bonds helped get this airline off the ground."

Help your dreams take wing while you help your country. Join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds.

Stores Alerted To Fraudulent Check Writer

Oakland area stores have been alerted by the Garrett County Sheriff's Department to be aware of a woman who has cashed bad checks at Ralph's Richfood, Mt. Lake Park, under different names, and attempted to cash a check under a third name.

Ralph Livengood, owner of the establishment, told police that two checks with different names and addresses, but similar handwriting, were cashed at that establishment in early November. Both were returned marked "no account" and "account closed." Attempts to contact the people whose names were on the checks led to fictitious phone numbers and responses from persons who "had never heard of the person (s)" in question, police said.

On Friday at 5:55 p.m. the suspect entered the store and attempted to cash another check, in the same amount of the others and having similar handwriting but a different name and address. The suspect had left the store when police arrived.

She is described as a woman in her early 20s, five feet, six inches tall, with blonde shoulder-length hair. She was traveling with two children and she identified herself as an Oakland resident, however the check had a Bellview, W. Va. address. All three checks were in the amount of $85, however the one presented Friday was not honored. Livengood told police the woman attempted to purchase a few items from the store.

The two checks that were cashed were drawn on banks in Parsons, W. Va., and Roanoke, W. Va. The names endorsed on the checks were Brenda Carr, address Parsons, W. Va.; Mrs. Austin L. Bond, Roanoke, W.Va., and Mrs. Warren Carter, Oakland. Complete addresses, social security numbers and telephone numbers were provided by the suspect in all three incidents.

Teeth are bones—but harder than most of the other bones in the body.

Accident Area Crimes Continue

Two Accident establishments last week reported continued crimes in that area to the Garrett County Sheriff's Department, including the Accident County Roads Garage.

The foreman of the garage told police that approximately 30 gallons of gasoline was removed from a county dump truck sometime between 3:30 p.m. Friday and 7:30 a.m. Monday, while it was parked in front of the shop. No other vehicles were tampered with and nothing else was noticed missing, however this type of theft has been occurring there on a near weekly basis.

The proprietor of the Accident Laundromat reported that, during opening hours on November 2, someone removed two small change boxes from Maytag washers and pried open a soap machine, taking that change box. Attempts have been made to take change from the machines in the past, however this is the first time a theft has been accomplished. The owner reported that the change boxes were all emptied shortly before the incident, and no loss value was placed.

Bradley Manor

Cathy Uphold has returned home after being a patient at Garrett County Memorial Hospital.

Tina Maule was a recent patient at Garrett County Memorial Hospital.

Cecil Paterson, manager for Community Services, visited Bradley Manor Wednesday accompanied by an architect and construction contractor. Their two-and-one-half hour visit involved an inspection of some of the vacant apartments, the roofs, and the sewage treatment plant. They tore down a wall in one of the vacant apartments to determine damages from water leakage, and they expressed concern about the drainage field. They did not meet with any tenants.

The Bradley Manor Tenants Group has sent a package of 25 letters to President Ronald Reagan protesting proposed budget cuts to the Section 8 subsidized housing program. More letters will be sent in the next few weeks. Persons wishing to send a letter should contact Sharon Elsey in Apt. No. 211, or call her at 334-2740.

Friendsville Elem. Students Hold Special Program

Students in the Friendsville Elementary School participated in a Veterans' Day Program on November 11 at the site of the town memorial, located near the school.

Mrs. Jane Fox, principal, welcomed students, teachers, and visitors, after which students and teachers took part in songs, prayers, and the placing of a wreath to honor all servicemen.

Guest speaker was Maxine Combs.

Those students taking individual part included Veronica Lamb, Marcy Suter, Rodney Frazee, Darrell Sisler, Belinda Gribble, William Dixon, Dawn Artice.

Task Force Begins Study Of County Voc. Ed Program

The Garrett County Board of Education last week heard a report by Albert Ringer, assistant superintendent in Curriculum and Instruction, on the progress of a needs assessment study on vocational education which is currently underway through the auspices of the Board of Education and Garrett Community College.

Ringer indicated that a task force composed of Board of Education and Community College staff, along with Vocational Education Advisory Council members, hopes to have the parameters of the study established by January in order to solicit outside the county consultants to do the actual study. It is hoped that the study will be completed by summer 1982, with a report to the Board of Education and the Board of Trustees to follow.

In other news relating to vocational education, the Board accepted the resignation of Thomas Earley as chairman of the Vocational Advisory Council. Herbert Harman, school board president, noted that Earley had served in this capacity for several years and that his presence would be missed on the Council. The board also approved the appointment of Art Butler and Harold Graham to the Council.

had not been paid for. Actually, the officers involved did not believe that he had intentionally committed a wrongdoing but they had to perform their job when charges were placed."

Jerry Thrasher, manager at Browning's, "preferred not" to comment on Uphold's individual case, saying that he did "not want to make an issue of this particular case." When asked about shoplifting procedures at the store, he stated, "We observe something happening in the store, and we don't approach a customer without prior facts. We report the facts as we see them and then the matter is turned over to the state." Shoplifting, he said, constitutes something taken out of the store without being paid for.

Thrasher said that shoplifting is "a continual thing for us and we're trying to stop it." He added that "it costs the consumer money." According to Thrasher and Charles Pariseau, District Court Commissioner, it is customary in that store that, after receiving items from the accused's person, he/she is asked to sign an acknowledgement of the facts as the store personnel see them which is, in effect, a confession of the items taken. Thrasher stated that 99.9 percent of persons arrested at Browning's for shoplifting do sign that statement.

It is unknown whether Mr. Uphold signed such a statement, as Thrasher refused comment on individual cases. Pariseau stated that he only observed an application to file a complaint which was filled out by Kevin Biser, the complainant, a store employee.

Mrs. Spiker told members of The Republican news staff that, "This incident is evidence of the (type of) management this concern has allowed itself to succumb to. For a manager not to take into consideration the length of time a person has dealt with an establishment (Uphold had been a regular weekly shopper at Browning's since they had their first store), the age of the person and his obvious infirm state of health, the fact that our senior citizens are a little more prone to forgetfulness than those of the younger set, even though this malady does afflict all of us at times, is really just completely irresponsible and asinine."

When asked about her grandfather, Mrs. Spiker said, "He was a good man, an honest man, with more acquaintances who knew him to be a just and fair person than I could even number. Even the medical examiner realized what this charge had done to this good man." She added that, in her opinion, "He chose not to endure the further humiliation of a trial and possible sentencing."

Health and Safety Tip

From the American Medical Association

Alcohol is absorbed directly and fairly rapidly into the blood from the stomach and intestines. It is carried to the liver, then to the heart and distributed throughout the body's tissues.

Most consumed alcohol is eventually metabolized (broken down by body processes) into carbon dioxide and water.

A pamphlet from the American Medical Association points out that the rate of absorption varies among individuals and varies in the same person at different times. It depends on the amount of alcohol in the drink, how fast it is consumed, and how quickly it leaves the stomach.

Fasting or any other condition that causes rapid emptying of the stomach will bring about an increase in the absorption rate. Anything that delays emptying of the stomach, such as the presence of solid food, will retard absorption.

An average 150-pound man, under ordinary circumstances, can metabolize about seven grams of alcohol (the equivalent of about two thirds of an ounce of straight whiskey or eight ounces of beer) in an hour. But individual variation is reported to be as high as 50 per cent more or less than the average. The more you drink beyond your ability to metabolize alcohol in a given period, the more intoxicated you become.

The most disturbing effects of alcohol occur in the central nervous system, especially the brain. Judgment, memory and learning ability all are affected as intoxication increases. Coordination is impaired, as reflected by unsteady gait, speech disturbances and reduced manual skill. The drinker may feel little pain, or may be unconcerned about his safety. High concentrations of alcohol can lead to shock and death.

Sustained exposure of brain tissue to alcohol ultimately can lead to destruction of brain cells. Inadequate diet, so often associated with alcoholism, probably contributes to this process as well as to the degeneration of nerve tissue.

Prolonged and heavy use of alcohol usually causes problems ranging from inflammation of the stomach to ulceration and internal bleeding. Many alcoholics develop cirrhosis of the liver.

Alcohol appears to constrict the arteries of the heart. Studies suggest that it can injure the heart muscle.

While the body seems to adapt gradually to increasing amounts of alcohol, this tolerance may be lost in the advanced stages of alcoholism. Drinkers then find they can no longer tolerate alcohol, and a relatively small amount can bring intoxication.

Straight Talk About Aging

Dr. Matthew Tayback, State Director on Aging

OVERCOMING STRESS

I've just come across a rewarding article. Published in a recent issue of Perspective on Aging, it was written by Jeanne Melvin, a registered occupational therapist, and it deals in part with stress.

We know that stress is an element to be reckoned with by people with heart conditions. Exactly to what degree it aggravates (or even helps cause) such conditions is a much-debated matter among professionals. Nonetheless, tranquilizers are often prescribed for people with existing cardiac problems. Furthermore, sound evidence is being presented by epidemiologists which demonstrates a significant relationship between the personality type of an individual and risk of a coronary episode.

But certainly we do not need to wait for all the hard scientific evidence to be reported before starting to develop some anti-stress techniques of our own. Some very good ones have been presented by Ms. Melvin, who states that she herself has found particularly helpful the work of Diana Baldwin, coordinator of occupational and recreational therapy at the Tri-County Mental Health Center in Missouri, where Ms. Baldwin teaches clssses in stress reduction.

First and foremost, Ms. Baldwin advises people to learn to recognize the causes of their stress. Then, if a known stressful situation presents itself, try this relaxation response (and here I am giving you Ms. Melvin's quotation from Ms. Baldwin):

"Breath in and out slowly, counting to four as you inhale and exhale. The second time you breathe out, feel the tension melt, like warm wax, from the top of your head and out your body through your feet."

This technique, says Ms. Melvin, "helps enormously in slowing down the stress reaction."

Other techniques involve . . .

—Learning at what times of day your energy level is at its highest and planning to do your most difficult tasks during that period.

—Planning your day's tasks according to pre-established priorities. Try making a two-part list. In Part 1, write down those things you must do; in Part 2, list the things you'd like to do if there's time. That way, you won't feel pressured to complete everything in a single day.

—When planning your day, always think in terms of balance. Leave some time for yourself—for a hobby, for reading, for doing something you thoroughly enjoy. Try to include an enriching sensory experience, too. For you music might indeed "hath powers to soothe . . .," but so might something as simple as a long soak in a warm tub.

—Getting outside yourself, reaching out to help other people. This can be something as "little" as a friendly note or phone call to a bedridden friend. It can be as "big" as participation in a formally structured community volunteer program.

—Developing a little trick called a "whispering skill." This, writes Ms. Melvin, is "a coping technique in which you congratulate yourself for, say, waiting in line without getting a headache. Tell yourself something positive about yourself. It really helps to chase away the blues." And the stress.

Parent Volunteer Activities Noted

A total of 31 parents began the current year Parent Volunteer Program at Friendsville School in September.

The materials and activities that are produced by the parents benefit all students in the school in one way or another. Areas of concentration for these materials are math and reading; reinforcement games; alphabet and color charts; and functional bulletin boards. Parents have also organized science kits and typed stencils for teachers.

Wednesday is volunteer day in the school, but parents may come in at any time. Parents wear a special volunteer logo while in the school, and are recognized on a mobile in the foyer through a system of stars. As a new parent joins the program, a star is added to the mobile.

The organization of the parent volunteers is coordinated by Ms. Joan Whetsell, Title I Resource Teacher; Mrs. Sandy Nesline, EEEP Resource Teacher; Mrs. Frances King, Title I Aide; Mrs. Joan Weaver, Title I Home-School Aide; and Mrs. Jane Fox, Principal.

Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee were the only brothers to sign the Declaration of Independence.

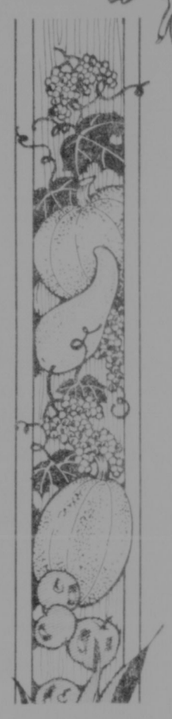
Recipes for the Holiday Table



Turkey Buying Tips

This year make selecting the bird that will grace your Thanksgiving table easy by remembering these tips.

To be assured of a juicy turkey, look for a deep-basted bird. A mixture of vegetable oils is the preferred basting material, since it, unlike broth or butter, enhances the poultry flavor rather than masks it. Lifting the roast turkey from the roasting pan is easier if you choose a Butterball Swift's Premium Turkey which has a string lifter packed with it. Likewise, carving is easier if the brand has removed most of the leg tendons. To determine the size turkey you'll need, allow 1-1/2 pounds of turkey for each person being served.

For a crispy vegetable go-with for your Thanksgiving turkey, try this recipe for Corn Fritters.

Corn Fritters

Yield: 20 to 24 fritters

- 3 pounds shortening for deep frying
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon onion powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley
- 17 ounce can whole kernel corn, drained

Heat shortening in deep kettle to 375°F. Add oil to eggs Combine flour, baking powder, sugar, onion powder and salt Stir into egg mixture with parsley and corn. Drop spoonfuls into hot fat. Fry 2 to 3 minutes, turning to brown well. Drain on paper towels. Fritters may be cooked several days ahead and frozen. To reheat, place frozen fritters on cooky sheet in 350°F oven 10 to 15 minutes or until heated through.

Citrus Zucchini Cake
A House Warming Delight

A house filled with the aroma of a fine, large cake baking in the oven offers a welcome to family and friends that bespeaks warmth and affection. When the cake contains succulent, naturally sweet citrus and garden-green zucchini, it also offers intelligent up-to-date nutrition and fantastic good taste.

Citrus Zucchini Cake takes advantage of the fresh oranges readily available in the market to use both the grated fresh orange rind and the golden juice in a cake batter studded with shredded, unpared zucchini. The contrast of the nutty taste of the zucchini with the piquant orange juice gives an unexpected and rich flavor to the handsome cake.

A delicate white sugar glaze covers the cake while slivered orange rind and shredded green zucchini tops it off with style.

Citrus Zucchini Cake

- 1 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon cloves
- 2 cups packed light brown sugar
- 4 eggs
- 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup orange juice
- 1 cup shredded unpared zucchini

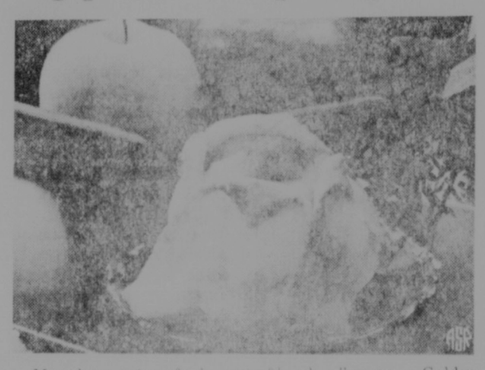
In large mixing bowl cream butter, orange rind, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and brown sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder and salt; blend into creamed mixture alternately with orange juice. Stir in zucchini. Turn into a greased 10-inch tube pan. Bake in 350°F. oven 55 to 65 minutes, or until cake tester inserted in cake comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes, remove from pan and cool completely. Spread top with White Glaze* and garnish, if desired, with slivered orange rind and shredded zucchini. YIELD: 12 to 16 servings.

*White Glaze

- 1 1/2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, softened
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 to 3 tablespoons milk

Beat all ingredients in bowl until smooth.

Apple Dumplings Are Traditional Treat



Marvelous eaten fresh, out-of-hand, all-purpose Golden Delicious apples are prized for their superior baking and cooking qualities. Because they hold their shape so well during cooking, Goldens are ideal for poaching or baking. And because the flesh of Goldens, when cut, stays white longer than that of other apple varieties, this is an ideal apple for use in pies and other desserts, as well as for salads, appetizers or main dishes.

Golden Apple Dumplings

- 1 cup dried apricots
- 1-1/2 cups water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 6 medium Golden Delicious apples, peeled and cored
- Pastry for 2-crust 10-inch pie
- Apricot Sauce

Simmer apricots in water 20 to 25 minutes or until tender. Add sugar during last 5 minutes of simmering. Drain; reserve syrup for sauce. Cool and chop apricots; fill centers of apples. Roll pastry and cut into six 7-inch squares. Place apple on each square. Bring corners of pastry to center; moisten edges and carefully seal all sides. Roll back corners slightly to expose filling. Prick pastry with fork; place in shallow baking dish. Bake at 375°F. 35 to 40 minutes or until apples are tender. Serve warm with Apricot Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Apricot Sauce: Add water to reserved apricot syrup to measure 1 cup. Blend 2 teaspoons cornstarch with 1/4 cup sugar; add syrup. Cook over medium heat until thickened and clear. Stir in 1 tablespoon each lemon juice and butter. Makes about 1 cup.

Gas producers and the cost of natural gas.

The cost of natural gas, like all energy costs, has risen sharply ... not only for you, but for Columbia, too. And to find the reasons, you have to start with those who produce the gas we buy. Because the increases you've seen in your gas bill come in large part from the increased cost of producing the natural gas you need.

☐ For example, in just the past four years, the cost of drilling a typical natural gas well has nearly doubled to close to half a million dollars. And there's no guarantee that the well will produce. The risk is enormous—but necessary—in order to replace the huge amounts of gas we're using daily and to keep the pipeline full.

☐ Increased producer costs mean higher gas bills, because Columbia has to pay more for its gas, whether it comes from Appalachian wells or from the Southwest. But when you consider it means more gas available and more sources being developed for future needs, it's worth it.

Several Thefts, Vandalism Occur Throughout County

Several area incidents of theft and destruction of property were reported to the Garrett County Sheriff's Department last week.

Welton Lane of G Street, Mt. Lake Park, told police that three white wicker chairs were taken from the front porch of his residence sometime between 11 p.m. last Wednesday and 2:30 a.m. Thursday. Two of the chairs are straight back and one is a rocker. A total estimated loss value is $180.

In a separate case, John E. Hinebaugh, McHenry, owner of the old Sang Run Post Office and Store, reported that three unknown white males removed a large sign from the front of that establishment on Sunday at 5:45 p.m. Because of the historical value of the sign, no monetary value was placed.

The sign is described as six to eight feet by two feet, made of wood and reading "U.S. Post Office, Sang Run, Md. 21558." The letters are approximately 10 inches high, and the sign was weather beaten.

The front and rear windshields of a vehicle in Deer Park were broken out on two nights since the beginning November. Henry L. Armstrong told police that, during Friday night, someone threw a 12-inch diameter round firewood, about 16 inches long, at the front windshield of his 1971 Ford LTD, smashing it. November 1 someone threw a brick through the rear windshield of the same automobile, smashing that also. No loss value was placed.

In a separate case, Mary Lou Thomas, Friendsville, reported that a black vinyl case containing her husband's compound bow, seven arrows and a quiver, was taken from the rear floor of her vehicle on November 6. Mrs. Thomas is employed in Markleysburg, Pa., however it is unknown where the theft occurred. The equipment is described as Bear/Alaskan bow, black with silver streaks, four to five years old and having a 60 to 70 pound pull. No loss value was placed.

Patricia A. Wolfe, Mt. Lake Park, reported the theft of a boy's bicycle from the front yard of her residence during Sunday night. The bicycle was recovered one half hour after the theft was reported, found over a bank in that vicinity (Deer Park Avenue). Police believe the bicycle was dropped off because of rust spots and a bad chain.

In a separate case, Barbara R. Englander, Oakland, reported a theft of nine black and brown laying hens taken from a chicken coop at her residence along Fingerboard Road. The incident occurred during Saturday night. All of the chickens are about one and one-half years old. No loss value was placed.

Betty L. Sebold, Deer Park, reported the theft of six T shirts from a clothes line at her residence sometime after midnight on Thursday. The T-shirts are yellow, red and purple in color with "West Virginia" written on them. A loss is approximately $30.

Madigan's Auto Sales, Deer Park, reported a destruction of property at that car lot during the night of November 6. Someone used a sharp object to scrape the side of a 1981 Ford Escort belonging to that establishment. No loss value was placed.

In other business, the department arrested seven persons last week.

Wanda Sampson, 35, Accident, was arrested November 10 on a fugitive warrant from Ohio. She was released the same day on $5,000 unsecured bond.

Stephen McGreery, 26, Westernport, was incarcerated November 10 and charged with breaking and entering (dwelling) and unlawful use of a telephone. He was released the same day on his own recognizance.

Harold R. Sampson, 40, Accident, was arrested Friday on a fugitive warrant for grand theft. He was released the same day on $5,000 unsecured bond.

Roger L. Funk, 26, Terra Alta, W. Va., was incarcerated Saturday and charged with driving while under the influence. He was released Sunday on his own recognizance.

Joseph Ray, 25, David Shillingburg, 23, and a juvenile, all of Elk Garden, W. Va., were arrested yesterday and charged with destruction of property. Shillingburg was also charged with possession of controlled dangerous substance paraphernalia.

Ray and Shillingburg were released yesterday after they posted $100 bond each. The juvenile was released to his sister.

The longest running variety show on television was Ed Sullivan's, from 1948-1971.

Several Injured In Auto Mishaps

Maryland State Police investigated a number of accidents during the last week, which resulted in personal injury and property damage.

Nellie Bell Lohr, 76, Oakland, was taken to Garrett County Memorial Hospital on Friday afternoon by Southern Rescue Squad following a two-vehicle accident on Old 219 at the Browning's Intersection.

According to police reports, Mrs. Lohr was northbound on Rt. 219 when her vehicle ran off the roadway. She lost control of the car as it reentered the road, crossed the center line, and sideswiped an auto driven by Linda Frances Peters, 38, Deer Park.

Mrs. Lohr was treated and released from the hospital. State police charged her with failure to keep right of center.

Tfc. Larry Rosage investigated.

A Terra Alta woman, Theresa Hebb, 19, was charged by police with driving without a license and negligent driving following a crash on Rt. 39 at 1:35 a.m. Saturday.

Police say Ms. Hebb was westbound on Rt. 39 when her auto failed to negotiate a right curve, spun out of control, and was struck in the rear by a vehicle driven by Robert Lee Burns, 38, Crellin.

Ms. Hebb was transported to Garrett County Memorial Hospital by Southern Rescue Squad, where she was treated and released.

A Mt. Lake Park man, George Patrick O'Brien, 32, was admitted to Garrett County Memorial Hospital Saturday afternoon following a motorcycle accident at the intersection of B Street and Pittsburgh Road, Mt. Lake Park.

Reports indicated O'Brien's motorcycle spun out of control and slammed into a parked car owned by George Thomas Kutchman.

O'Brien was transported to Garrett County Memorial by Southern Rescue Squad, where he was admitted. Hospital officials report he was discharged Tuesday. Charges are pending the investigation, which is being conducted by Tfc. John Foley.

A Deer Park Woman, Elsie Charlotte Miller, 39, was admitted to Garrett County Memorial and is currently listed in satisfactory condition following a single-vehicle mishap on Sunday morning.

According to police, Mr. Miller was westbound on Rt. 135 when her car was reportedly forced off the road by an unknown vehicle. Her auto then struck a tree head-on.

Ms. Miller was transported to the hospital by a private citizen. Tfc. Larry Rosage is investigating.

Fuel Assistance Requests Now Being Accepted

Local agencies throughout the state administering the Maryland Energy Assistance Program (MEAP) have been authorized to begin accepting applications for fuel assistance on November 16.

According to Stephen D. Minnich, Director of MEAP within the Department of Human Resources, it is expected that funds will be received from the federal government in time to begin the actual payment of benefits by December 1.

Minnich said that approximately 75,000 households will receive fuel assistance statewide during this year's heating season through MEAP, under provisions established by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services which administers the program nationally.

According to Minnich, income eligibility levels vary according to income regions throughout the state. Due to a reduction in federal funds available this year, the average benefit payment will be approximately $240.

Minnich emphasized that renters as well as homeowners who pay for their own heat may be eligible and that those households using coal and wood may be eligible as well. Direct payments will be made to individual household fuel suppliers in their behalf.

MEAP assistance will be provided in Garrett County through the Community Action Committee, Inc. which is located at 360 W. Liberty Street. Persons desiring information may call the office at 334-2151.

Lakers To Open Friday At Home: Black Injured

The Garrett Community College men's basketball team, under the direction of third-year coach Randy Hess, opens its 1981-82 season this Friday evening against the Altoona Campus of Penn State on the Lakers' floor. The contest is one of the preview tournaments being hosted by the Lakers and will follow the 6:30 p.m. opening game between Cecil Community College and Potomac State College.

The Lakers will play a 25-game schedule this season, with 14 of those contests on their home floor in McHenry. The next home game will be December 12 against the Community College of Baltimore.

According to Hess, Garrett will be playing approximately the first six weeks of the season without its top returning scorer, sophomore guard, Brian Black. Black injured an ankle in practice recently and is not expected to see action before the first of the year.

Hess says Black's injury will speed up the development of some freshmen, particularly Jeff Burton and Brian Selders, who are expected to see a lot of action during Black's absence.

"Brian (Black) was having a great pre-season and will be one of the top guards in the Region," stated Hess. "I'm confident his great desire to play will speed up his recovery. We'll miss him a lot."

Tri-captains for this season's Laker squad will be Brian Black, Bill Bender and Shawn Finney.

Lakers Finish Sixth In 1981 Region Tourney

The Garrett Volleyball team's bid for a regional championship fell short this past weekend as the Lakers dropped their opening game against Catonsville Saturday at the Region XX tournament in Charles County and ended up in sixth place.

Catonsville came into the tourney ranked first in the Region and fourth in the nation. Against Catonsville, Coach Mike Friend believed the Lakers gave one of their better efforts of the entire season, but fell short by scores of 15-4 and 15-7. Going into the tournament no JUCO team had scored more than six points against Catonsville.

The Lakers jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first game, but when they lost the serve opportunity, Catonsville came back to run off seven straight with accurate serves and a powerful spiking game.

In the second game, Garrett again attained the lead, 5-1 this time, before Catonsville resorted to some tricky tandem spike plays which confused the Garrett blockers.

Lisa Stark led the offense against Catonsville with six points scored on her serves. Sue Mason blocked four spikes and Sue Jack contributed several serve receive passes.

The Lakers were able to score only seven spike points against Catonsville. "This proved to be our big problem all day," Friend said. "We played good defense, but too much of it. We found ourselves under pressure so that we always needed great defensive efforts such as digs or blocks and, consequently, we were not able to get our offense going at all until the end of the day against Anne Arundel."

Following the Catonsville match, the Lakers lost two games to Dundalk and then came back to earn a tie in game two with Anne Arundel Community College.

In their six tournament games the Lakers consistently displayed great defensive effort, according to Friend, but not enough offensive power to score more than two or three points at a time.

"We did feel more pressure than we were used to and being nervous and under tension certainly inhibited us a little, but I'm sure plenty of teams had that same problem," Friend said.

For the day, Mason led the defensive with 16 blocks and seven digs.

Stark and Becky Remley shared 14 assists and Sharon Lipscomb contributed four digs and two service aces.

The Laker spikers had a balanced attack with Jack and Mason sharing eight kills and Patty Harsh adding another eight. Susan White finished with a three for four attack ratio.

Harsh was voted Honorable Mention on the Region XX all-star team, becoming the first Laker Volleyball player to attain that distinction.

"This trip was a great experience for us and isn't really a let down," Friend said. "We were seeded into the tough division and improved our status a notch. We played good volleyball and were defeated by fine teams."

Friend said the trip was "an exciting one" and "the girls represented our school and our county with a lot of class and character."

Rams Edge Huskies For County Title; Bosley And Carr Lead Ground Attacks

The Northern-Southern high school football game was predicted to be one of the most exciting, hardest-hitting, closest contests of the year in area football, and that's precisely what it was as the Southern Rams came from behind and held on to defeat the Huskies, 20-18, Friday evening on Northern's field. The contest nearly went into overtime, as the Huskies came to within two points on a touchdown with about two minutes remaining in the game, however quarterback Scott Graham's pass for the two-point conversion was tipped and fell incomplete.

Junior tailback Ron Bosley scored all of his team's 20 points against a Northern defense which had yielded only six points per game coming into the contest. Bosley finished with 151 yards on 31 carries, with many of his big gainers behind the blocking of offensive guard Pat Rodeheaver.

After stopping the Huskies' initial drive, the Rams marched 62 yards to inside the Huskies' five-yard line, only to give up possession of the ball on a fumble. However, the Huskies fumbled the ball right back again on their first play and the Rams had a first and goal from the one. On the third play of the series, Bosley crashed over from the six-inch line for the score. His kick for the extra point was blocked.

Northern came right back when junior tailback Robb Carr took the ensuing kickoff and raced 73 yards which set up the Huskies' first score, a three-yard run by Carr early in the second quarter. The kick for the extra point by Dave George was blocked by Jim Lyons and the game was tied at 6-6.

Carr led the Huskies' rushing with 106 yards on 19 carries, his fourth game in which he has exceeded the 100-yard mark.

The Husky defense forced the Rams to punt on the following series and the offensive unit engineered a 54-yard drive, capped by a one-yard scoring plunge by Troy Margroff. The pass from Graham for the two-point conversion fell incomplete.

The Rams took the kickoff and put together their own offensive drive, culminating in a one-yard scoring run by Bosley. Once again the pass for the conversion failed and the teams went to the locker rooms at the half with the score knotted at 12-12.

Southern took the opening kickoff of the second half and marched 53 yards, with Bosley taking the ball in from the one for his third six-pointer. His successful run for the two-point conversion would prove to be the winning edge.

A scoring drive late in the game gave the Huskies a chance to tie the score once again and put the game into overtime, as Margroff dove into the end zone from the one for his second TD of the evening. Junior quarterback Scott Graham sent three receivers to the right side on the two-point conversion play, however the ball was tipped by a Ram defender and fell incomplete.

The Huskies attempted an on-side kick, however it was recovered by Southern. With less than a minute remaining in the contest, Northern forced Southern to punt and had one more shot at a score, however Ram defensive back Paul Harvey ended the Huskies' hopes when he picked off a Graham pass.

Southern also held an edge in the statistics, outgaining the Huskies 238 to 179 yards in total offense and 12 to nine in first downs. The game was free of any major penalties, with each side being tagged with only two five-yard infractions.

"The game went just as we thought it would," Ram Coach Tom Woods stated. "Our team's emotion and enthusiasm in this game was the highest it has been all year and although we didn't play flawless football, we played very well."

Woods said he believed the two teams were equal in talent and quickness, but that Northern had a slight edge in size. "We were pleased to be able to move the ball and score 20 points against Northern's excellent defensive unit," he said. "They are hard, quick hitters and displayed a lot of gang tackling."

Woods felt his team had two things in its favor: that the Rams had played a somewhat tougher schedule and were used to competing with tough teams, and that it was the last game of the season for a team that in the previous two seasons was heading into a playoff game. "Our eight seniors just played an outstanding game," Woods said. "We had super practice sessions last week and the kids really wanted this win."

Woods said he was "extremely pleased" with the consistency of play by his offensive unit. "The linemen blocked particularly well, especially Pat Rodeheaver and Dave Scott (tight end)," Woods stated. "I was also quite pleased with the running of Ronnie Bosley and Dave Terrant. Ronnie picked up the yardage with his strength and Dave used his speed. Todd Lewis (quarterback) played probably his best game of the year. He used audibles well and threw effectively when we needed it."

Woods said he was also impressed by the performance of his defensive secondary, which picked off three Northern passes and made numerous tackles along the line of scrimmage. Jim Lyons, Andrew Orr and Paul Harvey supplied the interceptions. Woods also noted the performance of Mike Hillen at defensive end.

The weakest performances, Woods said, came from his specialty teams, particularly the punting unit. "Our coverage was poor," he said.

Northern Coach Jack Settle said he was pleased with the efforts of his team also. "Our boys fought back when they were down in the first quarter and then assumed the lead. The game could have gone either way, but when the clock ran out, we were a little short."

Settle felt that one play which really hurt was when the Huskies, having just recovered a Southern fumble inside the Huskies' five, immediately turned around and gave the ball back to the Rams on a fumble. "Our defense took the ball away from them and then our offense went in and gave it back to them," he said. "But, that's part of the game, and I said last week that we couldn't make mistakes and then hope to win." The Huskies had four turnovers in the contest, three of which Settle said "really hurt."

Settle also credited the efforts of his four seniors. "I have nothing but praise for Mike Robinson, Stan Eggleston, Kenny Butler and Bob Lipscomb," he said. "Kenny and Bob played their best defensive game of the year and we got excellent blocking from Mike, Stan and Bob on offense."

Lipscomb finished with five tackles and nine assists, while Troy Margroff contributed four tackles and eight assists.

Settle said he was pleased with the running of junior Robb Carr. "Robb now has over 600 yards rushing and has played only four games as a tailback," he said. "That says a lot about his potential."

He said Troy Margroff provided some solid blocking from his backfield position.

"Our defense never broke down," Settle stated. "We bent a little, though, mainly because of the hard running of Ron Bosley. He's an excellent back.

"Southern played a good ball control offense," he continued. "At one point they ran nine minutes off the clock with one drive.

"Overall, it was a most entertaining ball game," he concluded.

Coaches Comment On '81 Season

Although the record books will show that the Northern Huskies finished with a 3-7 record, anyone who followed the Huskies' season this year knows that their record on the field was 6-4. Their three opening wins had to be forfeited due to an unintentional infraction concerning the eligibility of Mike Bradshaw.

Coach Jack Settle said that his team started the season with a goal of ending up with a winning record. "After whipping Bruce and Valley, and losing to Beall just 7-3, though," Settle stated, "we began to realize that we had a better team than we expected and we started looking toward a shot at the Class C title.

"Then when we were forced to forfeit three wins, I was afraid our kids would give up," he continued. "But they didn't sell out. They showed great maturity and continued to improve week after week on the field. They maintained a team effort and real unity, which says a lot about the quality of these boys' character."

Settle said this year's team was "the nicest, most mature club" he had ever worked with.

Looking toward next season already, Settle said he has high hopes, with all but four of this season's team returning. "If we can stay free of injuries, we should have a very good team," he said.

Another goal of Settle's is to upgrade his schedule somewhat, by adding the likes of Petersburg and Moorefield next year and dropping Elk Garden and Tygarts Valley. "It takes time to build a strong program," Settle said, "especially when we are operating under such difficult circumstances.

"People don't realize how hard it is to progress with a program when our school is located sort of in the middle of nowhere," he continued. "Every other school we play is located within a town, however all of our kids have to be bussed or provide their own transportation. Without a town, such as Oakland, it is difficult to raise the extra needed money to support the program. Our athletic boosters work very hard and what merchants we do have support us, but they can do only so much."

Settle said that the actual running of the team is also difficult because of lack of staff. "I have one assistant coach (Harv Speicher) and one aide," he said. "We have no trainer and no local physician in our program."

Despite the difficulties, Settle said he, as well as his team, is looking forward to the 1982 season with great anticipation and will begin the off-season weight and training program in a month or so.

"We thought we would end up better than we did," Southern Coach Tom Woods stated in looking back over a 6-4 season, "however we were pleased to wind up with a winning season."

Woods felt there were two games which the Rams should not have lost this year, those being to Tucker County and Beall. "Our team was better than both of these, and one more win, especially over Beall, would have put us in the playoffs for the third straight year," he said.

Woods said his team's greatest weakness this year was the lack of speed. "We had no Paul Cornishs, Wayne Scotts or George Corlisses, which really hurt us," he said.

"However," he continued, "I am generally very satisfied with our season and this team is the most dedicated, nicest group of boys I have ever coached. I just never had to worry about poor conduct. They conducted themselves as gentlemen all season long and represented Garrett County with dignity and respect. As an example of their dedication to the team and to football, during summer practice there was not a single missed day of practice by any of the 57 boys out there, which I think is unbelievable."

Woods said he was also pleased with the performances of the freshman and junior varsity teams, which finished with records of 5-0 and 2-1-1, respectively. "We see a lot of talent there," he said, "and we're really excited about next year."

He said that after about a month of relaxation for the players, the off-season training program will begin.

Sports Comment . . .

Garrett County high school football fans who witnessed the Northern-Southern game Friday evening at Northern were certainly given their money's worth.

The game was just as most predicted it would be, close and exciting. Both teams displayed a lot of talent, poise and ability as they went head to head in what is always the most emotional contest for both schools. The outcome was not decided until the waning moments.

Perhaps the most gratifying aspect of the game, however, was the fact that there was not a single major penalty against either ball club. There were no clips, no illegal holds, no personal fouls, no unsportsmanlike conduct charges, and according to the referees, there were not even any undesirable remarks made on the field by the players to each other.

Most of the credit for such conduct must go directly to the coaches of these teams, Jack Settle of Northern and Tom Woods of Southern. The success of their seasons shows their knowledge of football and coaching, but the clean, good-sport performance Friday night shows a more important, greater quality in these two men. They are teaching many of our young people that good sportsmanship, courtesy and respect should come first, not only in football, but in life in general.

PET POINTERS

WHY CATS HUNT

If you've had an outdoor cat, you've probably seen the pet stalking insects, birds, or small animals. And you may have wondered why the cat bothered with the chase. It already had plenty of food, and lots of toys.

The reasons why modern domestic cats continue to hunt have intrigued behavioral scientists for several decades. Several technical papers and at least one reference book, Cat Behavior: The Predatory and Social Behavior of Domestic and Wild Cats, have analyzed this and other aspects of feline behavior.

The book's author, Paul Leyhausen, points out that the cat's hunting instinct probably was developed before its association with man began. Creeping along the ground, and keeping a low profile is an effective way of reaching a small ground animal. The cat tracks the animal until it strays a reasonable distance from a hole, and then pounces on it.

If a cat corners a rat or mouse, it generally waits for the prey to turn and run before attacking. This gives the cat the opportunity to grab the back of the rodent's neck for a quick kill. On the other hand, an aggressive mouse or rat is often successful in escaping by forcing the cat to jump back in self-defense.

Although some cats are exceptionally successful in downing birds, the average cat stalks many more birds than it actually catches. A bird's erratic movements and unpredictable short flights make it difficult for a cat to plan a method of attack. Cats are most likely to chase and catch birds in areas where the rodent population is low. And even then, the cats will spend time chasing insects as well. Studies run by state fish and game departments indicate that cats use birds for only a small portion of their diet.

You may wonder why a cat spends time chasing a small animal, and then leaves it uneaten by your doorstep or on the kitchen floor. Research hasn't provided a firm answer. One theory is that the cat wants to store the food for later, when it may be hungry. Another idea is that the cat's predatiry instinct is aroused by the sight of a rodent, and the full sequence of its catching and killing cycle has to take place, even if the cat isn't hungry.

Many of an outdoor cat's injuries are related to hunting. Deep, festering abscesses start when mouse or rat bites heal at the surface, trapping bacteria inside. Shallow, ragged cuts are often the results of trips through landfills or construction sites littered with metal scrap. Cats also develop infected sores when they fight each other for hunting territories or for females in heat.

If you see your cat constantly licking one spot or favoring one side, you might check for a small lump or hot spot that would signal a hidden abscess. Your veterinarian will have to open the abscess to help it heal from the inside out.

You will do yourself as well as your outdoor cat a favor by remembering to keep your pet's rabies vaccination up to date. Any pet that has frequent contact with wild animals — particularly raccoons and skunks — should be protected against this fatal disease. Remember, protecting your pet from rabies protects your family as well.

Peach Bowl Bid Is Anticipated By 19th-Ranked WVU

+MORGANTOWN, + +W.Va. (UPI) — When West Virginia nudged into the Top 20 two weeks into the season, WVU Coach Don Nehlen wasn't too concerned. Wait until the end of the season, he said.

A week later, despite an impressive win over Colorado State, West Virginia dropped out of sight, and again Nehlen was unfazed. Wait until the end of the season, he said.

Well, the Mountaineers are 8-2, appear headed to the Peach Bowl and are ranked No. 19 in the nation.

"At the end of the year, to get in there is an accomplishment. It's good. I'm happy to be 19th," Nehlen said Tuesday.

"Now we have to get our feet back on the ground and concentrate on playing football."

The Mountaineers are expected to tally their ninth win against the Orangemen, who are only 3-6-1. But Syracuse is coming off a strong win over Boston College and has a history of beating the Mountaineers, having won five of the last six encounters.

"They've beaten us like a drum," Nehlen said. "Last year they completely dominated us and they have about 18 starters back from that team. They had a running back gain 192 yards against us last year, and he's in a backup role for them this year. So that gives you an idea what we have in store for us."

The running back who devastated the Mountaineers last season is Glenn Moore, who filled in for the injured Joe Morris.

This year, Morris is back in top form with 1,026 yards (4.4 yards per carry) and eight touchdowns. The 5-7, 191-pound senior is Syracuse's all-time rusher with 4,131 yards on 786 carries.

Moore has been used mostly as a blocking back by first-year head coach Dick MacPherson and has only 83 yards and a touchdown on 23 carries.

MacPherson also has senior quarterback Dave Warner, who has completed 114 of 211 passes f9r another 1,340 yards, seven TDs and nine interceptions. Warner has also rushed 137 times for 404 yards and six TDs.

Defensively, sophomore linebacker Tony Romano leads the Orangemen with 92 tackles and 69 assists. Another linebacker, senior Mike Gyetvay, is second with 55 solo tackles and 46 assits.

Nehlen said he feels Syracuse is "really on the upswing" after suffering the pains of transition under MacPherson, a former assistant coach for the Cleveland Browns and head coach at hhe University of Massachussetts.

"Their record is so deceiving," Nehlen said. "They are just a fine team. Any time you have a whole new staff it takes the kids a while to get to know the coach and vice versa."

In 1980, Syracuse was the last of the Mountaineers' 12 regular season games. The Orangemen came into Morgantown with a 4-6 record and not only thumped the Mountaineers 20-7, but robbed them of a winning season.

"Twelve games for us last year was just a hair too many," Nehlen said. "When you play that 10th or 11th ball game and you start losing players like we lost, you're a mighty thin football team.

"There's a difference when you play a 12th game with four or five weeks off. You start getting your walking wounded back a bit."

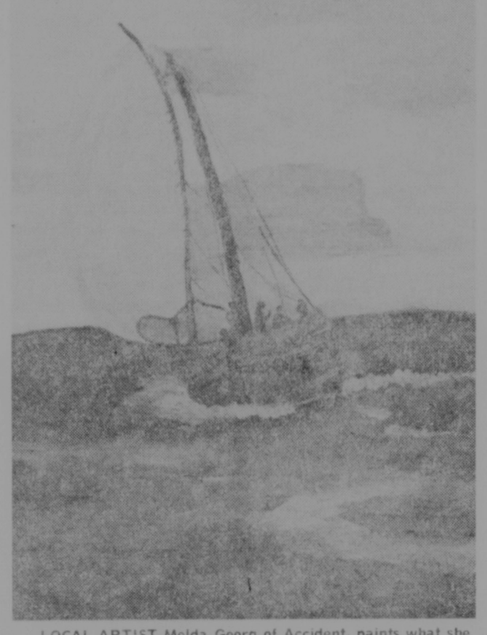
GAL 7 Hosts First Special Exhibit

By Melda Georg Of Accident



LOCAL ARTIST Melda Georg of Accident, paints what she sees for self-satisfaction and as a way of testing her abilities as an artist. Her works are on display at GAL 7, the Alder Street gallery of the Garrett Artist League through November.

by Harry Fox

Ask a woman with a house full of children, a fabric shop, and an interest in poetry and geneology what she does in her spare time and she'll tell you—she dosen't paint! For Melda Georg of Accident doesn't have very much spare time. Yet this native of Garrett County does indeed paint, pursuing an interest in art that requires more energy than the average hobby. Mrs. Georg has been painting since 1976. Her work can be seen through Nov. 28 at GAL 7, the art gallery of the Garrett Artist League, in the McLaughlin Building, Alder Street in Oakland.

Mrs. Georg took an art class through the Continuing Education program of Garrett Community College where instructor Gale Prentice introduced her to some of the fundamentals, however most of her technique has come from one source only—practice. "I see an idea and think, I can paint that." This approach results in a wide variety of subjects, from her children at play and familiar Mt. Top landmarks, to portraits of celebrities like Louis Armstrong, and faraway places in magazines. Almost any subject is apt to interest her, usually because it presents a challenge to her skills as a painter.

Her work shows an eclectic freedom which results from her lack of formal training in the fine arts. Without indoctrination to a specific style, she simply paints what catches her eye.

And with all the competition from family and her other tasks, she paints fast, roughing in her subject quickly, and finishing in one or two days. What does her family think? Mrs. Georg says her husband Irvin thinks that she writes better poetry. The younger of her children have on occasion "helped" her to finish a work while her back was turned from her makeshift studio in their large, rambling farmhouse on the Accident end of the Bumblebee Road.

Mrs. Georg has previously entered works in the Garrett County Fair, but the GAL 7 exhibit is her first experience showing her work to the public on a larger scale. She does feel somewhat uneasy as a novice exhibiter. "I have two worries. I worry that no one will come, and I worry that they will come," she said.

Mike Zuckerman of the Garrett Artist League wants this first special exhibit in the fledging gallery to be the start of many similar exhibits. The sharing and dialogue between artists and the community during such shows is at the heart of the GAL 7 project. While the exhibit is in progress the works of League members remain on display in the second of the two roms which comprise the suite. Zuckerman and the other members are present as hosts, and to answer questions raised by the visitor.

The prospect of recognition for her work is exciting to Mrs. Georg, whose warmth and energy as a person carries an undercurrent of modesty. She loves a challenge, loves to paint people, but finds the desired technique for the human face elusive and frustrating. And so she paints, first for herself, and then for those who may see the results.

For Melda Georg, there is a simple explanation for her art. "I look at people, and think that the very fortunate people are content to do ordinary things. I have never been satisfied with that."

The GAL 7 exhibit is open each Thursday, Friday and Saturday, from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Turkeys

turkey raiser, especially this year when there is a glut of turkeys on the market.

Only full-time employees will receive the turkeys. Elected officials will not.

Of those getting the turkeys, not all of them will gleefully carry their turkeys home to their families. Some think the extra money could be spent more practically. They point out that most county employees receive salaries above the average $10,000 income of heads of housholds in Garrett County.

One of these disgruntled employees simply said, "I really don't want a turkey. If I get one, I'll give it away to someone who can use it." Now, that's the holiday spirit.

Board Considers

including Northern and Southern high schools.

Although the Board made no decision on what it will do, it instructed its staff to investigate the possibility of reconstructing the boilers at the two high schools to convert to coal.

Dr. Jerome Ryscavage, superintendent of county public schools, noted that the Board had a decision between four options: 1) To continue with its original plans to replace the oil burners with new oil burners; 2) Seek a revision in the grant to Northern High School for conversion to coal; 3) Further investigate the proposal by Columbia Gas; or 4) Convert the burners back to coal.

Richard Lawson, a consultant with E.B.L. Rizer Associates of Hagerstown and who performed a technical assistance audit at Northern High School, explained to the Board the major reason he recommended new oil burners instead of conversion to coal was because of current state air quality standards and state regulations which set minimum size for coal boilers which would exceed the need of the high school.

Lawson stated that conversion to coal would be cost-effective.

In other business, the Board discussed a recent bus inspection by the Maryland Motor Vehicles Administration in which 26 school buses were taken out of service because of major violations such as faulty brake lines, tires, and exhaust systems.

Eugene Flinn, supervisor of transportation, noted that all of the buses taken out of service were over six years old.

In an effort to insure that buses will be as safe as possible in the future, the Board directed its staff to develop a policy for replacement of brakelines and a description of proper inspection procedure, and to arrange a workshop for county inspectors and mechanics which would be taught by personnel from the Motor Vehicles Administration and the State Department of Education.

Talk Of The Towns

What's Going On In . . .

by Wendell Keaton, Municipal Administrator

Kitzmiller - Nov. 4

The majority of the monthly meeting of the Kitzmiller Mayor and Town Council was devoted to discussion on the town's community building. Because of rising costs for utility service and increases in operation and maintenance fees, it was decided that Mayor Lois Mosser would attend the November 16 meeting of the Kitzmiller Lions Club to discuss the existing agreement between the town and Lions Club regarding expenses for the building. Additionally, a part-time janitor was hired for the community building.

Details of the upcoming election (February, 1982) were also discussed. Several residents appeared to request information of procedures to be followed for running for municipal offices. Due to the absence of the town attorney, the issue concerning election workers was tabled until the next meeting.

The annual audit report was also presented and discussed.

The Mayor and Town Council wish to announce that the December meeting has been postponed until December 9.

Deer Park - Nov. 9

Three major items of business were discussed during the monthly meeting of the Deer Park Mayor and Town Council:

1. Consideration was given to replacing the heating system in the old Deer Park Elementary School. Councilman Sowers volunteered to obtain heating specifications for the building which would then be advertised for public bid.

2. Council voted to conduct a public hearing on Thursday, November 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Town Hall for the purpose of receiving citizen input regarding the possibility of adding Maryland television stations to the existing cable system. This additional service could be provided at a rate increase of $1.25 per month. Town residents are urged to attend this meeting and express their views on the matter.

3. Council also discussed the need to hire a town employee. Consideration was given to hiring an individaul on a 30 hour per week basis. Attorney John Toston volunteered to check with the Employment Office while Councilman Mace Madigan offered to discuss the situation with area residents. A recommendation will be submitted during the December meeting.

The Mayor and Council also wish to announce that, effective December 1, trash pick-up will be made only on the first and third Fridays of each month.

Mt. Lake Park - Nov. 12

In addition to regular business items, the following matters were also discussed at the monthly meeting of the Mt. Lake Park Mayor and Town Council:

1. An agreement between the town and the Garrett County Sanitary Commission was signed. The $26,696.56 agreement will cover all operation and maintenance costs of the sewage treatment plant for a period of one year.

2. Morgan France, town engineer, was directed to prepare a state funded Failing Septic Tank application for the Broad Ford Road area. The possibility of securing Appalachian Regional Commission funds for this project was also discussed.

3. The town's annual audit was presented to the Mayor and Council. Included in the report was a comment from the auditor that the town's books were in "excellent condition."

4. Council reviewed a state approved cost overrun on a Program Open Space (POS) project within the town. The acquisition of land for additional POS development was also discussed.

5. A motion was made and approved by Council to purchase candy for Christmas treats from a wholesale dealer. Details of the annual Christmas party for Mt. Lake Park children will be provided later.

Friendsville - Nov. 16

In addition to regular business items, the Friendsville Mayor and Town Cuncil have scheduled interviews with three consulting firms for the purpose of preparing an economic feasibility study for the development of the old Friendsville Elementary School. The interviews will be held during the second week of December. The idea of having open voter registration in the town was also discussed. The town's administrator will provide information on that issue during the next Council meeting.

Grantsville - Nov. 16

The following information was presented during the regular meeting of the Grantsville Mayor and Town Council:

1. Police Chief Frank Wilkins presented a summary of Grantsville's 1980 police report, which included the following arrests and investigations: 15 adults arrested, 21 juveniles arrested, 14 larcenies, three simple assaults, four runaways, two liquor violations, six persons driving while under the influence, 11 breakings and enterings, 26 larcenies and thefts and two drug violations.

2. Area residents appeared before Council to discuss snow removal on privately owned streets located within the corporate limits. While the residents would not agree to deed the street to the town (which is normally required before the town can provide any maintenance activities) they stated that they should be entitled to award was announced and the matter was tabled until a later date.

4. Discussion was also held regarding the appointment of a new Planning Commission chairman. Recommendations will be presented during the next regularly scheduled Council meeting.

Grantsville - Nov. 21

The Grantsville Mayor and Town Council conducted a special meeting on November 10 to discuss progress on the town's sewer project. Also attending was the town's consulting engineer, representatives of the State Department of Health and Mental Hygiene (DHMH) and Wendell Beitzel of the Garrett County Sanitary Commission.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss an October 22 letter from DHMH which rejected the consultant's recommendation for sewage treatment in Grantsville. The basis for rejection as presented by DHMH was due to the fact that the recommended procedure would not meet state discharge requirements. Following a lengthy discussion period, Council agreed to proceed with the consultant's alternative recommendation, which includes construction of a new sewage treatment plant (or possibly extensive rehabilitation of the existing plant) and replacement of all sewer lines in the town. The project is estimated to cost $2.3 million, 87 and one half percent of which can be funded by federal and state grant funds.

Oakland - Nov. 2, 16

by Kathy Railey

Wendell Keaton, Municipal Administrator, informed the Mayor and Town Council at its November 2 meeting that the towns of Mt. Lake Park and Loch Lynn are in favor of a proposed addition of two Maryland networks on the cable television system, offered through Cablentertainment. To obtain the stations all of the towns would have to approve a rate increase of $1.25 per month per user.

Oakland held a public hearing regarding the proposal after several Council members expressed a desire to hear from Oakland citizens before approving the increase, an act provided for in the town's new franchise.

The hearing was held Monday evening, and the majority of opposition dealt with the channels to be deleted (which has not yet been determined) and which channels to install from Baltimore. Many of the comments dealt with personal preference in television programming. Bill Randles, vice president of Cablentertainment, explained the company's intentions at this point to provide more of a variety of programming, and eliminate duplicating stations. He informed the approximate 15 citizens present that a questionnaire will be placed in The Republican newspaper for customers to select changes in broadcasting, and the company would go with the majority.

No decision was made by Council as to whether the addition of Maryland stations will be approved in Oakland. The stations would be transmitted to the Mountaintop via microwave. Randles noted that, if approval is received from all towns, it will be another six months before the new stations can be provided. Also present from Cablentertainment was Sally Fraenkel, Southeastern Marketing Manager.

In other business at the November 2 meeting, Council decided to request an exemption from a state law which requires municipalities to adopt a public ethics law passed by the Public Ethics Commission to prevent conflicts of interest. Keaton explained that the law would require all council members to disclose their income and other personal data. He said all towns in Garrett County are requesting the exemption on the grounds that the law would constitute unreasonable invasion of privacy, it could limit and possibly eliminate the number of people who would run for office, and it is not necessary to preserve the purposes of the law.

Council will hold a special meeting on Monday, November 23, to appoint a temporary replacement for the council seat left vacant by the recent death of M. Paul DeWitt.

It was noted by Council that Linda Hamm, Clerk-Collector, attended a regional meeting on October 13 in Frostburg concerning the Maryland Municipal League health insurance program. On October 21 she attended a Municipal Training Workshop sponsored by the Institute for Governmental Services, which was also held in Frostburg.

SELLER'S AND BUYER'S MARKET

I'm sure you've heard of a "Seller's Market" or "Buyer's Market." Well, don't be confused if you hear them both used at the same time in the same city or town. They often occur simultaneously.

Certain locations in the city may be near depreciating areas. "For Sale" signs will be scattered abundantly throughout these areas. Prices remain level or are descending. A definite buyer's market.

Other sections in the same city display few, if any "For Sale" signs and local newspapers carry ads for "House wanted - Northside" or "Listings wanted - Northside." An excellent example of a buyer's market and seller's market existing simultaneously in the same city.

Whether you're a buyer or a seller, timing and market conditions are vital in your financial planning. Who knows the pulse of the local market best? Your local REALTOR.

"Born Again" Business Directory Draws Fire From B'nai B'rith Director

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The regional director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith says his group opposes a business directory that solicits advertisements from "born again" Christians.

The league plans to request an opinion from Maryland Attorney General Stephen Sachs on whether the directory, "The Shepherd's Guide," violates state law, said Edward Leavy, ADL regional director.

"It is anathema to a pluralistic democratic society," Leavy said. "It is dividing our society. Basically, what it is is saying is that born-agains should do business with born-agains, Jews should do business with Jews, Catholics should do business with Catholics."

Leavy added the ADL would challenge the directory in federal court if Sachs says it does not violate state law.

However, James L. Mann Jr., attorney for J. Douglas Scheidt Jr., publisher of the guide, said the ADL misunderstands the intent of the directory.

Scheidt has published the guide for two years and distributed it free from churches and religious bookstores. The 1981-82 edition, released in August, has a circulation of 40,000.

"It is meant to serve the needs of people who want to use Christian principles in their business and to provide a service for people who are looking for businesses that follow Christian principles," Mann said.

Mann explained the guide is not discriminatory because any merchant may advertise.

Leonard Jed, chairman of the Baltimore Metropolitan ADL, said his group particularly objects to the guide's practice of printing the figure of a shepherd on some of the ads.

The directory's introduction notes the shepherd trademark appears only on the ads of businesses that have signed a pledge saying:

"I have received Jesus Christ as my personal Savior and my desire is to live my life for His glory. I have been born again according to John 3:3 which states, '... except a man to be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God.'

"I pledge to hold the highest biblical code of ethics in my business transactions. It is my ambition to treat my clients with the utmost respect and integrity."

Only one ad appeared in the 1981-82 guide without the symbol.

"Any potential advertiser who didn't want to sign the pledge would be crazy to appear surrounded by all the other ads with the trademark," Leavy said.

He maintained "The Shepherd's Guide" cannot be compared to a publication such as the "Jewish Catalog's Yellow Pages" that lists Jewish services or items provided by any advertiser regardless of religion.

Maryland Charities Cannot Fill Gaps Left By Cancelled Social Programs

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Private charity cannot make up for massive Reagan administration budget cuts in social programs, and shrunken funding may force even the truly needy off the rolls, a House committee was told Tuesday.

Child abuse is up 30 percent this year, infant deaths are sure to rise because of meager medical care and old people are being put into institutions because home care programs are folding, Maryland's state, local and private officials told the Ways and Means Committee.

"We're trying to protect those people who need protection the most, but there is no way we can make up for those cuts," said Democratic Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes.

"We certainly can't turn off the spigot overnight. People are going to suffer. There are going to be people who won't get the medical care they need."

Business has chipped in $500,000 for social programs, but public and private officials said that cannot make up for losses that Hughes estimated will total $250 million statewide.

"We're not going to be able to meet our own needs, much less keep up with the changes in federal policy," said Alan Cooper, executive director of the area United Way.

"There is a potential for irreparable damage," said Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer, whose city is so poor that only one third of the residents pay taxes. He urged the committee to protect "areas of neef" from budget slashes.

Schaefer, a Democrat, said 14,000 subsidized jobs were lost and 10,000 people kicked off welfare. In human terms, he said, loss of community centers will mean many old people will "go back to their rooms and sit and look at the wall."

The Democratic-run committee — with no Republicans present — held a three-hour hearing at the high-ceilinged city hall that was billed as an attempt to gauge the effect of the GOP administration's budget and tax cuts.

Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said later the hearing was "very enlightening. I wish those people who were voting for tpe budget cuts would come. Maybe they're embarrassed to come."

But Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, cautioned during the hearing that the nation still faces a huge budget deficit, and "I don't think it's enough to say, 'Don't cut me,' when there's a national problem."

Charles Buck, Maryland's health and mental health director, said cuts already enacted or contemplated "will injure such highly vulnerable groups as low birth weight babies, retarded people livin; in the community, pregnant teen-agers, alcoholics and drug addicts, handicapped children and poor people in general."

Because of cuts in Baltimore's program for borderline-poor pregnant women whose babies run a high risk of having birth defects, officials will not be able to locate high-risk mothers, up to 1,000 needy women and children will be denied help, and those who are helped will get basic care only and not vital followup, he said.

Blaming the cuts, Kalman Hettleman, state welfare director, said child abuse cases are up 30 percent this year, and child abuse deaths are already double last year's total.

Bernard Manekin, a corporation executive and chairman of the Greater Baltimore Committee, said business is underwriting programs to weatherize homes, promote fire safety and find winter clothing for the old and handicapped.

Bauman Prepares For Comeback; Will Seek Former Congressional Seat

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — Former Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., ousted from office following a sex and drinking scandal last year, almost certainly will announce plans next week to try to regain the congressional seat he lost, Republican officials said Tuesday.

Bauman, an Eastern Shore conservative who was appointed and then elected to three terms representing Maryland's 1st Congressional District, scheduled a news conference Nov. 23 in Easton to announce his 1982 election plans.

"At that time, I will issue a statement regarding my decision whether to seek election to the House seat I held for more than seven years. Afterwards, I will answer questions."

Republicans who spoke with Bauman over the weekend at a GOP state convention in Gaithersburg, however, said there is little doubt what Bauman will say.

"He's going to announce he's going to run for Congress. He told me that," said one Republican state legislator who asked not to be identified.

"I think he's going to run," said Maryland Republican Party Chairman Allan C. Levey. "I think Bob Bauman is at peace with himself and he wants to be in Congress. He knows it will be difficult because now he's running against an incumbent (Democrat Roy Dyson)."

"He feels he can win, but that he can also handle anything else that comes along," Levey added.

Dyson defeated Bauman last November after the incumbent was charged in October 1980 with soliciting sex from a 16-year-old boy and explained shortly before the election that he suffered from alcoholism and had homosexual tendencies, although he said he was not a homosexual.

No sooner had Bauman scheduled his news conference than another Eastern Shore Republican, former state Sen. Porter Hopkins, said he not only intended to run against Bauman in next September's GOP primary, but also intended to win the nomination.

"He's going to get beaten," Hopkins said of Bauman. Asked who would beat him, Hopkins replied, "You're talking to him."

In addition to next Monday's news conference, Bauman also scheduled a Sunday afternoon reception in Easton for friends and supporters where he presumably will tell them what he plans to tell the press the following day.

Hopkins, who for two terms in the House of Delegates and one in the Senate represented a district that included portions of Baltimore, Carroll and Harford County district, retired from State House politics in 1974 and moved to the Eastern Shore.

He said he planned to make a formal announcement of his candidacy soon, probably before year's end.

A Dyson spokesman said the St. Mary's County Democrat is expected to make his own reelection plans public within the next week or so.

"He (Dyson) has no comment at this time, but he will be preparing a press release in the next few days," said spokesman Steven Scott.

Howard Co. Authorities Cannot Identify Remains Of Woman

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (UPI) — Authorities may never know the cause of death of a woman whose skeletal remains were found in a wooded area in Howard County, investigators said Tuesday.

Police said the woman, who was reported missing six years ago, was identified as Danice A. Smutny, 40, of Towson, Md.

Assistant medical examiner Dr. Margaret Korrell identified Mrs. Smutny with dental records and help from a University of Maryland dental school expert.

Mrs. Smutny was last seen Nov. 19, 1975 when she dropped her daughters off at the Towson branch of the county public library. Her husband reported her missing, police said.

But investigators explained they cannot determine a cause of death because of the advanced deterioration of the body. Her remains were found last Tuesday by a survey team.

Ms. Korrell said the bones had decalcified too far for her to determine an accurate cause of death.

"We are still looking at the past history, but we are unable to say whether the death was natural, a homicide, suicide or accidental," she said.

Ms. Korrell added she was able to identify the body through dental records because "bones will eventually decay... but teeth will last almost forever.

"They are as reliable as fingerprints. The shape of the teeth and position in the jawbone are unique to each person."

Investigators said there was also enough color in the fabric of the woman's clothing to match it with the clothes Mrs. Smutny was last seen wearing.

The day after she was reported missing, Howard County police found the woman's car parked near a church on Route 108 near Clarksville. Her body was discovered in brush about a mile from the auto.

Police said the car was locked and the woman's purse was on the front seat.

Hughes Will Call For Mandatory Jail Sentences For Handgun Violations

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — Gov. Harry Hughes not only may sponsor legislation calling for mandatory sentencing for handgun violations, but may also make proposals "more dramatic and effective" than that, an aide said Tuesday.

Press Secretary Lou Panos said in addition to the handgun legislation Hughes will probably submit to the 1982 General Assembly, the governor may also propose ways of attacking illiteracy and drug abuse as they relate to violent crimes.

"He believes some handgun legislation would help control street crime in Maryland as it has apparently done in Massachusetts. But this is but one element in an overall criminal justice package," Panos said. "The others include some that might be even mor3 dramatic and effective than this."

Panos would not elaborate other than to say the proposals involved illiteracy and drug abuse.

"There has not been enough discussion (within Hughes' staff on the proposals) to generate agreement," he said.

Panos confirmed that Hughes is leaning toward introduction of handgun legislation modeled after a Massachusetts law that has been credited with reducing handgun violence in that state.

Under the proposal now being drafted, persons caught carrying a handgun without a license would face a mandatory one-year prison sentence.

"This is not a knee-jerk reaction that will get the NRA (National Rifle Association) down on your a—," said Panos. "The target of this proposal is the street criminal."

Panos said Hughes' staff is trying to draft an exception to the mandatory sentencing bill that would permit legitimate hunters and sportsmen, businessmen in hazardous occupations, or homeowners in high crime areas to be exempted.

"I think the climate for enactment (of gun control legislation) is more favorable now because of the greater public awareness for the need for action," Panos said.

But he said the gun control bill will probably be only a part of Hughes' overall criminal justice package, some of which may take the form of proposed changes in regulations rather than new laws.

Maryland has required since 1972 anyone wishing to carry a loaded handgun to obtain a permit from the state police. Violations of that law were punishable by up to 30 days in jail or a $250 fine, although critics complained even those penalties were often suspended.

Cooperative Suspect Flees Bank Job And Runs Into Federal Courthouse

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Authorities said a bank robbery suspect made the FBI's job a little easier than usual Tuesday — he fled into the U.S. Courthouse where he was arrested.

The FBI said a man entered a branch of the Union Trust Co. downtown only minutes before the arrest and presented a teller with a note demanding money.

The teller obliged. But when the bandit left the bank, a dye exploded in the money and he began to run, authorities said. An undetermined amount of money was recovered.

Witnesses on the street advised the FBI that they saw the bandit run into the courthouse, located several blocks away, and authorities launched a floor-by-floor search of the building.

The FBI said Bryson Harris, 31, of Baltimore, was arrested in the U.S. Parole Office and charged with bank robbery.

"He was on federal parole stemming from a 1976 bank robbery conviction in New York," said an FBI spokesman. "I guess he was familiar with the building."

Harris was held in a cell in the building, then appeared before U.S. Magistrate Frederick Smalkin, who ordered him held in lieu of $7,500 bond.

State Police Black Troopers Head Suspended

PIKESVILLE, Md. (UPI) — State police officials have suspended the president of the Black Troopers Coalition in the wake of charges he took $345 from the group's account, police said Tuesday.

Cpl. Charles A. English surrendered at state police headquarters Monday. A warrant charging him with theft had been issued for his arrest, McCarthy said.

English earlier had resigned from the department, effective Friday, when he was accused of unrelated departmental violations. He is a 10-year veteran and a supervisor in the College Park barrack.

An investigation was begun when other members of the coalition reported "questionable financial transactions," McCarthy said.

Four checks totaling $345 allegedly had been improperly drawn on the coalition account, he said.

English, 31, of Baltimore, appeared before a court commissioner in Owings Mills Monday and was released on his own recognizance.

McCarthy said English was accused by his superiors Nov. 4 of "infractions of rules" involving overtime logs and not receiving authorization for additional duty hours.

Navy Midshipmen Show Support By Running To Army-Navy Game

ANNAPOLIS (UPI) — A group of Naval Academy midshipmen are so eager to see Navy's football team beat Army this year that they have decided to run all the way to Philadelphia to prove it.

About 40 to 45 members of the academy's 13th Company plan to stage a foot relay from Annapolis to Philadelphia beginning sometime around noon Friday, Dec. 4, the day before the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia's Veterans' Stadium.

"It's just for support and spirit for a Navy win," said Midshipman Tim Thomas, a senior from Westminster, Md., who organized the run.

The mids plan to run about five miles each with fresh teams of four midshipmen taking over the run every two-and-a-half hours.

The 160-mile distance is expected to be covered in 20 to 21 hours, said school spokesman Dennis Boxx.

"They will run right through the heart of Baltimore and of Philadelphia," said Boxx.

Thomas said some of the runners will go on to Philadelphia once their portion of the relay is over, but others have Saturday classes and will have to return to Annapolis.

He said about 10 cars owned by the midshipmen involved will be used to shuttle the runners back and forth.

"I'm sure Navy's going to win it," he said of the game. "It's going to be 82-0, I hear."

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is taking his proposal for reduced U.S. and Soviet nuclear arms in Europe straight to those who would be most affected by it — Europeans.

In a speech scheduled for 10 a.m. EST today, Reagan will propose cutting the number of U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons on the continent to near zero. The speech will be carried live in the United States and beamed by satellite to several nations in Europe.

WASHINGTON — John W. Hinckley Jr., President Reagan's accused assailant, is unable to recall hanging himself, but his other mental capabilities seem intact, doctors say.

Hinckley will have to be tested to determine if he suffered long-lasting brain damage when he hung in his cell for three to five minutes Sunday before being rescued by U.S. marshals, a Justice Department spokesman said Tuesday.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan says the fact that more men and women re-enlisted and koined the armed forces during the past year than in any year since the draft ended in 1973 is proof the all volunteer force is working.

The Pentagon, in releasing the figures Tuesday, said the percentage of high school graduates in the services reached an all-time high in fiscal 1981 — 81 percent of total manpower.

HOUSTON — City Controller kathy Whitmire, with support ranging from conservative businessmen to the gay community, overwhelmed her law-and-order opponent to bekome the first woman mayor of the nation's fifth largest city.

With all 360 precincts counted early today, Mrs. Whitmire, 35, had received 171,022 votes, or 62.4 percent of the votes. Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard had 10 ,435 or 37.5 percent.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Britain ordered 600 more troops into Northern Ireland today and authorities canceled police leave to counter a rising backlash over the IRA killing of a Protestant member of Parliament.

The outlawed Irish Republican Army appeared to be stepping up its killings of security personnel and Protestant leaders planned marches to paralyze the provincial government to protest London's failure to smash the IRA.

"I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face"

Bob Eberly, Swing Vocalist, Dies At 65

GLEN BURNIE, Md. (UPI) — Bob Eberly, a Swing Era vocalist who popularized such songs as "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face" and "Green Eyes," has died of cancer at his daughter's home. He was 65.

Eberly's 45-year career, including a stint as singer with the Dorsey Brothers, included concerts and nightclub performances across the United States and abroad.

Other songs Eberly helped make famous included "Tangerine," "The Breeze and I," "Yours," and "Blue Champagne." Relatives said Tuesday recordings of those songs and others he performed each sold more than two million copies.

Eberly's last concert, about 18 months ago at the Top of the World in Disney World in Orlando, Fla., came only weeks before he underwent surgery for removal of his right lung.

Chemotherapy, used to treat cancer that had spread to other organs, contributed to four heart attacks, relatives said.

Eberly had planned to spend a few weeks at the Glen Burnie home of one of his two daughters, Kathleen Wheeler, and died there Tuesday.

Eberly and his wife of 40 years, the former Florine Callahan, had lived in Great Neck, N.Y., since the mid-1960s.

A native of Mechanicsville, N.Y., Eberly was 17 when he began singing with one of the biggest of Big Bands, the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra. When the two brothers split some years later, Eberly stayed with Jimmy Dorsey. Tommy Dorsey hired a promising young singer named Frank Sinatra.

On radio and later on television, Eberly was a regular guest on shows hosted by Perry Como and Arthur Godfrey.

He recorded "Green Eyes" with an orchestra and Helen O'Connell, Tommy Dorsey's best-known female singer. They tried to arrange a meeting at least once a year whenever concert tours permitted.

Eberly was an amateur artist, cartoonist and gourmet cook.

In addition to his wife and daughter, Eberly is survived by another daughter, Rene M. Eberly, of Hicksville, N.Y., one son, Bob Eberly Jr., of Greenwich, Conn. He is also survived by six brothers and sisters.

Funeral services will be private.

Hopkins Will Build New Telescope To Study Halley's Comet In 1982

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A Johns Hopkins University scientist has signed a federal contract to design and build an ultraviolet telescope for observing Halley's Comet on a 1985 flight of the space shuttle, the school says.

The contract to develop the talescope, awarded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, is worth $5.9 million, the university said.

Dr. Arthur F. Davidsen, an astrophysicist will develop the 36-inch, which will be named the Hopkins Ultraviolet Telescope.

The comet, last seen from Earth in 1910, is expected to become visible again during 1985-86.

The instrument will be designed to observe light that cannot be seen by the naked eye.

Davidsen said the telescope would allow scientists to observe the amounts of gases present in or near interplanetary objects.

Cable TV Selection Announced

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (UPI) — A divided Prince George's County Council voted Tuesday to award the county's two cable television franchises to Storer Cable Communications and MetroVision of Prince George's County, Inc.

Storer, a Miami-based firm that said it will provide an 82-channel cable at a cost to subscribers of about $7 a month for basic service, will get the franchise for the northern half of the county.

MetroVision, with home offices in Atlanta, promised a 112-channel service at a basic cost of $5 a month in the southern half of the county.

The awards now go to County Executive Lawrence Hogan Jr. for action. Both firms said that if Hogan approves the awards they could begin service in six to eight months.

Quality Of Forestlands May Be Improved By Cutting Firewood

by Michael R. Gregory
Forest Naturalist
Maryland Forest Service

As demand for firewood grows, the Maryland Forest Service reminds Garrett County woodland owners that the quality of their forestland can be improved by cutting firewood.

The demand for fuelwood has created an opportunity for landowners to improve the quality of their forest while providing a needed product. Although the lack of previous forest management has left many crooked, diseased and generally low quality trees in the woodlot, they are potentially good trees for firewood. This timber stand improvement effort will leave the straight, healthy and desirable trees free to grow and usable for other forest products.

A young forest stand starts out with many more trees than will survive to maturity. Most of the young trees will die off slowly over the life of the stand. Thinning out the undesirable trees while the stand is young, 4 to 10 inches in diameter at 4½ feet above the ground, gives the better trees more room to grow.

When thinning a young stand, select "crop trees" and remove their competition. A crop tree should be straight and tall and free of defects. Crop trees are the best trees of the most valuable species in the stand. After selecting the crop trees, every effort sould be made not to damage them while cutting down the others.

Trees in direct competition with crop trees, that is, those touching the crown, should be cut first. Undesirables that should be removed are easy to recognize and include dead, diseased and crooked trees. Dead trees take up valuable space and should be cut unless they have a nest or animal den in them.

Deformed or diseased trees are those that are crooked or have large low branches. Clumps of trees that have sprouted from an old stump and trees with breaks in the bark, holes or rot can be cut. Large, overmature "wolf" trees take up more than their share of growing space and should be removed also. If you don't have use for all the wood you should cut, remove the trees in the worst condition first.

Proper management techniques can improve your woodlot and provide you with firewood at the same time. It can be done on a few acres or many. Contact the Maryland Forest Service office at Mt. Nebo (334-3296) for further information about improving your woodland by cutting firewood. If your are interested in selling firewood from your woodlot, ask about the forest products operator license that is required for fuelwood operators.

GUESS WHO BEATS DEUTZ, DEERE, IH, FIAT, MF, WHITE, CASE & FORD FOR BEST TORQUE & FUEL ECONOMY?

The Allis-Chalmers 6080 with 83.66 PTO HP* has the best fuel economy and best torque rise at 27%.

PTO HP*	83.66	63.80
Gal./HPhr	.0599	.0633
HPhr./Gal.	16.68	15.82
Torque Rise	27%	35%

The Allis-Chalmers 6060 with 63.80 PTO HP* has the best torque rise at 35%.

With a rating of 35% torque rise the 6060 outperforms the Deutz, Deere, IH, MF, Fiat and Case tractors. The 6060 has the best torque rise in its class. And very good fuel economy, too.

*Manufacturer's maximum observed PTO horsepower at rated engine speed.

The 6080 and 6060 tractors deliver the best of both worlds. High torque rise and low fuel usage.

It's the kind of balance that comes from an Allis-Chalmers four cylinder, direct-injection diesel engine. Turbocharged in the 6060's, turbocharged and intercooled in the 6080's. Transfer this high-performance power into pull with a 12-speed transmission in the 6080's and an 8-speed in the 6060's. Each is synchronized for easy shifting with the right speed to take on any job. For dependability, there are large planetary final drives, wet disc brakes, mechanical differential lock, and a big capacity open-center hydraulic system.

See your Allis-Chalmers dealer for the complete facts and figures on how the two-wheel drive or four-wheel drive 6080 and 6060 tractors can outperform the competition.

Old Idea- New Setting

When the Pilgrims held their first Thanksgiving celebration it wasn't a new idea. The idea was as old as man's awareness of his dependence on God.

But it was a new setting. A group of people far from home, barely settled on a strange shore, surrounded by dangers real and imagined, facing their first New England winter. A remarkable time and place to say "Thank You, God."

Whenever earnest men and women pause to express gratitude to God it's an old idea. But the setting is always new. For wherever we are, whatever the circumstances surrounding our lives, our faith reaches out to the Almighty — realizing anew his Power, his Love, saying "Thank You, God."

Worship with your neighbors this week.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE WE STILL "PLAYING CHURCH"?
November 22, 1981

Background Scripture:
Ephesians 4.

Devotional Reading:
Colossians 2: 8-15.

I don't know about you, but when I read the fourth chapter of Ephesians, I feel a deep sense of shame. The words are beautiful, but their power to judge us is fantastic. You don't even have to read the whole chapter to know what I mean:

" . . . forbearing one another in love, eager to maintain the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace . . . " (4: 2, 3)

"There is one body and one Spirit, . . . one hope . . . one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of us all . . . " (4: 5, 6)

" . . . the whole body, joined and knit together by every joint . . . makes bodily growth and upbuilds itself in love" (4: 16)

"Let all bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor and slander be put away from you, with all malice, and be kind to one another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, as God in Christ forgave you" (4: 31, 32)

No Longer Children

Read each of those passages along with your daily newspaper and you cannot escape the terrible knowledge that Christ's people on earth are projecting anything but the image of the Church described in Ephesians. "Maintain the unity of the Spirit"? What unity? "Be kind to one another"? No, Christians are not kind to one another, they are contentious, judgmental, and devisive. "There is one body and one Spirit"? Hardly! There are many bodies, and it would seem, all contending that they alone possess the one Spirit.

Oh, to be sure, sometimes the Presbyterians, Methodists and U.C.C.'s get together for a service, or sit together with the Episcopalians and the Lutherans in a council of churches. Yes, and sometimes the Pentecostals sit down with the Baptists and the Church of God acknowledges the Nazarenes. And Roman Catholics and Protestants have buried the hatchet, haven't they? (— except in Northern Ireland, where they're burying one another).

The Truth In Love

But if you think that's what Ephesians 4 is all about, no wonder we're so divided. Ephesians 4 is speaking of a unity and love that does not issue into constant conflict and division. Ephesians 4 is the antithesis of Christians attacking each other, impugning each other's faith, deriding each other's efforts, and denouncing each other's discipleship.

The writer of Ephesians calls us to "mature manhood" (personhood) "so that we may no longer be children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine . . . " (4: 13, 14). But, until we learn to accept our unity in Christ we will still be children "playing church."

ALL DRUGS EVENTUALLY LOSE THEIR POTENCY

Exposure to heat, dampness, or the sun can do quick damage. Medicines given by a dropper are subject to contamination each time the dropper is re-inserted into the bottle.

Follow these general rules. Most opened liquids should be destroyed after a few weeks. Ointments last about six months and tablets and capsules about one year. Any medicine that changes color, develops a sediment or appears to have a mold should be carefully destroyed. Do not throw discarded medicines in the trash can to tempt children. Empty contents first.

Homemaker Career Program Official To Be In Friendsville

Barbara Carl, administrative assistant of the Homemaker Career Opportunities Program of Garrett Community College, will be in the Friendsville area on Monday, November 23, to meet with anyone interested in learning more about the free career counseling services of the Homemaker Career Opportunities Program. Mrs. Carl has made arrangements to be at the brick building next to Yough Motors from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. on that day.

"Many people find themselves in a transition period of their lives due to separation, divorce, widowhood, or the economic crunch," Mrs. Carl said. "These individuals may need to go to work but lack the skills or self-confidence necessary to reach their employment goals."

Mrs. Carl will be available to offer guidance regarding career decisions and answer questions that interested persons may have regarding the opportunities available through the displaced homemaker project.

Persons interested in learning more about the program or participating in its free career counseling should arrange to meet with Mrs. Carl in Friendsville on November 23 or call 334-9184 for further information.

Friendly persuasion.

What would it take to persuade you to join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds?

We could appeal to your patriotism. Or we could point out the dangers of not preparing for the future.

Instead, we'll just point out in a very friendly way that Bonds are one of the easiest ways to save. Even if saving has always been difficult for you. The Payroll Savings Plan sets aside a little from each paycheck for and Savings Bonds. And that's a nice way of saving, because you'll hardly miss it. But if you need it, it'll be there. Just like a friend.

Take stock in America.

U.S. Savings Bonds

When you put part of your money into U.S. Savings Bonds, you're helping to build a brighter future for your country and for yourself.

Celebrating 16 years of 'Days of Our Lives'

By Nancy M. Reichardt

NEW YORK — "Days of Our Lives" recently celebrated 16 years of broadcasting on NBC. The entire cast and production personnel gathered for a private party to commemorate the event at the studios in Burbank, Calif.

Actors Macdonald Carey, Frances Reid (Tom and Alice Horton) and John Clarke (Mickey Horton), and executive producer Betty Corday have been with the series since its inception in 1965.

Said Carey, "This is all family to me. We all spend more time here on stage than we do any other place. It may sound corny, but we all love each other."

Meanwhile, there's a host of newcomers to "DOOL," and they include Benjamin Stewart as Wyland, Gerald York as Louie, Conrad Dunne as Nick, Diane Sommerfield as Renee, Cynthia Dozier as Lizzie Masters, James Reynolds as Abe Carver, Kathleen Fiscus as Gretchen and Alex Rollan as Andre. You may remember Alex as Vince Holliday on "The Young and the Restless."

Playing the role of an abandoned daughter has not been easy for Robin Lamy (Sofia Koracken on "As the World Turns"), or for her real-life mom. It seems that back in Robin's hometown some residents can't separate the actress' real mom from her "ATWT" mom, so they've been phoning Robin's Texas-based mom to ask her how she can treat her daughter that way.

Well, we'd like to tell those Texas viewers that Robin says her real mom is "the best mother in the whole world."

Zsa Zsa Gabor

It used to be that soap actors dreamed of becoming big name stars and TV stars, using their daytime roles as stepping stones to the "top" of their profession. But now the tables have turned and we are seeing more and more "big name" stars doing guest spots on soaps. The latest comp was the addition of Zsa Zsa Gabor to a five-show run on "As the World Turns." Miss Gabor will be playing Lydia Marlow.

(Have a question about soap operas? Write Nancy Reichardt at 200 Park Avenue, Room 602, New York, NY 10166.)

TV PEOPLE

One youngster, digging into her pocket money, got enough to mail him a bar of soap (with which he bathed). Another girl dispatched a gold chain (which he wears). Every present is an expression of love. And John Schneider loves them right back.

Schneider is the blue-eyed, blond-haired Bo Duke of "The Dukes of Hazzard." He's also becoming something of a recording star. And now he's made his first television movie, "Dream House," which will air Saturday, Nov. 28 on CBS.

"Dream House" is a light-hearted drama chronicling the trauma and triumphes of a young man who attempts to build his dream house in a New York City ghetto. Marisa Hennier also stars.

John Schneider

"I'm very fortunate," Schneider says, "to be doing what I love doing every day. Most people can't say that.

"I happen to be an actor. But a doctor or a fireman — anyone can feel the same way. That's what I try to get over to kids. When they say to me, 'Wow! You're rich. You're good,' I say, 'Everybody who's working toward a goal is in the same boat.'

"It takes just as much work — far more work, in fact — to be a successful doctor or lawyer. I try to make that clear to the kids I talk to."

And he does talk to them. Once, in Tulsa, Schneider spent a whole morning and afternoon signing autographs on behalf of a children's hospital. That night, he sang in front of 12,000 people. On his way home, he'd put a check for "about $700 more than anything I've ever made" in them, he popped himself up against a wall and signed his name until 4:00 in the morning.

It all gives Schneider a terrific kick. And it's the reason he loves the business so much.

"When I first started out," he says, "I used to entertain sick kids. I was 16 or 11 years old, but I could see that I was capable of making another kid in a wheelchair smile. It was probably the only time he smiled that day. Or that week. I said to myself, 'This is what I want to do with my life.' And, so far, I've been able to do just that."

TV TATTLE

Peanuts holiday

The Peanuts gang add their own special flavor to America's oldest holiday when Charlie Brown and his peers get together to celebrate "A Charlie Brown Thanksgiving" to be rebroadcast Monday, Nov. 23 on CBS. Artist-writer Charles M. Schulz won an Emmy award for the special in 1973.

The story, which is concocted around a rather novel Thanksgiving meal of popcorn, potato chips, jelly beans, buttered toast and ice-cream served at Charlie Brown's backyard Pog-Pog table, starts when Peppermint Patty invites herself and assorted others to Charlie's place.

The hospitable little star is too polite or wishy-washy as his Peanut pers call him — to refuse her so, with the help of Linus, Snoopy, Woodstock, Charlie Brown develops the most sorry Thanksgiving menu since 1621.

Not only do the Peanut guests have a happy, haphazard garden party of sorts, they also discover that the holiday is for thinking and thanking, as well as for eating.

Muppet award

Jim Henson, creator of "The Muppets," has been selected for a 1981 Personal Achievement award and CBS' "Archie Bunker's Place" has been chosen as the best national television entertainment program in the 16th annual Gabriel Awards Competition, conducted by Unda-USA, the national association of Catholic broadcasters and allied communicators.

The Gabriel Awards are presented annually to outstanding television and radio stations, programs, spots and individuals best exemplifying the broadcast art and committing to a deeper understanding of the human values that will enhance the lives of viewers and listeners.

Mary Poppins magic

The 1965 Walt Disney musical fantasy "Mary Poppins," starring Julie Andrews, Dick Van Dyke, David Tomlinson and Glynis Johns, will be broadcast for the first time on network television, Sunday, Nov. 22 on CBS.

Miss Andrews was awarded an Oscar as best actress for her portrayal of the magical governess who brings enchantment and joy to a stuffy London family. The movie won four other Academy awards, including two Oscars to Richard B. and Robert M. Sherman for best original musical score and for best song ("Chim-Chim Cheree"), and Oscars for best film editing and best special visual effects. The film was nominated for 13 Academy awards in all.

Frank Sinatra

Blue eyes medley

Frank Sinatra will star in a television special based entirely on selections from the more than 100 albums he has recorded during 42 years in show business. "Sinatra, The Man and His Music," airs on NBC Sunday, Nov. 22.

A 50-piece orchestra including 30 strings will accompany Sinatra throughout the show. Count Basie will be one of the performers joining Sinatra.

Sinatra's 65th birthday and 40th anniversary in show business were celebrated Dec. 12, 1979 at a Caesars Palace "love-in" for the singer. The event, at which Sinatra was toasted by more than 1,000 friends, was an NBC special, "Sinatra: The First Forty Years," which aired Jan. 3, 1980.

MARY POPPINS (Julie Andrews) and her friend Bert (Dick Van Dyke) watch the dancing chimney sweeps in a scene from Walt Disney's musical fantasy classic, "Mary Poppins," to be broadcast for the first time on network television Sunday, Nov. 22 on CBS.

CINDY SAYS

New role for Raquel; New flick for Moore

By Cindy Adams

NEW YORK — Raquel Welch is in New York and she's been knocking the big orange, saying she's glad to get out of there. She's stepping in for Lauren Bacall, for a couple of weeks, in the Broadway show "Woman of the Year". Dudley Moore is starring in a movie, "Romantic Comedy." He'll have the love interest. Mithun Berle, Frances Langford, Bob and Ray made it into the National Broadcasters Hall of Fame this year. The star of "Chanel Solitaire," Marie-France Pisier, is back in France playing her next role, the Russian countess in Thomas Mann's "The Magic Mountain."

Loretta Swit

Loretta Swit. "I'm Polish and Polish jokes bother me. We should go back to elephant jokes. I've never seen an elephant whose nose was out of joint."

Grace Kelly

On ABC's new special "Night of Stars," Grace Kelly and Celeste Holm were reunited for the first time since '56 when they worked together in "High Society". Bjorn Borg is a fan of Peter Ustinov. Ustinov also plays tennis but that isn't why Borg is his fan. Borg's a freak for the TV series Ustinov emcees, "Orient: The New Frontier". Jackie Gleason and Mac Davis star in "The Next Song," which is filming in Santa Cruz. The new movie is written by the author of "The Sting". Richard Harris's "Camelot" will appear on Home Box Office.

STARVIEW

Series that succeed in different countries

By Ruth Thompson

"It doesn't travel well" is a common explanation for why some wines, so pleasant in their home region, are never distributed widely, while others are shipped halfway around the globe.

The same analogy holds for television shows. And David McCallum, who first came to television popularity in "The Man from U.N.C.L.E.," has worked in the past two years in two such series.

Sandy-haired, handsome McCallum, who lives in New York with his wife, Katherine, and their two young children, says "I crossed the Atlantic 20 times to be with my family weekends while I was doing an adventure series, 'Sapphire and Steel' in England. And no, I do not expect it will ever come to the United States. It was somehow very specifically for home consumption in Britain."

But another one that McCallum thought daring production, would be limited to its European run is turning into a highly suitable show for America. It is the three-part miniseries adaption of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Kidnapped," starring McCallum as Alan Stewart.

McCallum explains, "Once I saw it edited I was pleased with what they pulled off. You see it was a French-German-English international coproduction. Except for some long shots, most of the outdoor scenes were shot in Wales because most of Scotland was already under snow. Many of the interiors were done in Bristol which, by the way, is an absolutely beautiful city.

He is also pleased that the first U.S. showing of "Kidnapped," "is going directly to the new technology — cable." (It is the new Kraft offering on Superstation WTBS with satellite transmission to 196 markets on Dec. 1, 2 and 3).

On the whole, it seems, drama travels better than comedy. Jean Marsh, the co-creator of the British-made "Upstairs, Downstairs" as well as an actor in the series (Rose the parlor maid), said she was baffled, and happily so, that the lighter moments of the widely exported series survived all finishers and was as much a hit in Finland as in England.

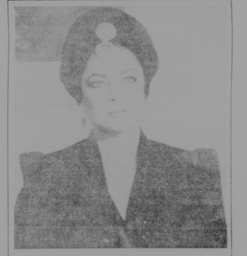
Australia's popular television comedian, Paul Horgan thinks that derives with definite story lines probably have an edge for world-wide distribution.

His own specialty is skits — but both he and Post-Newsweek Distributions are optimistic about his series catching on in the United States (where superstation WOR has already booked it).

He says a few expressions that get guffaws Down Under are big zeros for Americans. The solution: Edit out the purely local jokes.

As to the rest, no U.S. or Canadian viewer needs a colloquial Aussie phrase book. The "Paul Horgan Show" resolutely spoofs the bulk of Australia's most popular series, miniseries and specials — and most of them are imports, from the United States ("Star Trek," "Starsky & Hutch," "That's Incredible" and "Hawaii Five-O."

THURSDAY



International screen star Elizabeth Taylor makes her last guest appearance as the rich widow Helena Cassadine on "General Hospital," Thursday, Nov. 19 on ABC.

MacNeil/Lehrer goal: the most complete story

By Peter Meade

Now in its sixth year, the "MacNeil/Lehrer Report" is one of the most popular regularly scheduled programs on PBS.

Robert "Robin" MacNeil and Jim Lehrer devote 30 minutes each night to one topic from the day's headlines. By focusing on a single topic, "The MacNeil/Lehrer Report" gets below the surface only scratched by network news. Attracting a nightly audience of over 4 million viewers, the show has proved to the major networks that a one-subject-a-night news program can succeed.

"The networks sense that news must be more than a headline service for the public," MacNeil says.

MacNeil and Lehrer's brand of in-depth, at-length journalism doesn't give viewers indigestion from taking in too much news at once or telling them what to think.

"Our job is to help inform the people and to get the point across," Lehrer explains. "It is not hard to remain neutral. My views are irrelevant.

"Reporting is still and will always be reporting," Lehrer says. "Who, what, where, when, why, how remains the same. There has to be more news, more information, more debate."

Lehrer believes that to achieve more thorough coverage the news may soon be reported in "magazine style" with programs concentrating on specific interests.

Robert MacNeil (l.) and Jim Lehrer

"In this electronic age," MacNeil adds, "television should explore what it can do beyond conventional methods. Our show makes the viewer the reporter, editor and part of the process."

Al Vecchione, a 20-year NBC veteran and executive producer of the "MacNeil/Lehrer Report" since 1976, says, "Robin and Jim share the same journalistic philosophy, believing in a fair, intelligent treatment of stories."

MacNeil says, "It is up to television to offer a wide variety of things to watch, including a wide variety of news. What people watch is their choice. We're giving them something to choose."

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Val Carew

SMITH BOY — I am writing to ask if you can give me some information about William Smith, who has been on TV a lot, including being in "Rich Man, Poor Man." Is he married? What else do you know about him? I think he is very good. — H.J.J., Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

Smith first came to the attention of American TV audiences as one of the stars of the western series "Laredo." He is married (his wife is French-born), and at one time he had plans to go into the diplomatic corps. He is an intellectual although often he is not cast that way because he has muscles, too. "Out here, if you have muscles they figure you can't also have brains," he once told me. He speaks fluent Russian, among other accomplishments. He and his wife have no children.

Lauren Bacall

LOVED THE BOOK — I have just finished reading Lauren Bacall's book and she made me feel I was living her life along with her. Where can I write to her? I also hope some of her old movies with Humphrey Bogart will be on TV again. — Jackiline Susan Wills, Bermuda Dunes, Calif.

Bacall has been appearing on Broadway in "Woman of the Year," a hit musical. Write her in care of Peter Witt Associates, 17 West 57th St., New York, NY 10019. As for her movies, keep watching. Those wonderful old movies still do show up on TV. Sometimes, local stations even have "festivals" with a week devoted to a certain star or stars. It could be Bogart and Bacall soon.

DUMMY TIME — Could you put me in touch with the wonderful ventriloquist Paul Winchell? I want to ask him something about his lovable dummy Knucklehead Smith. — Ida Ziegler, Toms River, N.J.

Write Paul at 14136 Janna Way, Sylmar, CA 91342.

Carol Burnett

DISAGREEMENT — I have had a disagreement with someone who says that Vicki Lawrence is Carol Burnett's sister. I always thought she was Steve Lawrence's daughter. Who is right? — Wondering, Glendive, Mt.

Neither one of you. Vicki is not related to either Carol or Steve. She originally got her job playing Carol's sister on Carol's variety show because she looked like Carol and had written her a letter to that effect, enclosing a picture.

(Do you have a question about TV? Write Val Carew at 200 Park Avenue, Room 602, New York, NY 10166.)

Friendly persuasion.

What would it take to persuade you to join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds?

We could appeal to your patriotism. Or we could point out the dangers of not preparing for the future.

Instead, we'll just point out in a very friendly way that Bonds are one of the easiest ways to save. Even if saving has always been difficult for you. The Payroll Savings Plan sets aside a little from each paycheck toward Savings Bonds. And that's a nice way of saving, because you'll hardly miss it. But if you need it, it'll be there. Just like a friend.

Take stock in America.

UNITED STATES SAVINGS BONDS

When you put part of your savings into U.S. Savings Bonds you're helping to build a brighter future for your country and for yourself.

Teacher Talk

by Cindy Downton

U.S. Senator Paul Sarbanes was unanimously recommended for reendorsement by Maryland teachers at the MSTA convention held October 15 and 16 in Baltimore. The Senator told members that he is "deeply concerned about the kinds of attitudes prevailing on the part of this Administration." He explained, when all factors are considered, the Reagan Administration is seeking to cut federal funds which would result in federal reductions, "particularly in the areas of education and health . . . of 30 to 40 to 50 percent in programs." Senator Sarbanes was visiting Garrett County on Saturday, Nov. 7 at the Grantsville firehall where many teachers made their local concerns known to him.

The Garrett County Association of teachers urges parents to become involved in American Education Week, November 15-21. Parent observations of classes can be arranged by contacting your school office the day before you would like to visit. The following is a shortened form of a Parent-Observation guide developed by the teachers of the Bedford Elementary School in Baltimore County. The purpose is to more objectively observe your child/children during American Education Week in order that you may later discuss your observation with him or her. As you observe, try to: put yourself into the child's place within the classroom setting; discover ways to reinforce learning whenever you work with the child; be supportive of any and all success your child meets; and remember that each child moves at his/her own rate of learning. (Remember that your child's behavior may be different because of your presence, although this will be the exception and not the rule).

Quote of the Week: "The good education of youth has been esteemed by wise men in all ages as the surest foundation of the happiness both of private families and of commonwealths." Benjamin Franklin.

Teachers Do It With Class: DeCorsey Bolden, representative to the Maryland House of Delegates, was at Southern High School on Oct. 20 and spoke to Mr. Beard's Civics sections 9-1, 9-2 and 9-3. He was also at Northern High School on October 23 for a presentation to all 9th grade students under the direction of Mr. Settle. Questions for the delegate were prepared by the students ahead of time and he spent approximately two hours at Southern and one hour at Northern High School.

The ninth grade Special Education Civics classes at Southern High School prepared letters which were delivered to Senator Paul Sarbanes when he was in Grantsville last Saturday. The students' concerns centered mainly on the school lunch program, but other topics ranged from the AWACs sale to the construction problems at Bradley Manor.

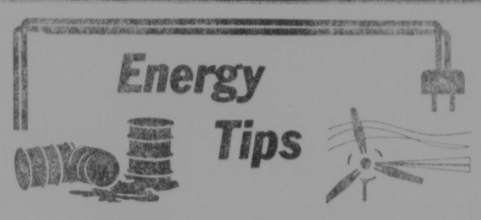
Energy Tips



CREOSOTE FORMATION DANGEROUS

by Patricia Driscoll Extension Agent,
Community Resource Development

This article is the first in a series on energy conservation. Future articles will include information on kerosene heaters, insulation, vapor barriers, and landscape design, in addition to other topics.

With colder weather coming on, many people are using their wood stoves and fireplaces to supply heat for their homes. One problem that many woodburners may face this winter is creosote formation.

Creosote is a chemical by-product of wood. When wood is heated, gas and liquid droplets of tar and water are released as smoke. These gases and droplets are the flame's fuel. The heat generated from the burning gases and liquid account for a large percentage of the wood's total heat output. However, some smoke going up the chimney contains unburned gas and tars. If the chimney's inner surface is cooler than the smoke, some of the unburned gases and tars will condense out of the smoke onto the chimney's surface. This condensed material is creosote.

To reduce creosote formation in a chimney a good rule to follow is to get a hot fire going quickly, and keep it hot for the first 25 minutes. To help you achieve this hot fire, here are some tips:

—Leave the air inlet moderately open until the fire is well established. Then close the inlet to the desired position.

—To check on the internal temperature, keep the temperature of the stovepipe's surface at a point 18" away from the connection to the stove between 200°-400°. An inexpensive oven thermometer can measure this. Simply tie the thermometer to the stovepipe using wire.

—Fill your stove with ⅓ of a load when starting it in the morning. If you fill it with more than ⅓ of a load, not all of the wood will burn efficiently in a short period of time.

—Use a small number of large diameter logs when refilling your stove. This will allow less wood surface exposed to supply the fire's combustible gases. With less combustible gases coming from the wood, more air can be allowed into the stove, resulting in a more complete burning.

—Burn the correct type of wood. Air dried hardwood is the best all-around type of wood.

Good woodburning practices will decrease the amount of creosote build-up in your chimney, but it is still important to clean the chimney. Inspect the chimney regularly, establish a cleaning schedule, and this will also decrease the chance of a chimney fire.

For more information about woodburning, contact the Garrett County Cooperative Extension Service Office, P.O. Box 112, Oakland, Maryland 21550, Telephone: 334-2145; or the Allegany County Cooperative Extension Service Office, 11 Prospect Square, Cumberland, Maryland 21502, Telephone: 724-3320.

Only YOU can prevent flue fires, and only I can help by cleaning your chimney.

Attorney General's Docket

by Stephen H. Sachs
Attorney General of Maryland

When it comes to extending credit, some banks, loan companies and businesses have been extremely reluctant to recognize the advances made by women in the past decade or so. Many refuse to extend credit to women largely on the basis of outdated—and sometimes illegal—discriminatory practices.

Often women consumers just can't win. They may be denied credit simply because they are women, or because of their "marital status."

The Federal Equal Credit Opportunity Act, passed in 1975, prohibits discrimination against women because of their sex, marital status, age, race and national origin, but many women, especially those of child-bearing age or those separated or recently divorced, still find the going tough when they try to establish credit.

Credit-worthiness is determined by estimating a person's ability and willingness to repay a loan, which is what an extention of credit is. Some creditors think a woman of childbearing age won't be able to earn money and pay her bills if she becomes pregnant and has a baby. Sometimes a young married couple applies for a joint credit account and the creditor refuses to consider the wife's income when calculating the couple's annual earning potential, precisely because the new bride might have a baby. This is more than unfortunate—it is illegal. When a woman applies for credit, either with her husband or on her own, a creditor does not have the right to ask her if she intends to have children.

When single women apply for credit, they can obtain it in their own names, without getting someone else to co-sign the application, if they can reasonably prove their credit-worthiness.

If a woman gets married, she has the right to maintain her credit accounts in her own name; creditors don't have the right to ask a newlywed to close her account or re-apply for credit.

A creditor does have the right, however, to change the line of credit or require a recently divorced woman to reapply for a charge account if she had been relying on her ex-husband's income to pay her debts. In addition, if she is relying on child support or alimony payments for part of her income, creditors do have the right to ask questions about her former husband's employment situation and income and must consider alimony and child support payments when determining credit worthiness.

But if the woman's line of credit was established independently, she can maintain it under her own name, her former married name, or a combination of them both, should she untie the wedding knot.

Secretary Of Transportation To Be In Oakland

Newly appointed Maryland Department of Transportation Secretary Lowell K. Bridwell, together with other state transportation officials, will present the department's five-year program of transportation activities planned for the local area during meetings this month and next with top local officials throughout Maryland.

Secretary Bridwell, who assumed his present post November 1, will meet with Garrett County officials at the county commissioners' meeting room this Friday, Nov. 20 at 10 a.m.

"I'm looking forward to meeting with all local officials," said the Secretary, "both to explain our next five-year period and to hear their concerns on transportation issues affecting their areas. I'm also pleased that we will be able to fully explain the department's expectations surrounding the revenue proposals recently announced by the Governor."

Last month Governor Harry Hughes said he will ask the 1982 General Assembly to approve a franchise tax on motor fuels and modify heavy truck taxes, proposals that would result in major revenue increases for transportation programs at the state and local level.

The Maryland Department of Transportation meets annually with all of Maryland's 24 local subdivisions to formally present the Consolidated Transportation Plan before submitting the budget to the Maryland General Assembly for its consideration.

"Local governments work closely with our department throughout the year," said Secretary Bridwell, "however these meetings provide the opportunity for us to receive direct communication with local officials concerning the department's overall planning, programming, and revenue projections."

Craig Wengerd Joins Oakland Insurance Firm

Craig Wengerd of Oakland will join the Oakland Office of Beall, Garner, Screen and Geare, Inc. In making this announcement, J. Glenn Beall, Jr., the firm's president, indicated Wengerd will begin his employment on November 16 and stated, "Craig Wengerd's education and business training gives him an excellent background for the insurance business and we are particularly pleased that he is a native of Garrett County."

Wengerd was formerly branch manager at First Federal Savings and Loan in the Mid-Towns Shopping Center, where he worked since December 1977.

Wengerd graduated in May 1978 from Frostburg State College where he carried a double major in economics and business administration. In subsequent studies at Frostburg, he earned a master of science degree in management.

In addition to his business education and banking experience, Wengerd developed an interest in the insurance industry while employed in neighboring counties by the Combined Insurance Company.

Wengerd resides with his wife Linda and one son, Kane, at High Street in Oakland. He is second vice president of the Oakland Rotary Club, president of R & L (the Rotary Lions venture responsible for development of Broadford Recreation Area) and treasurer of the Garrett County Arts Council. In addition to his civic interests, Wengerd teaches economics and banking at Garrett Community College.

Page Shanklin, vice president of Branch Operations at Beall, Garner, Screen and Geare, said his firm is very pleased that Mr. Wengerd has joined the company, "because his business experience and knowledge of Garrett County will help us continue to provide our clients with the superior service expected of us."

Branch Manager Scott Geare said the Oakland office will greatly benefit from Mr. Wengerd's association with the firm. "We are fortunate to have a man who knows Garrett County as his home and can put his understanding to work on behalf of our clients," said Geare.

Wengerd will assume duties in the Commercial Lines Department at Beall, Garner, Screen and Geare.

SPORTSMEN DONATE — Funds raised from a shooting match last month, sponsored by the Deer Park Sportsman's Club, were donated by that organization recently to two local emergency service organizations. Receiving checks for $145 were the Deer Park Community Volunteer Fire Department and the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad. The shooting event was held on October 17, at the VFW Post No. 10007 Home near Deer Park, under the direction of Glen Collins. In the above photo, left to right, are Ron Savage, assistant chief of the Deer Park VFD; Dave DeWitt, president of the Deer Park Sportsman's Club; and Helen Sanders, member of the Southern Rescue Squad.

HISTORIC SITE? — This building, the District 6 Election House, Sang Run, may possibly be declared an historic site if the current owner, John E. Hinebaugh, can trace the origin of the building. Hinebaugh is seeking information on the exact year of construction, as well as the number of years the building was used for balloting. It is believed that the Election House is the oldest remaining governmental building in the county, but verification must be proven to insure the validity. Shown below is a plaque installed by Hinebaugh in commemoration of the building's past. Persons with information are asked to contact Hinebaugh at 387-4933.

"Care For The Handicapped" Workshop Held

A training workshop entitled "Care for the Handicapped" was held Saturday at Garrett Community College, McHenry campus. The Maryland Society for Crippled Children sponsored the workshop as part of the Home Care Services program in Garrett County.

Home Care Services is a respite care service which maintained a registry of trained caregivers in Garrett County. These adults are available to families who need special sitters and companions for their handicapped family members on a temporary basis.

At the workshop professionals in the health field provided the training which enables persons to become caregivers in the program. Members of the training team included Norma Bolding, Charlotte Griffith, Charity Janssen and Katie Kierstaed. At the close of the workshop applications were provided for those who wished to become caregivers in the program.

The speaker at the workshop was Norma Bolding, registered nurse, Garrett County Health Department, Home Care Services. Ms. Bolding provided specific information about the caregiver program, including requirements, duties and contacts.

Families with physically or mentally handicapped members may obtain the services of a caregiver by contacting Pat Wade at the Maryland Society for Crippled Children and Adults, collect, at 797-4500, or the local Health Department at 334-8111. There is a charge for the service, however some financial assistance is available to families in need.

Consumer Council Offers Advice To Holiday Shoppers

The Consumer Council of Maryland, a 10-member advisory panel to the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, cautions consumers to consider a number of important points when contemplating mail order purchase for the holidays.

"Ordering by mail may be convenient, especially during the holidday season when stores are crowded, but often there is nothing that can be done to recover the consumer's money if the firm is out of business or out-of-state," said Stanley Kaufman, chairman of the council. Before they order goods from a mail order firm, Kaufman urged consumers to take the time to:

- Comparison shop locally for price and quality. Don't forget to include shipping and handling rates when computing costs;
- Read the advertisement carefully. Don't be misled by exaggerated claims;
- Check guarantees. Are cash refunds or merchandise credit available if the article is unsatisfactory? Will the company refund shipping costs?
- Are there extra charges for a guaranteed delivery date? Remember, companies not giving a waiting period have 30 days maximum delivery time unless the customer grants an extension;
- Read the fine print. Some items cannot be mailed to certain areas in the country or to APO or FPO addresses for military personnel;
- Check the last date for ordering to assure delivery in time for the holiday;
- Keep a copy of the advertisement. Be sure your name and address are clearly written on the order;
- Never send cash. Pay by check, money order, credit card or C.O.D.;
- Check the goods immediately after delivery and inform the company of any defect.

With sales totaling over $65 million a year, and over 10,000 mail order houses registered to do business nationally, mail order is big business, the Consumer Council notes.

"Because some firms are good and some are bad, these precautions may prevent hours of frustration and a disappointing holiday," Kaufman said.

AURORA-EGLON NEWS

The Eglon Homemakers' Club met November 12 at the Eglon Memorial Building. A business session opened the meeting with the president, Linda Lewis, presiding. Nina Layman reported on Achievement Day which was held October 22, at Evansville.

Business included a report from the County Council meeting held November 10, at Kingwood. The first item of discussion was the anti-litter campaign which will be kicked off in May and is the responsibility of the Homemakers in each area in which there is a club.

The Area Meeting will be held May 20, in Whetzel County, to which a bus will be taken. The group also voted to have the Achievement Program in the daytime hours.

Plans were made for the December meeting which will be a family covered dish meal for all of the family at the Memorial Building at 7 p.m., on December 1. There will be a gift exchange and each child should bring a gift for a child, a lady for a lady and a man for a man, with a limit of $2-$3. Mrs. Ardis Teets and Mrs. Rebecca Teets will be in charge of the devotions with Mrs. Avenell Parsons and Mrs. Jean Winters planning the recreation.

A consumer shopper hint was offered by Mrs. LaDeana Teets.

Show and Tell time was held as each member who had brought a craft or gift displayed it and told how it was made. Early adjournment for the salad luncheon with dessert and beverage supplied by the November hostess, LaDeana Teets, provided a chance for an early return to "work." This consisted of demonstrations of several items.

Mrs. Wilma Knapp showed her cloth bouquet and assembled two of the flowers, showing how they are cut, glued and wired. Mrs. Linda Lewis showed her rope wreaths and each who wished made one of these which may also be used as tree decorations. Mrs. Marguerite Shaffer had prepared papers to be woven into small hearts which can also be used as baskets on a tree. Mrs. Leland Teets brought her wheat weaving supplies and made a couple of the ornaments from them.

During the morning's display there were crocheted items, socks, candles, Santa Claus, pencil and pad holder, bead ornaments, quilled ornaments, corn husk dolls and flowers, Teneriffe embroidery, a ball which has shapes which a child can hold, foam decorations for Thanksgiving and Christmas, a picture made from a Christmas card, one from jewelry, some from cardboard covered and decorated, one from material which had been stuffed and decorated and stuffed cloth ornaments.

Following this recreational time, everyone gathered while Ardis Teets led devotions with a Thanksgiving theme and Rebecca Teets then presented the lesson, Picking a Winner in a Nursing Home. One of the guests, who has been employed for years in a nursing home, also offered some suggestions about visiting.

With this lesson completed, the meeting adjourned. Attending for the day or afternoon were: Linda Lewis, Lorraine Fike, Mary Rembold and Shawn, Barbara Heckert, Marguerite Shaffer, LaDeana Teets, Nina Layman, Lela Roth, Carolyn Wilt, Mildred Wilt, Jean Winters, Ardis Teets, Rebecca Teets and guests Cynthia Bachtel, Ruth Parks and Wilma Knapp.

In lieu of their regular meeting, the Eglon Mountaineer 4-H Club met Wednesday evening, November 11, at the Maple Spring Church for a Recognition Dinner to which members and their families and special guests as well as any interested persons in the community were invited.

Following the covered dish dinner, each member displayed and explained the awards he or she had received. Welcome and the 4-H pledge were led by John Lipscomb, president. Arlene Roth read a club history and perfect and faithful attendance certificates were awarded: perfect attendance—Andrea Delaney, Julie Lewis, Gary and Guy Wayne Shaffer, Arlene and Danny Roth; faithful attendance—Willie and Jackie Lantz, Julie Beckman, and Brent Hauser.

Special guests to be recognized did not attend, but parents who had assisted with the club were Bill and Frances Lantz, Jerry and Barbara Hauser, and Edward and Joann Lipscomb, and were recognized by Terry Hauser. The evening concluded with a slide presentation by Arlene Roth of the West Virginia 4-H Exchange trip to Connecticut.

The club recognized outgoing members Sheila Delaney and Faith Minnig, and Teen Leader, Arlene Roth. Under Arlene's leadership, a Camera Club was held during the spring and summer months, giving instruction to Roxanne and Connie Evans, Nathan Teets, Audrea Delaney, Julie and Linda Lewis, and John Lipscomb. During the year the club also toured George Roth's workshop at Horse Shoe Run, collected for the American Cancer Society, collected trash along Rt. 24, attended county functions, made tray favors for the Courtland Acres Nursing Home, and individual members exhibited projects at the Buckwheat Festival, participated in the W.V. 4-H Dairy Show and Sale at Jackson's Mill, and were members of the Preston County Dairy Judging team.

Aurora Pioneer 4-H Club members were guests in the Wicky Myers home for their November 9 meeting. Wicky, the president, presided.

Cara Sisler, Laura Goff, Gary Conrad and Greg Arnold presented the devotions.

Report from the officers' training school and Achievement Day was given with winners being congratulated. The blue ribbon awarded the club was displayed. Winners were urged to fill out National Report forms.

There is still vanilla for sale and members were asked to take some with them or it may be obtained by contacting Opal Myers.

Boxes will be prepared for the shut-ins of the community on December 14. That evening will also be the regular meeting and names were drawn for exchange of gifts to be in the $2.00 to $2.50 range.

Project ribbons were handed out. The club has decided to collect aluminum cans for recycling. These are marked as to being "all aluminum" or "recyclable." Persons may take these to the home of Mrs. Opal Myers.

The Spirit of 4-H was the theme for the program by Lisa Sisler and Darla Stemple. Mrs. Opal Myers conducted a quiz concerning 4-H. The meeting concluded with recreation, led by Laura Vandevender, and refreshments served by Cara and Shauna Sisler. The next meeting will be December 14, at 7 p.m., with Gary and David Conrad the hosts at the home of Bill and Ressie Conrad. Darlene Arnett and Lisa Sisler will have the devotions. Following the meeting, officers and leaders met to plan programs and activities for the remainder of the year.

Mrs. McDonald said the kitchen will probably be open through the week into the evenings, however no food will be served on the nights when entertainment is featured there. The couple has obtained a variety of entertainment, including country/western, old time rock and roll, and rhythm and blues. The structure, which also boasts a dance floor, was designed by the couple and built by McDonald (formerly a builder) and Stonewall Construction Company. Pictured in the background is an example of the artwork decorating the establishment, painted by Mrs. McDonald, a long-time artist. The couple came to Garrett County from Baltimore five years ago, and now reside in Pleasant Valley. The new establishment is located on Route 219.

"Dungeons And Dragons"

Medieval Fantasy Captures Local Student Imagination

by Jeff Cooley
Southern High School

Paladins, magic-users, clerics, and bards . . . keybolds, bugbears, goblins and trolls. Sound familiar? Chances are they do if you attend a Garrett County high school or engage in fantasy games as a hobby.

Students at Southern and Northern High Schools, as well as Garrett Community College, are enjoying a new adventure in gaming. Trashing their chess sets and other conventional board games, donning their armor, people of all ages and vocations are spending sleepless weekends playing the newest fad to Garrett County — Dungeons and Dragons.

Who is responsible for this craze? Who's making a mint in profits? Gary Gygax is the answer, and we dungeon masters and player characters are certainly glad of it. Glad enough, in fact, to start group after group of dragon-slayers and dungeon referees, playing all night Friday and all day Saturday, non stop.

The game, based on J.R.R. Tolkein's fantasy adventures, "The Hobbit" and "The Lord of the Rings," is strictly incredible in nature, yet real in the excitement and experience of combat against such terrors as the Demo-Gorgon, prince of demons, or the Chromatic Dragon, a giant five-headed, acid-spewing she-lizard. Fantastic realism to the utmost is the name of the game.

Played with two or more persons, and ideal for five, one player acts as dungeon master and the rest as player characters. The dungeon master designs the adventure, stocks it with monsters, magic and mischief, and then acts as referee throughout the whole affair. The player characters allow the aforementioned power-hungry psycho to lead them through the dungeon, ocean, forest, castle or wherever he has chosen to stage the adventure.

Unfortunately for you, the reader, I've chosen to be a dungeon master, so I cannot and will not divulge any more information. But it's easy to find out more by simply joining a D & D group (they're everywhere), or buy a set of instruction books and begin one of your own.

Challenge the Rakshasa you've always wanted to slay . . . out there in the realm of your imagination. Out in the realm of Dungeons and Dragons. We're waiting for you.

It's YOUR Money
By Randle A. Rodeheaver

ARE YOU AN IMPULSE SPENDER?

Do you go into a food store to get, say, a loaf of bread and a pound of butter—and come out with $8-10 worth of assorted foodstuffs? Or to a department store to buy two or three pairs of socks—and wind up with two or three shirts to match?

Impulse spenders generally buy things they don't need, frequently at the expense of things they do need, and of their budgets or spending plans. One survey showed that 75% of the women patronizing supermarkets bought one or more items on impulse; 50%, up to one-third of their items. Another survey revealed that more than 30% of all supermarket food purchases were unplanned or made on impulse.

It's hard to believe, but large appliances, cars, or even houses, may be bought on impulse—because someone fell in love with a gadget on the appliance, the color of the car, or a "darling" kitchen in the house. As a result, the purchaser often winds up with something he can't afford or can't use.

If you're an impulse spender, try these suggestions:

1. Market once a week, if possible. Make a shopping list and stick to it. Don't buy something simply because it's a bargain. If you don't need it, it's expensive at any price. That goes for bargains on quantity purchases. Shop alone. Studies show that having your husband or children along—and their impulses—can add a few dollars to the food bill.

2. When buying clothing or furniture, resist the pressure to buy something additional that's "just made" to go with your original purchase.

3. Don't be hurried into buying a major item that caught your eye because it's the "last one" or "the price goes up tomorrow."

Ag Forum Panel Presents "Grassroots" Challenges

Three prominent farmers and a University of Maryland research farm supervisor presented their own lists of "Challenges and Opportunities" during the statewide Agricultural Leaders Forum held Nov. 4 on the College Park campus.

The "grassroots" afternoon panel discussion followed a morning program of challenges and opportunities presented by six university of Maryland agricultural representatives and a food trade association official. Panel moderator was Dr. Larry E. Stewart, agricultural engineering department chairman in the College of Agriculture.

Farmer members on the panel were Donald E. Lippy of Hampstead, a Carroll county grain producer and former vice-president of the Maryland Grain Producers Association; W. Simpson Dunahoo of Hebron, a Wicomico county broiler grower and former president of the Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc.; Leon B. Enfield of Knoxville, a Frederick county dairy farmer and president of the Maryland Farm Bureau. Lippy and Enfield are also members of the Maryland Agricultural Commission.

The fourth panel member was Dr. Franklin D. Schales of Salisbury, coordinator-supervisor for the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station's vegetable research farm on the lower Eastern Shore. An associate professor of horticulture, Dr. Schales is also executive vice-president of the Mid-Atlantic Food Processors Association and executive secretary of the National Agricultural plastics Association.

Field Crops

Lippy's list of problems facing Maryland farmers included triazine-resistant weeds, common cornstalk borer, European corn borer, pesticide container disposal, and constantly rising prices for land rent and farm chemicals.

He declared there is a need for granular herbicides which can become active without a post-application rainfall requirement. His "needs" list also included a method for planting row crops without disturbing the soil.

Agriculture should have better public relations, Lippy said, and a system of land-use planning that will maintain enough farmland to maintain a viable agricultural economy. Central Maryland has special problems in this area, he pointed out.

Regarding new opportunities available for farmers, Lippy cited recent research work by the University of Maryland which combined fungicide and nitrogen applications to produce wheat yields of more than 100 bushels per acre. This development might make wheat worth growing in Maryland, he commented.

Lippy also made reference to microcomputers and the management opportunities they present for U.S. farmers to help feed the world, rather than having food used as a weapon to control the world.

Poultry

Dunahoo noted that Maryland accounts for 59 percent of the broilers produced in the three-state Delmarva area. And he reported that 4,000 individuals and organizations are currently members of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., a trade association based at Georgetown, Del.

The biggest challenge to the broiler industry recently has been just to stay in business, the former DPI president noted wryly. His list of challenges included better rail and truck transportation in the Delmarva area, lower interest rates, and unfair subsidies to farmers in most nations of the European Economic Community which make U.S. exports to that area of the world virtually impossible.

The animal rights movement now gaining momentum in the United States also deals with confinement production of poultry and eggs, Dunahoo declared, and farmers need to be concerned about misleading charges being leveled against them.

Dairy & Livestock

Enfield agreed with Lippy that land use and preservation is a major problem facing Maryland farmers. On the animal rights issue, he declared that modern confinement systems for livestock and poultry are generally much more sanitary than old-fashioned open systems.

He questioned whether better distribution might not solve some of the transportation problems of U.S. agriculture. He cited Midwest butter being shipped to Maryland when the same manufacturer already has a major plant in this state.

Without better marketing channels, farmers can easily over-produce themselves into low prices, Enfield declared. "You can't tell cows to produce less milk."

Loss of local slaughterhouses has hurt the Maryland livestock industry, the Farm Bureau leader commented. "We're losing consumption in the beef area. Livestock and other commodity groups need vigorous check-off programs like we already have in the dairy industry. Let's put more milk in vending machines and increase consumption."

Horticulture Crops

Complacency is a big danger for commercial producers ot horticultural crops, warned Dr. Schales. It can allow energy costs to wipe out profits, effective chemicals to be lost due to registration cancellation, and labor regulations by government agencies to get out of hand.

Processors, growers and agricultural research workers need to work together for extended pack seasons, increased product recovery, better yields and improved varieties. Similar cooperation can help to fine-tune grower production techniques in such areas as mineral nutrition, seeding techniques, planting density, growth regulators and reduced or no-tillage.

These goals can best be achieved through continuation of strong programs in reserch, teaching and extension at land-grant institutions like the University of Maryland, Dr. Schales concluded.

The most consumed food in the U.S. is fluid milk and cream.

Farming in Maryland

Soil Erosion Continues To Be Dominant Problem For Farmers

After four decades of soil conservation programs, erosion is still the dominant problem on more than half of the nation's cropland, says a National Resources Inventory report.

Dr. Fred Miller, agronomist at the University of Maryland, says that "agriculture" will have to expend an additional 50 million barrels of oil a year to compensate for production losses because of erosion. According to Miller, the U.S. Department of Agriculture admits that conservation efforts have accomplished less than a quarter of what is required to bring the erosion problem with tolerable limits on U.S. cropland.

Nearly one fourth of the nation's cropland has an annual erosion rate over 5 tons per acre. According to Miller, the average annual soil loss in Maryland is seven to eight tons per acre.

"The process is so subtle in many cases, the farmer doesn't even realize it," Miller says. He cites, for example, that an acre inch of topsoil weighs about 150 tons. If 10 tons per acre is lost each year, it will take 15 years to lose one inch. He adds that when rills or tiny gulleys become noticeable, it is an indication that 15-20 tons per acre are being lost.

Miller points out the importance of ground cover to insulate the soil from the impact of the raindrop.

"The critical item in mulch erosion is the cover—to intercept the energy in all that rainfall." No-tillage methods maintain the cover and can be as productive as conventional farming with most soils he says.

Many farmers have adopted no-till practices not only to conserve soil but also to economize because equal to or better yields can result with less time spent in the field. Miller says that no-tillage corn has been "extremely effective" and that about half of the corn in the state is planted by no-till, but warns that of the remaining half, much is being planted on highly erodable land. "For every inch of topsoil lost, we lose about three bushels per acre—based on corn," he adds.

Studies have found that corn yield losses from erosion range from more than one bushel to nearly nine bushels per acre for each inch of topsoil lost. According to Miller, the USDA expects corn and soybean yields to drop as much as 30 percent over the next 50 years on some soils if current erosion rates continue.

Herbert Brodie, Extension Agricultural Engineer, asks, "Is the operation of machinery so complicated that tillage tools can not be lifted across a grassed waterway without destroying it?"

When fields are disced, grass waterways which carry upland runoff are often eliminated, apparently to save time and management effort. After a rain, although the grass is gone, it becomes obvious that the waterways are still there. With more rain, the waterways grow into gulleys and as crops are planted, the gulleys become noticeable because nothing grows there.

During the spring, when rainfall is plentiful, it is easy to see what these gulleys do to fields, although crops can sometimes hide the evidence. Although the growing season has ended, the problems are not over; be assured the gulleys still exist, and additional maintenance will be needed from crossing the gulley on every field pass.

Brodie cites a case where a gulley caused 1,000 tons of soil (about $14,000 worth) to be moved from a field in less than six months. "Obviously, this farmer doesn't put much value on his soil," he says.

Grass can help in other ways as well. Buffer strips around the edge of the field to prevent soil loss will eventually outweigh the value of corn which could be planted in those end rows, Brodie says.

According to Dr. Miller, domestic and foreign demand for grains is increasing. These crops often require land disturbance and cultivation, thereby exposing the land to the ravages of erosion. At the rates exports are increasing, "the danger of over-working the land is becoming imminent."

He explains that as demand boosts prices, "knee-jerk" tions in the market by farmers to get top profits can totally destroy conservation measures. For example: straight row cultivation of tilled crops on hilly land, which is faster and easier than following the contour of the hillside, can result in erosion that may be many fold greater.

Erosion losses from deep soils, which can stand large amounts of erosion for many years, may not show a direct loss in crop yields today, but if continued will eventually reach a threshold of yield reductions, Miller says.

Measures to curb erosion involve financial burdens on farmers and taxpayers. Although some farmers believe in long-term agreements between the government and landowners, designed for conserving and insuring land investment, quick and easy production practices still mean the greatest short-term profits, Miller says. He is not surprised that farmers do not invest in erosion control since the costs are immediate while the benefits are spread over many decades.

"If a farmer is in a cost-price squeeze, he needs to cut corners, and an erosion plan with small immediate benefit may often be one of those things that is cut.

However, the government is providing some cost-sharing to farmers and many conservation practices are being subsidized.

Miller stresses the need for the professional conservationist to work directly with the farmer to plan control practices and points out that, while the farmer does not have access to special kinds of equipment, technical assistance is available.

Along with designing programs for cost-sharing and developing technologies which protect the land while increasing yield, conservation remains a voluntary option on the part of the landowner, Miller says. While the payoff of conservation investments is long-term, "the farmer is in a short-term economic ball game."

"The Book That Would Not Burn"

"Destroy the Christians and Their Book!"

Ranivo, a teenager in a Madagascar village, sees her people's lives transformed as they read the missionaries' Bibles. Hundreds of people become Christians.

The queen, however, is suspicious of this new faith and orders the burning of all Bibles. Then she forbids Christians from meeting together. Finally, those who refuse to renounce their faith are tortured and killed. Bibles are hidden in caves and brought out secretly for prayer and study. Ranivo, though fearing persecution, wants the same peace of heart shared by her Christian friends. When her turn comes to die, God intervenes—to allow this true story to be told to succeeding generations.

This powerful missions emphasis film shows the importance of memorized Scripture and faithfulness despite persecution.

Preservation Of Farmland Stressed By Dr. Oliver

U.S. agriculture and American society in general need to join forces to preserve farmland and protect the environment for future generations, says Dr. Craig S. Oliver, director of the Cooperative Extension Service at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Oliver spoke during the annual statewide Agricultural Leaders Forum held November 4 on the College Park campus. This year's forum topic was "Challenges for Tomorrow's Agriculture."

One of the most dramatic challenges facing Maryland agriculture in the 1980s, he observed, will be the increasing competition for land at the rural-urban fringe.

"As our metropolitan centers of Washington, D.C., and Baltimore expand, they take up land that was devoted to agriculture for hundreds of years. In some instances, farmland is converted to housing and shopping centers because it is less expensive than existing urban land.

"Urban development moves out into the rural area because of the charm of the rural setting. But as additional housing is built, the vicinity is transformed from a rural to an urban setting. Certain activities associated with farming, such as odors and flies, then result in zoning and other problems for farmers who live in this rural-urban fringe."

Conversely, a problem which society often imposes on agriculture is the disposal of urban wastes, Dr. Oliver pointed out. The safe utilization of sewage sludge and other urban wastes by farmers can play a major role in solving that problem.

Shrinking ground-water reserves in the United States also constitute a problem which both farmers and society must face squarely during the next decade, the Maryland Extension director declared. He cited restrictive laws already passed in Arizona on this acccount which would virtually wipe out the state's farming industry by the year 2005.

In conclusion, Dr. Oliver emphasized his belief that American agriculture is resilient, strong and able to prosper in the future.

"But that prosperity will depend upon effective, concerted efforts to overcome obstacles. It means that agribusiness leaders and land-grant institutions like the University of Maryland must work together.

"We intend to develop our programs in teaching, research and extension to respond to the challenges that we foresee."

Reserve For '81 Feed Crops Is Opened By ASCS

Prospects for record-level feed grain crops this fall have prompted the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to open the new grain reserve for 1981 crops of corn, sorghum, and barley.

"By opening this reserve, we hope to relieve the pressure on the already depressed market prices, and offer farmers another option as they begin to make their marketing decision," ASCS State Committee chairperson, William B. Crum, said.

Farmers who place their 1981 feed grain crops under a federal price support loan may enter the grain immediately into the reserve. Those who have 1980 corn, sorghum, and barley currently under loan also may enter their grain into the reserve. "However, 1980 corn and sorghum previously entered in a reserve are not eligible for reentry in the new reserve," Crum said, "and neither year's crop of oats may be placed in the reserve at this time."

He said that earlier crop barley now in other farmer-held reserves may be transferred into the new reserve.

Loan rates for Maryland's 1981 feed grain crops are $2.61 per bushel for corn, $4.11 per hundredweight for sorghum, and $1.93 per bushel for barley. According to Crum, special reserve premiums of $0.15 per bushel for corn, $0.12 per bushel for barley, and $0.25 per hundredweight for sorghum are offered to reserve participants.

Farmers who use the reserve for their 1981 feed grains will receive annual storage payments of 26-½ cents per bushel, payable in advance. "While interest will be charged on the loan during the first year that the feed grain is in the reserve, interest will be waived during the second and subsequent years," the ASCS official said.

The reserve program is designed to remove grain from the market for three years, or until prices reach stated levels. It offers farmers short and long term benefits to counter the price depressing effects of surplus stocks.

Survey Slated By Reporting Service

The Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service will conduct a survey in late November and early December to develop current estimates of planted wheat and rye acreage, number of hogs and farrowing plans and cattle inventory.

The estimates will be based on survey results from mail questionnaires returned by producers and telephone and personal interviews with farmers. A substantial survey response improves the reliability of the data, the Service said. The estimates form the basis for decisions by farmers in making production, storage and marketing plans.

Reports on hogs and wheat will be released on December 22 and cattle inventory will be issued in late January 1982. Survey results are available by calling Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service Office at (301) 334-2795.

Mid-Atlantic Conference Set At Timonuim

"Crop Rotation with No-Till" will be the topic of discussion during the eighth annual No-Till Conference to be conducted at the Maryland State Fair Grounds at Timonium on Thursday, January 7, 1982.

The program will cover the topics of: "Nitrogen Sources and Application Techniques," "A Year-Round Approach to Weed Control," "Conserving Our Most Valuable Resource," "Crop Rotation with No-Till" and a discussion on the "Types of Crops which Can Be Drilled with No-Tillage Planters."

The theme of "Crop Rotation with No-Till" was selected, according to a spokesman from the Garrett County Extension Office, because experience has shown a need to move away from the traditional continuous culture of corn. Rotating crops have always been effective in breaking up cycles of disease, insects, weeds, etc. With the advent of no-till drills, rotation is now possible without interupting the no-tillage concept. Energy is also saved, not just in fuel, but by utilizing nitrogen produced by one crop for the next crop, the spokesman said.

Programs have been printed and meal tickets are available at the Garrett County Extension Office until December 30. For more information persons may call the Extension Office at 334-2145.

Favorable Weather Advances Harvest

Farmers in Maryland and Delaware took full advantage of the favorable harvest weather last week to make a substantial dent in the amount of crops ieft for harvest. In Maryland, the six days suitable for field work during the week ended November 15, allowed farmers to put the finishing touch on corn harvest, now about 98 percent completed, according to the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service. Major headway was made, however, with soybean harvest, now about 75 percent completed, finally on par with 1980 activity.

Small grain seedings continue to near completion as farmers squeeze planting in with harvesting. Wheat acreage was about 95 percent planted in Maryland. Planting is slightly ahead of the previous year. Some rye fields are still unplanted, but only a very few.

The soil moisture situation remained stable last week. Topsoil supplies were still considered adequate in most areas across Maryland and Delaware. Subsoil supplies remained short across southern Maryland and the southern portions of the eastern shore and Delaware.

TURKEY

Turkey is a traditional favorite for Thanksgiving, so it is especially good news that this year there is an abundant supply of turkey on the market. This will help make Thanksgiving a more economical meal. The following tips will help you in preparing this year's turkey:

*If you are not in a hurry, thaw the turkey on a tray in the refrigerator for 3 to 4 days.

*If you are in more of a hurry, place the turkey in cold water, which is changed periodically to keep the water cold. Allow one half hour thawing time per pound of turkey.

Do not thaw turkey at room temperature—this is the condition in which harmful bacteria flourish.

*If you plan to stuff the turkey, do so just before roasting to avoid too much of a temperature variation. Turkeys roast faster when not stuffed, so it is now recommended that turkeys be roasted unstuffed. Unstuffed turkeys are considered safer because a more even temperature can be maintained throughout the turkey.

*Fasten legs down by tying or tucking under skin band, skewer neck skin to back and twist wings under bird.

*Place turkey on rack in shallow roasting pan, breast side up. Brush with butter, if desired, and if roast meat thermometer is used, insert into the thick part of the thigh.

*Read the label instructions for appropriate roasting time—it may vary.

*You will know the turkey is done when:
the roast meat thermometer registers 180-185°F, when the thick part of the drumstick feels soft when pressed with thumb and forefinger, and when the drumstick and thigh move easily.

*After you have eaten your Thanksgiving dinner, refrigerate leftover turkey as soon as possible to keep it safe. (Bacteria grows quickly at room temperature on poultry, so either keep it hot or cold).

Now, an idea for some of the leftover turkey:

TURKEY CHOWDER
1 large onion, thinly sliced
2 stalks celery, sliced
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 qts. turkey broth*
2 potatoes, pared and cubed
2 carrots, pared and cut in rings or strips
2 zucchini, cut in strips
1 10-ounce package frozen whole kernel corn
1 cup Sauterne or Chablis wine
2 cups turkey pieces
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Saute onion and celery in butter or margarine just until tender-crisp in a large kettle; remove from heat. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Gradually stir in turkey broth. Heat, stirring, until mixture comes to a boil. Add potatoes and carrots. Cover and simmer 15 minutes, just until vegetables are barely tender. Add zucchini, corn, wine and turkey. Continue simmering 15 minutes. Add parsley. Makes 8 servings.

*To make turkey broth: break up turkey carcass to fit into a large saucepan. Add 1 quart cold water, 1 sliced onion and handful of celery tops. Cover and simmer 1 hour. Strain broth. Add enough water (or canned chicken broth) to make 8 cups.
